STORY OF KIDNAPPING

Tired Hostages Home

By FRANK FARRARA

Novato's four kidnap victims, tired and emotionally shaken, arrived home yesterday from a harrowing experience to face a press conference, eager for details of their adventure.

Mrs. Joyce Stansfield, who had laryngitis, could only whisper, and Mrs. Harold Smith spoke only briefly before she burst into tears under the press of questions.

In contrast the Stansfield children sat quietly in the flood of television lights and a barrage of questions from newsmen cramped into the small council chambers.

Sgt. Lyn T. Stoutt announced at the outset that details of the crime couldn't be discussed because the case was still under investigation.

During the interview, this censorship covered the exact nature of threats made, where they obtained gasoline when the supply ran low and what motivated their abductor, James D. Harvey to escape from San Quentin.

Harvey, 24, was captured yesterday after a bullet-marked high speed chase in Fullerton. The convict drove into a shopping center parking lot, smashed into a parked car and fled on foot into a laundry. There, he was tackled by the owner.

Mrs. Stansfield reached Novato before 5 p.m., carrying her 4-month-old daughter, Susanne, and accompanied by their 6-year-old son, Robert.

Stansfield spoke for his wife after explaining that she had laryngitis as a result of the emotional experience and talking through the night to their kidnapper.

Stansfield said threats were made against the two women but he couldn't give the details, because of the information ban.

He said due to the efforts of his wife and Mrs. Smith the lives of all were saved. Mrs. Stansfield was driving the car with Harvey seated behind her, he explained.

Harvey learned about 4 a.m. by car radio that he had abducted the family of a police officer, and his reaction was surprise, Stansfield said. At that point he told the two women he was "pretty hot."

Asked if there were ever a time she thought Harvey, who was armed with a pair of scissors, would kill someone, Mrs. Stansfield nodded affirmatively.

During the long ride, they made two stops in an attempt to get gasoline for the car, once in Tulare County where Harvey tried to siphon gasoline and was chased away by the car owner.

Several police cars, apparently California Highway Patrol vehicles, passed them along the highway, but the women fearing for the safety of the children made no attempt to attract them.

Mrs. Stansfield, who was dropped off in Bakersfield, couldn't explain why Harvey let her and her two children go.

Asked what his son said when reunited with his father, Stansfield replied, "He asked my why I didn't get the bad guy."

About a half-hour later, Mrs. Smith arrived and said she felt there had been real danger "if anything was done out of hand."

During the ride "there was a lot of guessing" by everyone, "about who was going to do what" and the two women "tried to reach a certain degree of rapport" with Harvey, she said.

"A few times I was shaking from limb to limb," Mrs. Smith said.

Asked if Harvey had told them why he had escaped from prison, Mrs. Smith started to answer and then stopped apparently approaching a taboo topic.

When California Highway Patrol cars approached she hoped they wouldn'g do anything, she said. "I thought it was bad enough that it didn't warrant any further stress.

She thhough: Harvey let Mrs. Stansfield and the children out because the Stansfield baby had a cough, but she couldn't explain why

Post For Sweeping Reforms

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post today recommended "major reforms" in welfare, MediCal and school financing coupled with a net $183 million increase in Gov. Ronald Reagan's $6.73 billion austerity budget proposal.

The Legislature's chief fiscal expert, in his annual report to lawmakers, also suggested that government provide free birth control services for welfare mothers.

—$116.2 million in salary increases for state employes and university and college faculty. Reagan had recommended none.

—Leaving $72 million in the teachers' retirement fund that the governor had proposed removing to balance his budget.

—$26.1 million in construction projects and purchase of new equipment at the state colleges. Reagan had provided little money for this.

—A $70 student fee increase at state colleges to bring in $15.6 million. Post said this corresponds "in principle" to a fee recently assessed University of California students.

—A "preliminary" proposal to reduce state welfare spending by $17.1 million, and Medi-Cal by $452,000.

—$30 million in new state aid for elementary and secondary schools.

In all, Post recommended $222.4 million in increases and $39.3 million in reductions in the spending program for fiscal 1971-72 that Reagan submitted to the Legislature three weeks ago.

Post's recommendations are strictly advisory, but over the long haul they are more often accepted by the Legislature than rejected.

Post, who has been analyzing governors' budgets for a quarter of a century, was somewhat critical of Reagan for submitting a spending program "lacking pertinent program information and basic statistical detail."

Because of this, the nonpartisan fiscal watchdog said, "we have been unable to provide the Legislature with a meaningful analysis of certain portions" of the budget — particularly in Medi-Cal, welfare and education.

Post said he found "many areas in which state cost reductions can be justified."

But he warned that "conversely, there are areas in which ... good public policy justifies increases or smaller reductions than those proposed in the (Reagan) budget."

He said these state augmentations were necessary to "avoid shifts in cost to local government, which thereby would have the effect of increasing property taxes."

Calley's Story Of Close-Range Shots

My Lai Incident Told In A Trembling Voice

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI) — His voice trembling, Lt. William L. Calley Jr. told today how he shot into a group of civilians at My Lai with the muzzle of his rifle only five feet from the victims.

Calley said he fired six to eight shots into a group of villagers in a ditch, holding his M16 with one hand. When he left them "they were apparently all dead—lying still."

The 27-year-old former platoon commander testified in a sometimes-faltering voice, but otherwise was composed and articulate.

He is accused of the premeditated murder of 102 South Vietnamese on March 16, 1968, the day he led his platoon on an infantry sweep through My Lai.

Calley said at one point a helicopter pilot landed and asked him if he could evacuate some people from the area. Calley said he replied "the only means that I have to get the people out was hand grenades—that I had no helicopters."

This was similar to the prosecution testimony of Hugh Thompson, a warrant officer helicopter pilot during the My Lai sweep. He said when he spoke to an officer on the ground that day about getting people out of a bunker, the officer said: "The only way to get them out is with a hand grenade."

Calley's testimony on this 32nd trial day came after an unexplained hour and a half delay in getting the trial started. During this period the judge, Col. Reid W. Kennedy, conferred separately with each of the six officer-jurors. Kennedy made no mention of the conferences or the delay when court convened.

Calley said that when he fired into the people in the ditch, he was standing about three feet from them, but he told the prosecutor, Capt. Aubrey, M. Daniel III, he could not say whether he hit them. He said he had no idea how many were in the ditch but it was not a large group.

At lunch that day, Calley said, he talked with the company commander, Capt. Ernest L. Medina, but did not tell him "the circumstances" of rounding up villagers and shooting them.

"No, sir, why should I?" he said to Daniel. "He knew what circumstances. He told me to shoot them, sir."

"When?" Daniel asked.

"The day before and that day," Calley replied.

Calley had testified previous-

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist troops staged a rocket attack tonight on Quang Tri, the major staging and supply base for the South Vietnamese strike into Laos. The U.S. Command also reported the loss of three more American helicopters in Laos and the deaths of 11 crewmen, heaviest one-day toll of the Laotian operation.

The South Vietnamese incursion into Laos to cut the Ho Chi Minh supply trails remained stalled 16 to 17 miles inside the border and front dispatches reported heavy rocket attacks had resumed on an isolated ARVN paratroop unit 15 miles inside Laos.

The U.S. Command so far has reported the loss of 29 helicopters with 40 Americans killed, 26 wounded and 15 missing since the incursion into Laos began Feb. 8. Correspondents in forward posts put the helicopter loss at 72 or more over Laos and South Vietnam. The South Vietnamese admit losing four more.

Officially, despite heavy losses, the South Vietnamese incursion has been described as a "success" since it disrupted Communist supply lines. Today, the U.S. Command said American air strikes had killed more than 500 North Vietnamese and destroyed 800 tons of ammunition plus vast quantities of other supplies.

UPI correspondent Joseph Galloway reported from Quang Tri, the big base near the northern coast of South Vietnam, that the Communists fired between 15 and 20 of their big 122 millimeter Soviet-made rockets shortly after 9 p.m. but apparently did little damage.

The rockets missed the ammunition dump at Quang Tri and a five-truck gasoline tanker convoy passing through the area. The convoys move along Highway 9 from Quang Tri into Laos, paralleling the DMZ. Many of the convoys have been ambushed in recent days.

Military sources said one air strike Feb. 14 destroyed 300 tons of munitions and it was the most destroyed in a single location in one day by any U.S. aircraft in the Indochina war.

Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam, commander of South Vietnamese troops in Laos described the destruction of four fuel pipelines running parallel to the Ho Chi Minh Trail system as the most important accomplishment of the Laotian operation to date.

Eight crewmen were killed Tuesday when two U.S. Army UH1 Huey helicopters collided in flight over the Laotian Lower Panhandle.

Board Kills Police Services Proposal After 4-Year Fight

By WAT TAKESHITA

The cities of Marin County last night lost their long and bitter struggle to force residents in unincorporated areas to pay a bigger share of the sheriff's patrol costs. (For reaction in San Anselmo see story, page 6.)

By a 4 to 1 vote, the board of supervisors killed proposed formation of a police services district in the county's unincorporated area. The district had been pushed by the cities for the past four years as a means of equalizing the police cost burdens. (Other supervisors stories, page 10.)

City representatives have contended they are paying twice for police services — once in city tax to finance their police departments and again in a county tax for the sheriff's patrols.

This is how a police services district would have operated: The cities would continue to help pay for the existing level of police services in unincorporated ares. But if any community wanted "extended service" beyond the present patrols — the cost of which is now shared by cities — it would have to create a zone and tax itself for the added patrol.

Yesterday, Supervisor Michael Wornum stoutly defended the cities' position and cast the lone vote to proceed with the services district. Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste also favored the concept but voted "no" because the proposal was not specific enough, especially in the definition of "existing level of police services."

Almost every homeowner group in the county's unincorporated region solidly opposed the proposed district.

Merritt A. Robinson of Sleepy Hollow, spokesman for the organization, argued that the cities with unincorporated areas should share lucrative sales tax revenue if cities want to shed some of the tax burden of sheriff's patrols. He said county residents make most of their purchases in cities but get nothing in return in the way of sales or cigarette taxes.

Frank Solomon Jr., a director of the Marinwood Community Services District, declared that formation of a police services district, and possibly smaller tax zones for beefed-up enforcement, would fragment rather than consolidate police services. "Instead of 12 police departments we will have 30 police departments," he said.

Furthermore, said Solomon, once the county service district was formed, the unincorporated areas would have no way of protecting themselves against increased taxes in the name of "added police services beyond the existing level of services."

The most telling blow against the cities came when the supervisors began quizzing Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos on how sheriff's patrols would operate under a new police services district.

Sonoma To Vote On ABAG Issue

SANTA ROSA — The Sonoma County Board of Supervisors yesterday called for an April 20 election to allow voters to decide if the county should withdraw from the Association of Bay Area Governments after forming a new alliance of northern counties.

The resolution setting the election was proposed by Supervisor Robert Theiller, a long-time advocate of withdrawal. He said he felt the association would eventually become a full scale regional government with taxing powers and one in which Sonoma County would have little voice.

Board Chairman Ignazio A. Vella, also association president, agreed to the vote, saying he has always felt he would support another regional association if it would better serve the county's needs and be eligible for federal and state fund grants.

Theiller had proposed the new group be known as the Redwood Empire Regional Association and include Sonoma, Marin, Napa, Solano, Mendocino, Lake, Humboldt and Del Norte counties. Vella asked Theiller to gather supervisors from all the counties for a March 15 meeting in the Sonoma supervisors chambers to discuss the proposal.

Theiller said he was advised by state Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, that any new regional association must first be approved by the state Legislature and that April 9 is the deadline for introducing legislation.

The supervisors said the final decision on ABAG membership would rest with the advice of the voters, the reaction from the other counties and the decision of the federal government on recognition of the new association for grant processing.

Actress Attacked

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)—Katharine Hepburn was attacked and bitten early today by a hammer-swinging woman who had been hiding in a closet in the home of Miss Hepburn's father, police said.

Miss Hepburn, who opened in the lead role in "Coco" at Hartford's Bushnell Auditorium Tuesday night, was treated for an injured finger at Hartford Hospital and released. Police arrested Louella G. West, 55, of Richmond, Va., whom they said was a "recently discharged employe" of Miss Hepburn.

Miss Hepburn, appearing for the first time in her hometown, told officials the woman came at her with a hammer but apparently did not strike her, then bit her when the actress' brother tried to interfere.

The woman was held on $10,000 bond charged with burglary with personal violence. She was to be arraigned later today.

Upset Victor

CHARLESTON, S.C. (UPI)—Mendel J. Davis, who became an aide to Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., three days after graduating from high school 10 years ago, upset three veteran politicians Tuesday to win the Democratic nomination to succeed the late congressman.

With 218 of 219 precincts reporting, Davis reported 26,873 votes to gain a majority over former Charleston Mayor J. Palmer Gaillard, former Charleston County Council Chairman J. Mitchell Graham and State Rep. Thomas Hartnett. Gaillard received 11,997 votes, Hartnett 5,247 and Graham 5,151.

Davis, 28, Rivers' godson, will meet Republican James B. Edwards and the United Citizens Party candidate Victoria Delee in an April 27 special election.

Clear Streets

REGGIO CALABRIA, Italy (UPI)—Police using armored cars and road graders cleared away the barricades for the second consecutive day today from the two rebel strongholds of this riot-scarred seaport.

No incidents were reported as authorities cleared away wreckage blocking the St. Peter and Calpinace Bridges leading to Sbarre on the south side of town, and the Liberty Bridge to the Santa Caterina neighborhood on the north. Both are separated from the main section of the city by nearly dry streambeds.

Police made a raid through Sbarre Tuesday backed by armored personnel carriers and wearing bullet-proof vests. Tuesday night the barricades went up again, as they have most nights after police raids.

Center Planned

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mayor John V. Lindsay has announced plans to build the nation's largest convention center and said it would be ready in time for the 1976 political conventions.

Meanwhile, Robert Tisch, head of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, said negotiations were continuing with both the Democratic and Republican parties to hold their 1972 conventions in Madison Square Garden.

Lindsay said Tuesday the new convention hall would cost $100 million and take five years to build. It will be built on pilings and extend over the Hudson River between 44th and 46th streets on Manhattan's west side.

A similar proposal died in the State Legislature last year because the proposed site for the convention hall had been between 10th and 11th avenues and would have required relocating a great number of people.

Nixon Firm

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon won't back away from his controversial proposal to reorganize the federal government just because it has run into some criticism, according to a top Agriculture Department official.

"Don't mistake the President's intentions on this," Don Paarlberg told the opening session of the Agriculture Department's annual Outlook Conference Tuesday.

"He and his team are in earnest," said Paarlberg, director of agricultural economics for the department, which would be abolished under Nixon's plan to telescope seven civilian government departments into four new big agencies grouped along "mission" lines.

Paarlberg conceded, indirectly, that Nixon would not find it easy to get congressional consent to his plan. The proposal will be "before the country for a considerable time," the official said.

Ecuador Seizes 20th Tuna Boat

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The San Diego tunaboat Nautilus today became the 20th tuna clipper seized by Ecuador since Jan. 11, August Felando, manager of the San Diego Tunaboat Association, said.

The Nautilus was boarded about 1:15 a.m. while skipper Tom Giacolone was in radio contact with the association, Felando said. The boat was expected to be taken to the Ecuadorian port of Salinas with an expected arrival time of 8 a.m. (PST), he said.

Giacolone said he was drifting about 80 miles offshore when a patrol boat put a spotlight on the Nautilus, Felando said.

Funnel-Like Clouds Spotted

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Tornado-carrying funnel-shaped clouds were spotted in several sections of San Diego County Tuesday, but no damage was reported.

A spokesman for the National Weather Service said the clouds were rare here but could be destructive.

Parts of the county received up to six inches of snow and some schools were closed. Other sections had considerable thunder and lightning as a storm passed through the area.

Conviction In Military Case Upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Supreme Court refused today—at least for the time being—to make retroactive its 1969 ruling that military personnel who commit non-service crimes must be tried in civilian courts.

The court took the position in unanimously affirming the court martial conviction of Cpl. Isiah Relford of kidnapping and raping two women in 1961 on grounds both crimes occurred on the military reservation encompassed by Fort Dix, N.J., and adjacent McGuire Air Force Base.

charged with an offense committed within or at the geographical boundary of a military post and violative of the security of a person or of property there, that offense may be tried by a court martial," the court held in an opinion by Justice Harry A. Blackmun.

"The case today marks an area, perhaps not the limit, where the court-martial is appropriate and permissible," he said. "What likes between is for decision at another time."

Lawyers for Relford had urged the court to make retroactive its June 2, 1969, ruling in the case of James F. O'Callahan that upset his conviction for rape in Honolulu.

In the O'Callahan case, the court held that military personnel who commit crimes in a civilian community in peacetime must be tried in civilian courts.

It came nearly eight years after Relford's 1963 conviction. His lawyers urged the court to make the ruling retroactive. The government took the opposite view but asked that the issue be decided.

The court ducked the retroactivity issue on grounds that the circumstances of Relford's case differed in that the crimes he committed occurred on a military reservation while O'Callahan's did not.

"We recognize that the retroactivity question has important dimensions, both direct and collateral, and that the government strongly urges that the question be decided here and now," Blackmun said.

Rabbi Denied Entry To Session; Detained

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Rabbi Meir Kahane, militant head of the American Jewish Defense League, was refused entry to a conference on Soviet Jews today and later was detained for questioning by Belgian security police.

Kahane arrived in Brussels today from New York where he was convicted Tuesday of disorderly conduct. He tried to enter the conference at the Palais des Congres to present a 10-point program he said would help the 3.5 million Jews in the Soviet Union.

Dozens of delegates at the conference jumped to their feet and began shouting when news of Kahane's detention reached the hall. The hall quieted down only after most of the 750 delegates left a short time later.

Police confirmed they picked up Kahane "for verification of the reason for his stay in Belgium." They also took the passport of at least one of his supporters. Kahane was picked up as he walked away from the Palais after being barred from entering.

At 2.30 p.m. (8:30 a.m. EST), after Kahane had been detained for nearly three hours, a police spokesman said "he was picked up because his presence was not appreciated by the organizers of the conference."

"What happens to him will depend on his own statements as regards his future intentions," the spokesman said.

Police sources said Police at Brussels International Airport had been told to detain Kahane if he flew into the country. They said Kahane had definitely not entered Belgium through the airport.

The sources also said police had told the presidium of the Conference on Soviet Jewry they would free Kahane if the presidium would accept him as an official delegate.

Morris Braufman, chairman of the National League for the Repatriation of Jews from the Soviet Union, said Kahane had turned down an offer by some 300 young delegates accredited to the conference to either storm the conference hall or smuggle him in.

RABBI MEIR KAHANE
Militant Jewish Leader

An American, who was not immediately identified, and a Russian-born Israeli identified as Dov Sperling were detained by police along with Kahane, police spokesmen said.

Sperling, described as a former inmate of a Soviet prison camp for Zionist activists, had distributed a printed statement to delegates before he was picked up.

After Kahane's detention, the presidium of the conference convened an emergency meeting.

Menahem Beigin, former Israeli vice premier and leader of the Gahal, Israel's second largest political party, said he would intervene with the presidium on Kahane's behalf. He said he would ask the presidium to seek Kahane's release and allow him to address the conference.

Israel To Stand Firm Over Land

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israel said today it will formally refuse total withdrawal from Arab territories when it replies to Egyptian peace proposals.

A statement issued by Prime Minister Golda Meir's office said reports the reply would not reject complete withdrawal were "groundless."

In Amman, Foreign Minister Abdullah Salah said Jordan will consider recognizing Israel if there is a total withdrawal from Arab lands.

Salah told the semiofficial Amman newspaper Al-Difa it was "premature" to discuss the possibility of establishing demilitarized zones after an Israeli withdrawal.

But he added "Jordan will look into the question of recognizing Israel if she withdraws from all occupied Arab territories."

The Israeli cabinet announced Sunday that Israel would not withdraw to the boundaries it had prior to the 1967 Middle East war, but political sources in Jerusalem had said there would be no specific reference to this in the formal reply to be submitted to the U.N. peace envoy Gunnar V. Jarring.

The prime minister's office said today "The draft of Israel's reply to the Egyptian proposals which were submitted through Dr. Jarring contains the governments decision as reported in its official communique, i.e., that Israel will not return to the armistice lines of June 4, 1967."

Racism Accusations Without Foundation

Investigation by the Independent-Journal of anonymous accusations against a Redwood High School athletic coach indicate that the charges were wholly without foundation.

Members of coach Richard H. Hart's basketball team as well as Tamalpais High players contacted by the I-J, unanimously replied that charges of racism against the coach were unfounded.

Officials of Redwood High School and Tamalpais Union High School District likewise flatly rejected the charges and expressed confidence in Coach Hart.

Nor did the I-J intend to indicate that there was any truth in the charges when they were reported in connection with a bomb threat against a basketball game between the Redwood and Tamalpais varsity teams February 2.

The I-J regrets any embarrassment which Coach Hart may have suffered as the result of the reporting of the anonymous accusations.

More Flood Threats To Stricken Nebraska Area

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Northeast Nebraska —declared a major disaster by President Nixon — was threatened by more severe flooding today as spring-like weather began to melt up to two feet of snow dumped by Monday's blizzard.

An intense winter storm that has plagued the East pushed into the North Atlantic today, but left in its wake gusty winds and heavy snow over northern New England. Travelers warnings were posted in Maine, northeast New York, Vermont and New Hampshire.

Residents of the Missippi Delta continued cleanup operations today in the tornado-stricken area. The latest death toll issued Tuesday by civil defense at Jackson said at least 86 persons were dead and 500 injured. Searchers continued to find bodies in creeks and under debris.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said Tuesday it would assist the Office of Emergency Preparedness in a recovery program for 15 northeast Nebraska counties declared a disaster area.

The corps sent boats and earth-moving units into the area Tuesday to begin cleanup operations on rescue work. At least seven highways were closed because of washed out bridges. Officials estimated 305 square miles was flooded and damages would exceed $2.35 million.

Rescue workers provided food for 500 residents of King Lake who did not flee from floods.

The Oklahoma National Guard scheduled an airlift early today with 40 tons of hay for cattle stranded in northwest Oklahoma by deep snowdrifts. State officials were awaiting word from President Nixon on a request to declare 16 counties a disaster area.

ly that Medina had ordered him on five occasions to "waste" everybody in the My Lai region because they were all enemy.

Calley said that he recognized two of his men at the time he fired into the ditch, but that he did not know whether they fired also. Tuesday he had testified that four or five of his platoon members fired in the ditch.

He said his main concern was in getting the villagers out of the way so he could get his men across the ditch fast and into a defensive position.

Calley also admitted he had struck a male villager on the mouth "quite hard" with the butt of his rifle. He said someone had brought the man up to him for interrogation.

Calley said the man was dressed in white, had short black hair and was about 23 years old.

He said he asked whether the man was a Viet Cong and where the Viet Cong were and that the man replied that he did not understand. This, he said, was in the vicinity of the ditch after he had fired into it. Calley said he asked him the question twice.

"I butt-stroked him in the mouth, sir," he told Daniel.

"How tall was he?" Daniel asked.

"My height, sir—maybe a little taller."

"How hard did you hit him?"

"Quite hard, sir . . . it bloodied his face."

"Did he go down to the ground?"

"Yes, sir."

Calley said he saw the helicopter coming in "and I started walking away from him — he was on the ground, and by the time I had gone two steps he was in the ditch."

"How did he get in?"

"Somebody drop-kicked him in."

"Didn't you fear the people in the ditch were booby-trapped, had grenades on?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you search them?"

"No, sir."

"Did you get that close to a potential mine?"

"If I thought it was a potential mine, I wouldn't get that close at all."

He said there were some of his soldiers who had searched them.

"Did your platoon meet any resistance in the village?" Daniel asked.

"I don't know, sir," Calley replied.

"Did you inquire?"

"No, sir."

"Had you ever been shot at before?"

"Yes, sir."

"Were you shot at that day?"

"I don't know, sir."

Calley testified that the first time the helicopter landed the pilot said there were "a lot of wounded people in the area and wondered if I could get any assistance to them. I told him I would report to higher headquarters."

Asked if the pilot appeared upset, Calley said he did not, but then added: "He wasn't violent or hysterical or anything. He told me what he wanted."

Calley said he radioed Medina that the pilot "didn't like the way things are being done down here and requested medical evacuation for the wounded."

Calley said that Medina after hearing of the pilot's request said "he knew about that and to get on up where I was supposed to be."

He said that when the helicopter landed a second time he told the pilot: "There was no way I could evacuate them except march them with me—if he could get a helicopter in there, I'd be glad to help."

Daniel then asked him if he had not made the remark about a grenade and he replied: "No, sir, I did not."

A moment later, Calley said: "Let me retract that statement—there would be no way for me to get them out. I believe I told him the only means I had to get people out was hand grenades, I had no helicopters."

Calley say he noticed during two trips by evacuation helicopters that there were children among the evacuees.

"You were discriminating at this point?" Daniel asked.

Calley had testified Tuesday that he did not discriminate as to sex or age among the villagers, merely considering them as enemy in his "psyched up" state.

Calley replied to Daniel that he could discriminate at that point because a no-firing order had been given.

At lunch, he said, Capt. Medina asked him for a body count and "I told him I had no idea and for him to come up with an estimate." He said he presumed Medina would "put in any body count that was reasonable — the highest he could."

Later, Calley said, he told Medina to make it 50 bodies for his unit, one of two platoons that made the search-and-destroy sweep. Calley said Medina "probably came up with between 250 and 300" as a total body count.

Calley, unlike other witnesses who were veterans of the My Lai sweep, had no estimate of the width or depth of the drainage ditch in which the people were shot. The government contends at least 70 people, screaming in fright and pain and with mothers falling on their babies to protect them, were murdered in the ditch.

PATROL

asked this hypothetical question: If Marinwood decided it wanted three extra sheriff's deputies to patrol that area and paid for that added service, could the sheriff order those three men to other areas of the county?

If the need arose elsewhere, Sheriff Mountanos said it would be his duty to pull the three men from Marinwood and any other deputies available and send them to the trouble spot.

That statement stunned the supervisors. They had been assuring unincorporated areas that if they paid for extra patrolmen, those patrolmen would be available to them at all times.

"That puts me in the position of having to tell Marinwood or Santa Venetia that you pay for the extra men but you may not always have them when you need them" said McInnis.

McInnis and two of his colleagues, Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. and Louis H. Baar, all conceded the proposed district probably was doomed even if the supervisors voted for it because the unincorporated areas could block it by referendum.

Bay Waste Monitoring Letter Hit

The president of the Sausalito-Marin City Sanitary District board reacted angrily today to a letter from the Regional Water Quality Control Board ordering the district to begin immediately self-monitoring of the treated wastes it dumps into the bay.

Cyril G. Hansen said the district has asked to defer action on the requirement until the next fiscal year because funds for the monitoring project have not been budgeted for the current year.

The water control board turned down the district's request in a letter received today. Hansen said he is consulting with the district's legal counsel to see if the water board has the right to demand immediate action.

Hansen said a monitoring program, to determine if any pollution is resulting from district operation, would cost nearly $17,000 a year.

He said $2,400 would be needed for laboratory work, $2,000 for a sampling machine, $3,500 for a boat and $9,000 for hiring a man to do sampling and testing.

To get the program operating under the sanitary district's current budget, Hansen said the money will have to be taken from funds earmarked for plant improvement. The district cannot spare that money and still meets its own needs, he said.

Only Two Names To Confuse Now

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — The road from Petaluma to Bodega Bay — changing names five times en route — was reduced to a two-name thoroughfare yesterday by the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors.

The road from Petaluma to Two Rock will be known as Bodega Avenue and the section from Two Rock to the Shoreline Highway at Bodega Bay will be called Valley Ford Road. The board asked the county road department and state Division of Highways to place new markers as soon as possible to end confusion.

Harvey let her out in Anaheim.

Asked if she felt hostility toward Harvey, she said: "I'm so tired I feel nothing. I feel sympathy."

Then someone asked "why" and she bowed her head and started to cry and was escorted from the room by her husband who had been sitting by her side holding her hand.

The Stansfields, flown back from Bakersfield in a rented six-passenger plane, landed at Petaluma airport shortly after 4 p.m., and Mrs. Smith arrived later at San Francisco International Airport where she was met by her husband.

Reduction On Billboard Plea Denied

A variance application to reduce the size of Larkspur's last billboard — an alternative to its removal — was denied last night by the city's planning commission.

John W. Appleton, city planning director, said today the controversial sign, located east of Highway 101 near the Greenbrae interchange, was denied because the commission felt inadequate justification was given for its continuance.

The sign, owned by developer Niels J. Schultz Jr., was judged as illegal and ordered removed by the city council last December.

It was erected prior to 1962 when a sign ordinance ruled billboards nonconforming and set a time period for their removal. Schultz's sign became illegal in 1969.

Schultz last night again voiced his argument that a billboard is needed at the Greenbrae interchange for direction to Greenbrae and Bon Air. Neither area is listed on state highway signs.

He proposed reducing the existing sign's size by two-thirds thus leaving a billboard 203 square feet in size. He also proposed the new sign be similar in color to state signs.

Commissioner Leonard S. Rubin, who was the lone supported of Schultz's proposal early in the discussion moved its acceptance with minor modifications. The motion died for lack of a second.

The Sprouts In Planter Boxes Gone

Eager tourists and street people who scanned city planter boxes along Bridgeway in Sausalito today looked in vain for the tiny plants which have caused such excitement in recent days.

Sausalito police plucked the sprouts yesterday and said the plants were on their way to the Federal Narcotics Bureau laboratory in San Francisco for analysis to determine whether they are indeed marijuana.

Police said the question, which has been on practically everyone's lips, should be answered "within a week."

Sausalito Police Chief James D. Wright, viewed the seedlings Friday and said they were not the illicit drug. But yesterday the chief said the plants he was shown last week were "immature" and did not have the serrated center leaves that characterize young marijuana.

Car Accident Victim Released

Harold J. Thayer, 22, of 570 San Marin Oaks Drive, Novato, was released from Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital yesterday, after treatment for being thrown from his auto Sunday morning.

Thayer's car rolled over twice on Highway 101 north of the Novato Creek bridge, plunging through the chain link divider fence. Thayer suffered numerous cuts of the head, face, hands and arms when he was ejected. He was not wearing a seat belt, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Officers reported Thayer's car hit the fence when he swerved to avoid another car moving into his lane.

The Rafael Theater in San Rafael was evacuated and searched at 6 p.m. yesterday after theater manager received a call from an unidentified man who warned that a bomb would go off in an hour.

San Rafael police said that patrons of the theater on Fourth Street were permitted to reenter the building after the search revealed no evidence of a bomb.

Ross School Budget Less Than 1970

The Ross School District board has been presented a rough draft of the fiscal 1971-72 budget, showing a $2,745 reduction from this year's.

However, according to Supt. Thomas A. Anderson, the proposal does not include salary increases or certain maintenance projects.

He said inclusion of those items into the $523,896 budget will come after the board considers capital outlay and maintenance priorities and gets an indication on teacher salary requests from its negotiator next month.

This year's budget totals $526,641 with a tax rate of $3.28 per $100 assessed valuation.

A second draft of the budget will be presented the board in April, Anderson said.

The board also tabled discussions on boundary adjustments with the San Rafael Elementary School District after it was learned that such changes would require changes in the San Rafael city limits.

In other action, the board increased the mileage compensation paid district employees from 10 cents and 12 cents per mile and adopted a resolution thanking individuals who aided the Ross School basketball team during practice sessions.

Savio Is Out Of Berkeley's Race For Mayor

In a letter to the University of California newspaper on Tuesday, the 1964 Free Speech Movement leader declared he would devote his efforts to a proposal that Berkeley have three independent police departments.

Before voters at the next municipal election is a proposal that the city have departments for its Negro, white and campus areas.

Both Savio and his wife filed nomination papers for mayor, he said, to encourage another candidate to announce his advocacy of the plan. Instead the candidate, Warren Widener, decided to oppose the police project, Savio declared.

Sentencing Is Scheduled On Importing Bargeload of Pot

I-J Special Report

LOS ANGELES — Sentencing for three men involved in trying to import a bargeload of marijuana into this country has been set for April 19 in U.S. District Court.

The three, who were arrested earlier in Marin County in connection with the confiscation of 1,000 pounds of grass, are Douglas Edward Rambo, 29, of Fairfax; Herbert Bryan Berez, 32, of Los Angeles and Davis Bruce Tate, 23, of Tigard, Ore.

Federal prosecuter Arnold Rigarde said that Rambo and Tate were convicted last week by Judge Jesse W. Curtis Jr. after he denied motions that the case be dismissed and that the evidence be suppressed.

Their attorneys stipulated that the judge could decide the case on the evidence he had heard during the hearings on the motions. It was a foregone conclusion they would be convicted, Rigarde said.

They were charged with conspiracy to smuggle in the marijuana plus receiving and concealing pot.

Tate pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of smuggling pot without paying the transfer tax on it.

Rigarde said that Berez and Rambo face five to 20 years in federal prison plus $20,000 fines. He expected that Tate, who was involved to a lesser extent in the plot, will receive a lighter sentence.

Nine other persons arrested with the three have also all pleaded guilty or been convicted, Rigarde said, while two additional people were granted immunity in exchange for testifying for the prosecution.

In Marin County, Rambo still faces trial in superior court on charges of possessing marijuana for sale and furnishing it. Marin charges against Tate and Berez were dismissed last August after a long preliminary hearing in municipal court.

Rambo also is still charged with attempting to bribe narcotics agents stemming from a subsequent arrest.

Rambo, Tate and Berez were first arrested in May in Fairfax and later the same month in Long Beach, where customs agents seized three tons of marijuana valued at $1 million as it was being transferred from a salvage vessel to barges and vehicles.

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI)—The New Hampshire House gave initial approval Tuesday to a bill to ban the sale of phosphate detergents after Dec. 31, 1973.

"We want to make sure that the detergent industry does what it has promised to do," he said.

Petaluman Bound Over In Assault

Stanley L. DeMartinis, 21, of Petaluma, was bound over to Sonoma County Superior Court yesterday on a charge of assault on a police officer.

Master Plan Out For Sorich Park

By LARRY MOWELL

The San Anselmo City Council last night scotched a master plan for Sorich Ranch Park as too grandiose and too expensive to implement, then authorized $780 for more modest development.

The council approved the sum to install a water fountain, complete two picnic areas and pay for trail materials after earlier condemning a master plan prepared by San Rafael architect William L. Kapranos.

Kapranos's proposal for the 62-acre hillside park included a football field, tennis and handball courts, a swimming pool and a recreation building plus trails and picnic facilities.

"This is to me typical of the type of master planning the city orders that ends up on the shelf," Mayor James F. Reed said.

He said the city cannot afford such development and added the proposal had been drawn without citizen participation. "I'm inclined to believe that plan is a long, long way, if ever, from being adopted," he said.

Councilman Lewis W. Stewart branded it "highly overdone." And Councilman Woodrow V. Capurro said it could not be half-developed under the master plan in 25 years, and called for a bond issue to put the park in shape. No action was taken on his suggestion.

While the plan did not meet the council's image of essentially open space, City Administrator Alfred C. Kaeppel said such a scheme had been suggested by the council to Kapranos four years ago.

Kapranos, who was not present, said in a letter to Kaeppel that the long delay in preparing the master plan was caused by his efforts to win a regional park to include the Sorich Ranch. The ranch abuts both county and San Rafael land as yet undeveloped.

Stewart backed the regional park concept to prevent "up hill and down dale housing development."

Reed agreed with the concept of a regional park, but said it is many years in the future if it can be arranged at all.

The more immediate task of putting in water and picnic facilities was approved after Thomas Peacock, a member of the city parks and recreation commission, said the limited development is necessary to encourage organized use of the park at the end of San Francisco Boulevard.

No Police Contract For Sleepy Hollow

Smarting from the defeat of a proposed police services district only two hours beforehand, the San Anselmo City Council made it clear last night that Sleepy Hollow will not get a police contract with the city. (See story, page 1)

Further, the council said, it planned at its March 9 meeting to discuss eliminating a courtesy known as "first call" police service to Sleepy Hollow. Under this procedure, San Anselmo police officers are the first to answer emergency calls from the community if a regular sheriff's unit isn't available.

Mayor James F. Reed and Councilmen Warren R. Perry and Kenneth L. Anderson said they would oppose providing full-scale police protection for a community services district proposed for Sleepy Hollow, if it were formally sought.

Councilman Woodrow V. Capurro said he would approve such protection if payment to San Anselmo were sufficient. Lewis W. Stewart took no stand.

The council position was in response to a request of J. G. Ingels of 40 Stuyvesant Drive, a candidate for the governing board of the proposed community services district. Residents of Sleepy Hollow will vote on the proposal April 20.

Ingels said he hoped to arm himself with the council's opposition and a cost estimate for providing police protection from San Anselmo.

Police Chief Raymond Buchignani predicted that to provide full police protection for Sleepy Hollow, five men would be required at a cost of $100,000.

Under the proposed police services district — backed by San Anselmo and other cities but defeated by the board of supervisors earlier yesterday — unincorporated areas, such as Sleepy Hollow, would be entitled to beefed up sheriff's patrols only if they paid for it themselves through a special taxing district.

Cities have long complained they are burdened both with paying for their own police departments and with part of the cost of sheriff's patrols in unincorporate areas.

The San Anselmo City Council also:

CITY TAKEOVER — Approved a request by the Ross Valley chapter of DeMolay to take over the operation of the city government from 1 to 4:30 p.m. March 16.

POLICE CARS — Approved ordering two new Dodge police cars for fiscal 1971-72 for $6,157. Chief Buchignani had requested three.

LICENSE — Granted an exemption from the business license tax to the Marin Senior Coordinating Council, operator of the San Anselmo Greyhound bus depot.

CANDY PEDDLER — Put over to March 9 a request by Youth Incentive of San Francisco for exemption from the business license fee. The organization claims to be non-profit, deriving most of its revenue from door-to-door sale of packaged candy and nuts.

CLAIM — Denied a claim of $50,000 by Ethel G. Grandi of 119 Oak Springs Drive for injuries allegedly suffered in a collision of a vehicle in which she was a passenger with a city dump truck Jan. 26.

SIGNAL — Approved a contract of $7,200 with Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co. of San Francisco for design work on traffic signal improvements between Red Hill Shopping Center and Suffield Avenue.

JOINT POWERS — Approved a joint powers agreement with Fairfax for construction and maintenance of portions of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard abutting Fairfax, although Fairfax refused to provide for future maintenance.

ELECTION — Denied, 4-1, Anderson dissenting, a request from the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce for backing of a proposal that would allow city officials to set their own standards for filing nominations for office.

REZONING — Approved rezoning property of A. H. Tucker in the 800 block of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard from commercial to single family residential.

GREETING — Approved the design of a 15-foot sign for the Ross border reading "Welcome San Anselmo" and advertising the city's service clubs. Expense is to be borne by the clubs.

ADJOURNED — Adjourned to March 9 at 8 p.m. at city hall.

Unitarian minister James L. Stoll is scheduled to speak on Gay Liberation and homosexuals at 11 a.m. Sunday at the Unitarian Fellowship of Marin, 240 Channing Way, San Rafael.

Petaluma Voters Reject Tax Hike

On increasing the high school district tax rate from $1.55 to $2.50 per $100 assessed valuation, unofficial vote tallies showed 4,984 votes against to 2,324 votes in favor.

A proposed boost in the elementary district from $1.83 to $2.50 per $100 assessed valuation was rejected 2,721 to 1,349.

A total of 7,276 votes were cast for a turnout of 44.7 per cent of the 16,278 registered voters.

Petaluma schools Supt. Lesly H. Meyer prediated there would be no plans to seek another election in the near future.

Business Mgr. George W. Castleberry said the elementary district would be hardest hit by the denial because reserve funds are lower in that district. He said non-academic programs face curtailment in the 1971-72 budget as a result of the votes.

Cotati's Teachers Ask Tax Increase

Cotati School District teachers last night urged the district board to consider a tax rate increase election to improve teacher salaries and to lift the threat of staff reduction.

In three separate letters to the board, the Association of Cotati District Teachers urged that plans to reduce the teaching staff by lottery be dropped.

Although the board said it would consider a tax election, it added that dwindling enrollment with an accompanying loss in income appeared to make staff reduction necessary. Schools Supt. Duncan A. Coleman was asked to report back at the March 9 meeting.

Board president Maurice Fredericks said if more than four teaching positions need to be terminated, state law requires that a lottery be held.

Robert Plikum, a teacher at Waldo Rohnert School, reminded the board that a lottery was held last year and that many of the same teachers would be subjected to a lottery again. "The district may get a bad reputation," he warned.

The teachers also reminded the board that they received no salary increase last year, but only additional fringe benefits in medical and dental plans. Reporting that they are the lowest paid teachers in Sonoma County, their letter also requested that no consideration be given to a freeze or reduction of current salaries.

Fredericks said the salary measures had not been formally considered, but only been mentioned by administrators as a possible way of reducing expenses.

The citizens advisory committee of the district also recommended a tax increase election.

The Cotati School District Board Also:

SALE — Approved signing of final papers for the sale of the east wing of Cotati School to the city for use as a new city hall.

SKATING — Approved ice skating instruction at the Redwood Empire Skating Arena in Santa Rosa for students in grades four through six as part of the physical education program.

APPOINTMENT — Named John Knowles of Rohnert Park to the citizens advisory committee.

COLLEGE — Approved a resolution asking the state college board of trustees to assign a higher priority to construction of a new science building at Sonoma State College.

Co-Ed Dorm Under Study

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—The University of Wisconsin is considering opening a coed dormitory with men and women living in alternate rooms.

The impetus for the plan comes not from student activists or unrest but from financial problems with the school's one-sex dorms.

Apparently the students do not want to live exclusively with the members of their own sex. One dorm, as a result, has 900 vacancies and another has been shut down completely.

Hospital Expansion Due Public Hearing

Analysis of a Marin Hospital District study favoring expansion of existing hospital facilities over new hospital construction was deferred last night by the district board. It said more time was needed for review.

The delay followed agreement that such analysis should be conducted with Marin General Hospital's long-range planning committee, hospital staff and interested community members.

A special meeting to delve into the report was set for March 16 at 7 p.m. at the hospital.

The demographic study, compiled by Lester Gorsline Associates of Tiburon, suggests new medical concepts which should be considered in hospital planning based on population trends.

"The board felt it necessary to have the demographic study . . . to determine if the basic assumptions of the (district) master plan are still valid," explained Dr. Gwendolyn M. Campion, board president.

In question is whether proposed hospital expansion should place greater emphasis on ambulatory services or inpatient facilities.

The Gorsline report says that medical trends call for greater emphasis on ambulatory-outpatient service, whereas the hospital's 1966 master plan emphasizes in-patient services.

As reported in yesterday's Independent-Journal, the report proposes expansion of services within the existing facility, rather than construction of smaller satellite hospitals.

In asking for a special meeting to discuss the report fully, Director George E. Croke expressed concern over the lack of information on future planning at other Marin hospitals.

He said he was particularly concerned over reports that the corporation owning Ross General Hospital may merge into Hospital Corp. of America of Nashville, Tenn.

He suggested the district await additional information on Ross General's plan before beginning hospital expansion planning.

However, Director Marion C. Ibach believed the district had to begin thinking of expansion plans since the extent to which the hospital's master plan must be modified or changed is not known.

County Drug Program To Assist Open House Staff

The Marin Hospital District board, following the lead of county board of supervisors, last night approved integration of the Marin Community Mental Health Center's drug abuse program with that of the Marin Open House.

The action, approved yesterday by the supervisors, was proposed by the Mental Health Advisory Board to eliminate overlapping.

Dr. John S. Guerrant, director of the mental health center and chief of county mental health planning, told the board the integration will merge the psychotherapy knowledge of the center with the open house staff's understanding of the drug culture.

Since the mental health center is owned by the hospital district but operates under the county's mental health program, both the county and hospital district must approve its programs.

The consolidation of services, with exception of emergency care and some methadone treatment at the center, will involve some personnel shifts to open house.

A psychiatrist will work at Open House one-quarter time, a social worker one-half time and a mental health worker three-quarters time. However, they will remain under control of the mental health center.

Primary responsibility for program development will remain with Open House officials.

The Marin Hospital District Board Also:

LINEAR — Approved plans and specification for remodeling a room for the linear accelerator which the board was told probably would be operating in July.

PHYSICIAN FEES — Extended for six months a $10 per hour fee for emergency room physicians while negotiations continue over a fee schedule. The $10 fee was established in December when doctors criticized the $5 fee they were receiving.

INSURANCE — Approved spending $1,000 for liability insurance for malfeasance suits against the board or its members.

GIFT — Accepted a gift of 300 shares of Famous Artists School stock from the Ludeken Foundation of San Francisco for the linear accelerator.

Foran Asks Toll Funds For Public Transit Use

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation to use tolls from Bay Area bridges for public transit purposes was introduced yesterday by Assemblyman John F. Foran, D-San Francisco.

The Golden Gate Bridge District would not be affected by the measure, but all nine counties in the area, including Marin, could share the toll fund.

The fund would be supplied by toll revenues in excess of that needed for maintenance and operation costs of bridge facilities. The state Toll Bridge Authority and the new Metropolitan Transportation Commission would be empowered to spend from the fund.

The assemblyman said the toll fund would allow the Bay Area to raise money needed to qualify for matching federal transportation funds. He noted that local transit systems may obtain $2 in federal funds for each $1 put up in local funds.

New Ordinance On Agenda

The Marin Municipal Water District will reconsider a proposed cross-connection ordinance at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow at the district office in Corte Madera.

The board Feb. 10 had asked the staff to prepare a report on means consumers might use to finance the cost of backflow devices. The devices cost up to $4,150 each.

Also to be considered is hiring a soils engineer for tests on the first stage of the Marin Aqueduct's second section.

Easter Hunt Help Sought

The Rohnert Park Recreation Commission has agreed to seek assistance from the community in sponsoring the annual Easter Egg hunt.

Commission chairman Ronald E. Rasmussen said the commission would try to meet with representatives of civic groups next week to seek cosponsors.

With an eye to reducing the cost of the program, Rasmussen said the commission decided Monday night to donate eggs for the hunt, but hoped other groups would supply candy and entertainment.

WINNIE RUTH JUDD
Step nearer freedom

Parole For Mrs. Judd Is Proposed

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)— Winnie Ruth Judd, the notorious trunk murderess of the 1930s, should be freed from prison, the Arizona Board of Pardons recommended Tuesday.

The board asked Gov. John R. Williams to commute the 66-year-old "tiger woman's" sentence to time already served.

Mrs. Judd was sentenced to death in 1932 for slaying two girl friends, Hedwig Samuelson and Agnes Anne Leroi. The body of one girl was dismembered and both were shipped to Los Angeles. Blood seeping from a trunk led to the bodies' discovery.

The death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in 1962 after she had spent years in Arizona State Hospital. She escaped from the hospital for the seventh and final time that same year, dropping from sight until 1969 when a routine fingerprint check led to her arrest in a San Francisco suburb.

The grandmotherly Mrs. Judd made her latest plea for freedom before the Pardons and Parole Baord last week. The panel recommended commutation on a split vote Tuesday.

Board members indicated that if the governor commutes her sentence, they will impose strict conditions against the sale of any articles about the murder case.

Fighting Spirit Shown By Injured Cadet

A news conference was held Tuesday for the cadet, who was injured Feb. 13 on the Golden Gate Bridge.

Present were his wife, Martine, and their two-months-old daughter, Sabine. The cadet, who came here aboard the French training ship Jeanne d'Arc, had not seen the child before she was flown here Monday.

Commander Ira J. Woodstein, chief of orthopedic services at the Oakland Naval Hospital, said chances were excellent that the 28-year-old cadet would be able to work with an artificial leg.

Citizens Panel Plans Flood Board Meeting

The Novato Citizen's Creek Committee will meet with the advisory board of the Novato Flood Control Zone tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the library of Lu Sutton School, 1800 Center Road.

The meeting was requested by the committee to keep citizens informed on the status of the Army Corps of Engineers' study of Novato Creek flood control.

Headlight Plan To Cut Road Accidents

I-J Special Report

VALLEJO — Motorists on the Sears Point-Vallejo Road — a winding, accident-prone route used by many Marinites — soon will be required to use their headlights during daylight.

Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, announced the new safety program yesterday in a city hall press conference. It will be effective within 90 days.

A similar program has proved successful on another route in the state, but the Division of Highways had failed to act on repeated requests by the California Highway Patrol to try the system on he Sears Point Road.

Behr said 127 accidents occurred on the two-land road in 1969, killing four persons and injuring 99 others. Last year, 11 died in accidents on the highway.

The senator stressed that the headlight program, designed to make cars more visible when passing, was only a temporary answer to the need to widen the road to four lanes. Such expansion has been scheduled for 1979, but Behr said he would seek to move up the project.

A test of the headlight program on a stretch of Interstate 5 two years ago was credited with cutting fatalities from 27 in a 30-month period to two in 18 months.

75 Strep Cases Are Reported Last Week

Seventy-five cases of streptococcus infections topped the list of communicable diseases recorded in Marin last week, according to Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer.

There also were 32 cases of rubella and eight of infectious hepatitis.

New Attack On Pollution

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation empowering the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District to impose fees for registration of all stationary sources of air contaminants — such as refinery smokestacks —has been introduced by Assemblyman John T. Knox, D-Richmond.

The measure also would make permanent the district's maximum property tax rate of two cents per $100 assessed valuation. Knox last year won passage of a bill hiking the maximum from 1.3 cents to two cents, but for only two fiscal years.

The bill was requested by the district's board of directors. The district now includes six counties, including Marin, but in July will annex Sonoma, Napa and Solano counties.

Foster Care Home Plea By Bagley

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, today appealed to Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger to break a backlog of fingerprint checks that has halted licensing of new foster care homes in California.

Gov. Reagan's freeze on hiring new employees or replacing those who leave state jobs was cited by Bagley as causing the backlog in the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation.

State law requires that prospective operators of foster care homes first have their fingerprints checked by the bureau, but the hiring freeze has forced the bureau to stop processing such checks.

Bagley, in his letter to Younger, urged the attorney general to exercise power enabled under Reagan's economy moves to thaw the freeze on hiring.

Bagley said that the current halt on all new licenses meant that foster children "must be either left in an unacceptable environment or supported 100 per cent by the county in its juvenile hall or other comparable institution." He noted that the cost of such care was far higher than that in a foster care home.

Two Injured In Petaluma Accident

Two San Rafael residents were injured Sunday at 12:37 a.m. in an accident at Highway 101 and East Washington Street, Petaluma, it was reported yesterday.

Larry Smith, 37, of 1135 Fourth Street, was treated at Hillcrest Hospital for an injury to his right hip and ankle, and Glenda Romanowsky, 22, of 39 Ross Street, for an injury to her left shoulder. Police lacked details of the accident.

State Game Refuge Bill For Farallones

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation designating the Farallon Islands as a state game refuge has been introduced by Sen. Milton Marks, R-San Francisco.

The islands, 28 miles west of the Golden Gate, originally were designated a federal game refuge by President Theodore Roosevelt, but Marks said its status under the presidential order left responsibility for protection "somewhat nebulous."

Marks' bill would protect some 200,000 birds as well as many sea lions and seals which breed on and migrate to the islands. The refuge would bar unauthorized entry closer than three miles to the islands.

The senator noted that the Coast Guard, which now provides limited protection for the wildlife, is planning to abandon the islands when automated ship-warning equipment is installed this year. The Coast Guard's imminent departure "makes it imperative that the state step in now," Marks declared.

His bill did not provide additional funds to enforce its restrictions against unauthorized entry into the refuge.

The strength and quiet of a double-panel steel roof.
A roomier interior.
Over 500 more square inches of glass.
The extra protection of a steel luggage-compartment bulkhead.
The corrosion barrier provided by four inner fenders.

Mill Valley Board Firm On Corridor

The Mill Valley School District board has reaffirmed an earlier action and gone on record as "unalterably opposed" to the use of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way in Mill Valley for rapid transit.

Carol Taylor, secretary to Supt. James A. Collins, reported the board Monday unanimously asked the Golden Gate Bridge District not to build a transit system on the railroad property.

The right-of-way bisects the Middle School site and Edna Maguire School and the board feels its use as a transit corridor is inconsistent with the educational and recreational uses of the schools, Mrs. Taylor said.

The resolution asks the bridge district to locate any rapid transit in Mill Valley along Highway 101.

The Mill Valley City Council will consider and is expected to adopt an identical resolution when it meets Monday at 8 p.m. at city hall. Both bodies had previously stated their opposition to rapid transit use of the railroad property.

In other business, the board heard Harold Graves, of the real estate firm of Frank Howard Allen Co., report that the 1.68-acre Harvard Avenue property owned by the district has been placed on multiple listing.

The district is selling the site and a 5.13-acre parcel in Tamalpais Valley to finance construction of the Middle School.

The Mill Valley school district board also:

GIFT - Accepted a gift from the Independent Insurance Agents of Marin of eight metal security lockers, which will be installed at Edna Maguire School.

MIDDLE SCHOOL - Heard a report that the Middle School is 15 per cent complete.

PRINCIPAL - Was told that deadline for filing for the post of principal at the Middle School is Friday and 35 applicants have applied thus far.

DAY - Agreed to reduce the school day at Edna Maguire School from 350 minutes to 305 minutes. The state requires a minimum 240-minute day.

TEACHERS - Accepted the resignation of Jill Aigner, math teacher at Edna Maguire School, and replaced her with Michael Shoob, who will receive $3,512 for the rest of the school year.

Committee Kills Legal Bingo Bill

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —A bill to legalize bingo in California is dead—despite assurances it's a game played by "little old ladies" and has no mafia connections.

An Assembly committee junked the measure after sponsor Alister McAlister argued that bingo has "no history of infiltration by hoodlums" and was played in churches in his San Jose district until a crackdown last fall.

"We know that it's a game played by little old ladies," he said.

Opponents said the bill failed to define bingo and would permit "wide open" gambling "as long as you call it a bingo game."

Otis D. Robinson, 38, of San Rafael, was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday on a charge of burglarizing Payless Drug Store in San Rafael Feb. 2. He is to be arraigned Monday.

Sewer Construction Ordered For Area

The Marin County health officer has informed the Bayside Acres Property Owners Association that sewers must be built in the community, according to Clinton Lewis, association president.

In a letter to the association, Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht noted that permits for construction of septic tanks in the area have been turned down for several years because many of the existing tanks are failing, he said.

"Under the circumstances," she wrote, "we feel we have no acceptable alternative, but to encourage as strongly as possible the construction of collecting sewers to serve the entire area."

Lewis said that while homeowners in the lowland area have favored a sewer because their tanks are failing, some homeowners on higher ground have argued against sewers because their tanks function properly.

Lewis said the sewer must be built in April of 1972 when San Pedro Road will be widened.

Present to answer questions of the approximately 60 persons in attendance Monday night were Supervisor John F. McInnis, William L. Desmond, director of environmental health for the county, and Dr. William Upton of the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board, Lewis said.

The bayside community contains about 130 homes that will require sewer service, Lewis said.

A camel's temperature may rise and fall several degrees within 24 hours.

Guilty Plea To Burglary Charge

James Kenneth, 52, of New Mexico, pleaded guilty to a reduced misdemeanor charge of burglary yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

He earlier had been charged with a felony count of burglarizing the Sausalito Salvage Shop Feb. 14.

Judge David Menary Jr. set sentencing for March 9.

Costs Piling Up For Auditorium

Marin County supervisors decided yesterday to pour another $100,000 into the unfinished Veterans Memorial Auditorium and suddenly realized they had authorized more than $500,000 in building improvements in the last six weeks.

Although sufficient funds to complete the auditorium this fiscal year are budgeted, the supervisors expressed surprise with the speed and size of the spending.

Supervisors said they did not get the full impact of the expenditures because the requests from Asst. County Administrator Thomas F. Campanella had come in varying amounts since early January.

Yesterday, Campanella recommended $65,000 for an acoustical shell behind the auditorium stage and $35,000 for another chiller unit to expand air conditioning for a full, 2,100-seat auditorium.

Until last year, the supervisors had planned a 900-seat auditorium, hoping that a citizen group called Fair-Marin Inc. would raise the funds to make it a 2,100-seat facility, thus attracting major entertainment.

When Fair-Marin failed to come up with the funds, the supervisors themselves took over the operation of the auditorium. Three weeks ago, the supervisors voted money to increase the seating to 2,100.

Yesterday, Supervisor Michael Wornum asked Campanella, "Do you envision anything more before completion of the auditorium?"

Campanella said he expected to submit requests to spend $100,000 more for tiling and other furnishings to complete the interior. The auditorium is expected to open in September.

"Every week or so, we get hit with another $100,000," grumbled Chairman Louis H. Baar. He urged a delay in further spending until consideration of the 1971-72 budget in June.

Baar voted against yesterday's $100,000 outlay, but he was the lone dissenter in a 4-1 vote.

Campanella explained the major symphonies cannot be booked for the auditorium until the shell is installed. If the shell is added later, he said, the auditorium would have to close for the shell installation.

"To make it (the building) productive, we have to complete it," said Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr.

"There's no sense putting in 2,100 seats and let the people in the back roast because of deficient air conditioning," added Supervisor Michael Wornum.

McInnis said he had opposed the auditorium at the outset because financing was not assured. But now that the county is committed, it must complete the job so that the opening will not be a flop.

County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell reported that $3 million has been spent on the auditorium in the last four years. Of this amount, $2,250,000 came from county funds, and the rest from the state.

On Jan. 12, they voted $91,152 for landscaping and $92,320 for turfing, water lines and other improvements needed for the 1971 fair.

On Jan. 26, they appropriated $4,400 in stage rigging, $19,578 for a movable wall, and $7,290 per year for the sound system.

On Feb. 2, they paid $195,238 to increase seating to 2,100.

On Feb. 9, they spent $9,000 for improved seating and telescoping seat platforms.

And yesterday's authorization brought the total spent this year to $519,000.

Lower Rates For Disaster Help Slated

Beginning next month, residents of the unincorporated areas of Marin will be able to get flood and mudslide insurance at federally subsidized rates.

County Administrator Alan Bruce told the board of supervisors yesterday that the Department of Housing and Urban Development had notified the county that it now qualifies for flood insurance.

Corte Madera and Larkspur have already qualified for the insurance, and other Marin cities have also applied.

Park-Rec Panel's New Members

Two housewives will join the Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission to succeed Lothar Salin and Helen E. Newman.

Marin County board of supervisors yesterday appointed Dorothy Olson of Fairfax and Polly Smith of Tiburon by unanimous vote.

Mrs. Olson, nominated by Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., has been active in the Fairfax Recreation program and in the League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Smith, recommended by Michael Wornum, is a member of the Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commission.

Marin Working On New Disaster Plan

Marin County is working on an updated plan to pool all available personnel and facilities in the county to meet natural disasters, chairman Louis A. Baar of the board of supervisors announced yesterday.

The present county plan has been criticized for being outmoded and inadequate in the event of a disaster such as the Los Angeles earthquake, and does not meet state or federal standards.

Baar said he and Asst. County Administrator Thomas F. Campanella have been working on a new plan, expected to be before the board of supervisors for consideration within three weeks.

Details were not made available.

Innocent Pleas To Pot Counts

Fernando Astolfo Gomez and George William Schult Jr., both 24 and of Fairfax, and Eugene Jeffery Dodson, 30, of San Anselmo, have pleaded innocent to marijuana charges in Marin Municipal Court.

The three were arrested Feb. 5 in a raid by drug agents on Gomez's residence. They are charged with possessing marijuana and Dodson is accused of selling the drug as well.

Preliminary hearing was set for March 9.

Magee Tape Is Attacked By Attorney

Existence of the tape — but not its contents —was made known yesterday in Marin Superior Court during a hearing on a petition by a Pacific Sun reporter, Alice Yarish, seeking permission to interview Magee at San Quentin.

"That tape had no right to be made. It was unauthorized," cried Robert Y. Bell of Santa Rosa, one of two attorneys named to represent Magee.

TAPED SATURDAY

The tape was made Saturday at the prison by attorney Jerome Berg, representing Mrs. Yarish.

Berg said that Magee has asked to be interviewed by Mrs. Yarish and that the tape was made to illustrate Magee is a reasonable man of some intelligence who could be interviewed without prison restrictions.

But prison restrictions which prevented press interviews with men awaiting superior court appearances have been removed, Deputy State Atty. Gen. Gloria DeHart told Judge Samuel W. Gardiner yesterday.

She said Magee could be interviewed if the permission of the prisoner, his attorneys and the judge were obtained.

The judge's permission is needed, she said, because of a ban on pretrial publicity concerning Magee's case.

He and Angela Y. Davis are charged with murder, conspiracy and kidnapping in connection with an escape shoot-out attempt Aug. 7 at the Marin Hall of Justice. Their case will return to court March 16 for hearing of defense motions.

NEW COUNSEL

Bell and Robert D. Carrow of Novato were appointed to represent Magee after Sausalito attorney A. Leonard Bjorklund Jr. asked to be relieved of the assignment, citing Magee's refusal to cooperate.

Bell and Carrow reportedly have had little more success in winning Magee's cooperation.

Despite Mrs. DeHart's explanation of the new regulations yesterday, Berg pressed his case, asking the judge to set a deadline within which time Mrs. Yarish should be allowed to interview Magee, but Gardiner decided to continue the matter.

For one thing, Carrow and Bell wanted to listen to the tape.

The hearing will resume at 9:30 a.m. Monday.

Study Vetoed On Managerial Pay

Marin County supervisors decided yesterday they don't want to pay $15,000 to $20,000 for an outside consultant firm to study the salary scales of county management employees and to develop criteria for future pay raises.

Supervisors voted 3 to 2 to reject a proposal presented by Edward N. Hay and Associates of San Francisco. Arnold M. Baptiste and Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. dissented.

Without a systematic way to evaluate the work of department heads and assistants, Baptiste argued, pay raises granted to top brass would be subject to criticism from the public.

The study by Hay and Associates would give the personnel department a tool to justify the salaries and raises, said Baptiste.

Supervisors Louis H. Baar, John F. McInnis and Michael Wornum felt the pay scale of department heads and assistants could be worked out by county staff. They asked Mrs. Rinne to come back with a report in about a month.

Of the county's 1,200 employees, less than 100 are in the managerial category. They are paid flat sums as determined by the county supervisors.

Salaries of county employees who are not members of employee groups or unions are determined each year after bargaining session with the various employee organizations.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors Also:

FESTIVAL — Supported the College of Marin Foundation's efforts to raise $14,000 to send the college drama department to participate in the Edinburgh Festival in Scotland in August. College of Marin, only the third American university to be invited to the festival, will present the "Taming of the Shrew." The College Foundation has already raised $11,500.

AIRPORT — Voted, 4-1, Baptiste dissenting, to refuse owners of property adjacent to Gnoss Field taxiway access to the field. The action was based on a county aviation commission recommendation. An owner of one adjacent parcel has declined to sell his property to the county to expand the airport unless he receives taxiway access. The county has condemned the property.

ARCHITECTS — Assured architect Robert W. F. Severin that the county will publicize proposed construction projects so that Marin Architects can present their proposals for consideration. Severin charged that architects living in Marin get only 2.2 per cent of architectural work for the county.

CONTRACTORS — Decided that all county bid documents will hereafter require bidders to list their state contractor's license numbers. David G. Greenlee, executive manager of Marin Builders Exchange, complained that the county sometimes lets contracts to unlicensed vendors.

ADVISORY — Approved formation of a Traffic Advisory Committee to review various requests for traffic safety measures, such as stop signs and traffic lights. The committee will be composed of representatives from the California Highway Patrol, county department of public works, the state Division of Highways, and from an automobile club.

SLIDE — Signed an agreement with the state division of Highways for $80,300 in repairs to slide damage on Lucas Valley Road east of Big Rock Ranch. Public Works Director Donald R. Frost said the funds for the job will come from federal disaster relief.

LIBRARY — Approved a $20,577 outlay for soils and materials testing, sewer line relocation, ditch construction, and soil stabilization for the new county library branch in Corte Madera.

SUIT— Authorized County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney to defend the county against a $1,580,078 suit by Robert E. McKee Co., builder of the Hall of Justice. McKee contends he was forced to do extra work because of errors and omissions in contract documents.

PRESERVE — Approved land conservation contracts giving tax breaks for these three properties: The 334-acre Rico Bordessa dairy ranch on Shoreline Highway between Olema and Point Reyes Station; 11 acres which Harold E. Gregg saved for public use at the top of Mt. Barnaby; and 10 acres to be added to the 300-acre Jordan L. Martinelli ranch north of Bolinas, which is already under contract.

LSD Case Jury Still Not Seated

I-J Special Report

UKIAH — Jury selection still was incomplete yesterday after six days of court efforts to seat a panel for the trial of four Marinites and three other persons arrested during a $3 million LSD raid in Fort Bragg last June.

Myrtle Turner, acting as clerk for visiting Judge Kenneth M. Eyemann of Sonoma County, said she could not tell whether jury selection could be completed today.

Most of yesterday's court time was consumed with attorneys' arguments rather than questioning prospective jurymen, she reported.

Marin residents on trial in the Mendocino County Superior Court are Craig B. Champie, 20, of Fairfax; John R. Rodigou and Michael B. Alwyn, both 23 and both of San Rafael, and Wayne Butler, 23, of Forest Knolls.

Judge Eyemann was assigned to the trial after both Mendocino County Superior Court judges and another visiting judge were disqualified earlier this month.

The Marinites, two other men and a woman each were charged with conspiring to make LSD, manufacturing it, possessing it and having the halucinatory drug for sale.

Day-Care Issue: 'Sounding Board'

The need for another day-care center for the San Anselmo-Fairfax area will be discussed on KTIM's "Marin Sounding Board" at 9 a.m. tomorrow.

Panelists will include Mrs. Sydney Bloch, committee chairman for day care study in Marin and representing the Marin National Council of Jewish Women; Reginald Hammond, superintendent of the Fairfax School District; Ona Hall, of the county department of social services; and Joseph Denhart, director of day care centers of the county school department.

Listeners may phone in questions during the live broadcast on Thursday. The taped discussion will be rebroadcast Sunday at 10:05 a.m.

Pedestrian's Injuries Minor

A 14-year-old San Rafael youth suffered bruised hands when hit by a car Sunday as he crossed D Street, San Rafael police said yesterday.

Bruce J. Ford of 104 Lochinvar Road, San Rafael, according to police, said he and his friend were crossing D Street at 4:46 p.m. in the pedestrian crosswalk when he was struck by a car turning off Fifth Avenue and was knocked to the street.

Police cited the driver of the car, Fred W. Dickson, 61, of 7699 Lakeville Road, Petaluma, for failure to yield.

Window Smashers' Testimony Is Taken

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Two men convicted of breaking windows of businesses which advertised in the struck San Rafael Independent-Journal have testified in secret before a special grand jury investigating organized crime.

Witnesses who appear before the grand jury were forbidden by court order from disclosing their testimony, but an attorney for one of the men said questions at the Tuesday session indicated the jury was investigating possible violations of the Hobbs Act.

The act forbids "interference with commerce by threats or violence," said Cecil Poole, former U.S. Attorney in San Francisco.

The two men, Grant W. Anders, 30, of Oakland, and James R. Brocato, 31, of Santa Rosa, are to be sentenced March 5 in Solano County Superior Court after pleading guilty to felony counts of conspiring to break windows of Independent-Journal advertisers. A third man awaiting sentence on the same count, but evidently not figuring in the grand jury probe, is Dennis J. Crowley, 41, of San Jose.

All three pleaded guilty Jan. 26, after their case was transferred from Marin Courts. The three were arrested last June while cruising near the Strawberry Shopping Center in a car containing chunks of printers lead, slingshots and a list of I-J advertisers.

Both are also members of the Typographical Union, which struck the Independent-Journal Jan. 7, 1969, although the Marin County daily has continued publishing.

Poole and another attorney representing the men, Duane Beeson, said the questions asked in the secret session concerned the strike as well as possible violations of the Hobbs Act.

"Beyond that it is pure speculation" to guess at what the jury is seeking, the attorneys said.

Three other witnesses who testified at Tuesday's session were Larry Stanfield, Marin County Sheriff's deputy who arrested Anders, Brocado and a third man last June; an FBI agent, and a postal inspector.

McClosky Talk At College Off

Rep. Paul N. (Pete) McCloskey, R.-Portola Valley, has canceled a speech on population and politics scheduled for tomorrow at College of Marin, according to E. Allen Arnold of Zero Population Growth of Marin.

Speaking in his place at 8:30 p.m. at Olney Hall will be Dr. John H. Hessel, national director of education for Zero Population Growth and a research associate at Stanford University, Arnold said.

The talk is sponsored by Arnold's group, and the Planned Parenthood Association as part of the college's "Spaceship Earth: Love It or Leave It" lecture series.

Two Money Bags Reported Stolen

Two money bags containing $400 in cash and $50 worth of whiskey and vodka were reported stolen early Saturday from the Pago Pago Bar at 803 Fourth Street, San Rafael, police have reported.

Owner Geraldine A. Nardi of 4 Elford Street, San Rafael, told police she found the door in the rear of the garbage room pried open as well as the door to a small inner room where the liquor and money bags were stored. She said approximately $250 damage was done to the doors.

Coast Guard Will Open Collision Probe Tomorrow

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The Coast Guard will open a hearing tomorrow to look into the cause of a near collision last month of an ammunition ship and an oil tanker off the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge.

Leo H. Wuesthoff of Oakland, a licensed river and bay pilot who was captain of the tanker Stolt Condor, has been accused of violating "rules of the road."

The Coast Guard has not made public the basis for the charges which could lead to suspension or revocation of Wuesthoff's license if he is found guilty.

The president of the California Inland Pilots Association, however, gave a description of the near collision at a Congressional subcommittee's inquiry into the January tanker crash which caused a massive oil spill.

Capt. Gar Long said the near miss occurred Jan. 30 in light fog. He said he was piloting the Overseas Suzanne and had the right of way under navigational rules but had to order his ship full astern to avoid a collision with the tanker.

"Fortunately," the captain of the ammunition ship told the committee, "the Suzanne did not ground on Invincible Rock . . nor did we collide with the Stolt Condor."

Long said that he had radioed a request to the tanker that his ship be allowed to go under the bridge first but that the tanker captain had responded that he was heading through at full speed.

The hearing will open at 10 a.m. tomorrow in the Appraisers Building in San Francisco.

Death Threat, $300 Taken

A Terra Linda couple was robbed of $300 by three men who invaded their home early Monday and threatened to kill them, Marin County Sheriff's office reported yesterday.

Frank Albert Garguilo, owner of Maria's Pueblo Restaurant in San Rafael, told deputies the doorbell rang at about 12:40 a.m. at his residence at 221 Orris Terrace.

When he opened the door, three men wearing ski masks — one of whom carried a gun — rushed in and demanded money, he said.

After threatening to kill Garguilo and his wife, Sherry, the men tied them up with clothesline, ripped out the telephone wire and fled with receipts from Garguilo's restaurant.

Try Hand At Curry Cookery

The elaborate combinations of freshly ground seasonings called masalas distinguish Indian cooking from any other cuisine in the world. One of the most popular blends is called "garam masala," a basic version including peppercorns, cumin seeds, cardamom pods, coriander, cloves and stick cinnamon. Fortunately, a blend of these spices is available in the form of "curry powder" so that we can enjoy the flavors of Indian cooking without all the labors of preparation.

This recipe for curry is characterized by its sauce made with milk and butter. All sorts of other surprises appear in the sauce; bacon bits, chopped onions, fresh cauliflower, celery and even apples and plum preserves.

Keep in mind this basic rule when preparing curry — curry sauce is thickened before the meat is added, in this case the chicken.

No Indian curry is complete unless it's served with condiments. Go wild with everything you have on hand . . . raisins, coconut, almonds or peanuts, chopped green pepper, hard-cooked eggs, cubed bananas, chopped pickles and chutney.

CHICKEN CURRY

3 slices bacon, cut-up
1 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter
⅓ cup regular all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons curry powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
1 cup water
1 cup sliced cauliflower
½ cup sliced celery
2 chicken bouillon cubes
½ cup plum preserves
2 cups chopped cooked chicken
2 cups shopped unpeeled red cooking apples
1 cup shredded coconut
hot cooked saffron rice

In a 3-quart saucepan cook bacon and onion until bacon is cooked; add butter and stir until melted. Stir in flour, curry powder and salt. Remove from heat; gradually add milk and water. Add cauliflower, celery, bouillon cubes and preserves. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add chicken, apples and coconut. Heat over low heat to serving temperature, stirring occasionally (about 5 minutes).

Serve with rice and one or more of the following condiments — chopped green pepper, chopped pickles, cubed banana chopped peanuts, slivered toasted almonds, chopped hard-cooked eggs, raisins, chutney. Makes 8-10 servings.

Marinate Lamb Chops For Best Flavor

Every good cook keeps a collection of set recipes filed away in her mind for use on special occasions. There are traditional holiday recipes, family favorites, her mother-in-law's apple pie, and certain company dishes.

Here is a new one for Continental Lamb Chops. Their superb flavor comes from the idea of marinating the chops in Italian rose dressing for a couple of hours before you start cooking them.

The marinade is also thriftly incorporated into the sauce. Simply add the pan drippings to it, along with some currant jelly and a bit of flour to thicken. Presto, there's a luscious sauce to serve over the chops.

Come serving time, garnish the chops with halved apples baked with a small scoop of herbed croutons in each. Green beans Almondine make a nice vegetable accompaniment.

LAMB CHOPS, when prepared in this continental style, become a company meal. Their superb flavor comes from marinating each chop in an Italian rose dressing which is also incorporated into a tasty sauce.

CONTINENTAL LAMB CHOPS

8 shoulder lamb chops
1 bottle (8 oz.) Italian rose dressing
1 medium onion, sliced
2 tablespoons currant jelly
1 tablespoon flour
Baked apples (optional)

In large bowl, place chops; add Italian rose dressing. Marinate 2 to 3 hours, turning meat occasionally.

Remove chops from marinade (reserve liquid). Place chops in large heavy skillet; add ½ cup marinade and onion. Simmer covered, 1 hour or until tender. Transfer meat to warm platter.

Skim fat from drippings. In medium saucepan, combine drippings, remaining marinade, jelly, and flour; heat, stirring occasionally.

Serve chops on platter, garnished with baked apples. Serve sauce separately. Makes 4 servings.

FAVORITE RECIPES

Tried And True From Terra Lindans

A cookbook of 800 recipes titled "Tried and True" is the latest project of the St. Isabella's Women's Guild of Terra Linda.

Mrs. Raymond M. Kelleher is cookbook chairman, assisted by Mmes. Andrew Parodi, George Pfautsch, Robert McIntosh and Ronald Moresco.

The unique and colorful cover was designed by Mrs. Richard Hunter. An unusual section of special dinner menus was organized by Mrs. Harry Humphreys. A men's section and a section of teen-age favorites are included. The cookbook is available from Mrs Kelleher or Mrs. Humphreys.

ORANGE PORT MOLD

2 3-oz. pkgs. black cherry flavored gelatin
1½ cups boiling water
3 oranges
1 cup port wine
1 cup orange juice

Dissolve black cherry gelatin in the 1½ cups boiling water. Peel oranges; section each, reserving juice and cut up pulp. Add enough water to reserved juice to make ½ cup liquid. Stir into dissolved gelatin along with wine and the additional 1 cup orange juice. Chill mixture till partially set. Fold in cut up oranges; pour into 6 cup ring mold. Chill until firm; unmold and fill center with salad greens. Makes 10-12 servings.

Mrs. Robert Doyle

APRICOT MARMALADE JAM

2 lbs. apricots (chopped or ground)
1 medium orange (chopped or ground)
juice of one lemon
½ bottle (10-oz. jar) maraschino cherries and juice chopped
18 oz. can crushed pineapple (drained)
5 cups sugar
½ bottle of Certo

Combine apricots, citrus, fruit, cherries, pineapple, juices and sugar in a large saucepan. Mix well. Place over high heat and bring to full rolling boil. Boil hard for three minutes stirring constantly. Remove from heat and stir in Certo at once. Fill glasses and cover with hot paraffin.

Mrs. Thomas Lydon

MUSTARD MOLD

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
1 cup mayonnaise
½ cup prepared mustard
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
½ cup cream, whipped

Soften gelatin in cold water. Stir over low heat until dissolved. Cool. Combine mayonnaise, mustard, salt and paprika. Stir in gelatin. Chill until slightly thickened; fold in whipped cream. Pour into 1 qt. mold, chill.

This is best served as a relish for cold meats, which makes it especially suitable for a buffet. For smaller parties cut recipe in half.

Mrs. Harry Humphreys

EASY BAKED HAM

5 lb. canned ham
can of frozen orange juice
brown sugar

Wrap ham in aluminum foil. Bake in slow oven 325° for 3-4 hrs. Take orange juice and enough brown sugar to make a thick sauce. Pour over ham and bake slowly for 1 hour.

During the last 15 min. open the foil at the top.

Mrs. Robert McIntosh

CHICKEN KIEV

Buy chicken breasts boned and halved. Skin breasts and pound between two sheets of wax paper until about ⅜" thick. Sprinkle chives, salt, pepper, garlic salt inside chicken. Make butter blocks and starting at end, fold butter and all ingredients envelope style. Tuck in sides and fasten with toothpick.

Dip chicken into mixture of flour, egg, breadcrumbs, then milk again and breadcrumbs again.

Refrigerate overnight.

Heat oil in pan 350° (or use deep fryer) and brown lightly. Place on cookie sheet lined with foil and bake about 15 minutes.

'Competition Is So Keen'

By PAT BALMES

Planning to follow her mother into professional ice skating, 15-year-old Hetti Schramm of Greenbrae practices 20 hours a week, before school and after homework and dinner.

"Hetti puts great self discipline and emotion into her routines," says her mother, former Ice Capades star Nadine Schramm. "She has a wonderful feeling for choreographing the new music that appeals to the younger generation." At home, the Redwood High School sophomore uses her keen ear to condense music into short tapes for her ice skating routines. "Hetti has chosen a hard field," says her mother. "Now competition is so keen that there are very few openings in the big ice shows. She may follow her rare talent for choreography to plan ice show productions."

The determined girl rises at 5:15 a.m. daily and is on the ice at 6 a.m., driven there by her father, owner and ice skating teacher at Raydine Ice Skating Rink in Corte Madera.

After two hours of figures, jumps, spins and free footwork Ray Schramm, also a former ice follies star, drives his tall, pretty daughter to school. Each evening they are back at the rink between 5:45 to 7:45 p.m. She is preparing for the free-style portion of the seventh test and figures part of the eighth test before she becomes a gold medalist, qualified to compete in local and sectional competitions.

"MOST CHILDREN who are working this hard are helped by this self discipline. They have hardly a minute to themselves so they learn to use their time efficiently. If the children are doing things they want to do, they will be happy. You cannot give them too much if the work is their decision, not yours," says Nadine.

Hetti has time for weekly ballet lessons, sewing, baking, music taping and is helping her mother choreograph the Marin Figure Skating Club's show to be held May 1, 2 and 3.

For petite Nadine, watching her daughter prepare for her ice skating career is like living her own life over again. A native of San Francisco, the brunette attended Commodore Sloat School, Everett Jr. High and Mission High School. Her mother, an accomplished pianist, played for a dance studio and three-year-old Nadine came along to class to follow behind the big girls.

"I learned the singing, tap-dancing Shirley Temple bit," recalls Nadine. She danced with the San Francisco Ballet. With dancing background and a touch of theatrical blood in her veins, ice skating came naturally to Nadine, even at the late starting age of 10.

She gratefully recalls that the girl's dean of her high school allowed her to attend school only half a day, so she could practice every afternoon. She skipped gym, lunch and study periods. Her father picked her up daily at school at 12:30 p.m. She ate and changed her clothes in the car on the way to a train across the Bay Bridge. She practiced after school every day and on Saturdays at the Berkeley Ice Arena.

"I had complete support from both my parents," explains Nadine. "When I finished high school I was in the right place at the right time. Ice Follies and Ice Capades were forming a third company called Ice Cycles. The owners had seen me in pop concerts at Berkeley. She signed a contract in 1946 as a star soloist and pair skater. The teen-ager skated with Ice Cycles for two seasons, traveling 11 months out of the year.

WHILE SHE was on vacation in San Francisco in the summer of 1948 Nadine dined at a Chinese restaurant with a group of skaters. She was seated next to Ray Schramm, who was appearing with his twin brother in the Ice Follies at Winterland here. Two weeks later he gave Nadine an engagement ring. But they were soon separated because their different companies again went on the road. They made a "tremendous contribution" to Trans World Air Lines during their three-month transcontinental courtship.

"I was under contract for two key spots in the Ice Cycles Show," explains Nadine. "I just could not leave. We intended to be married in San Francisco

Food Stores To Hire More Women

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — It makes sense that the hands which push the cart at the supermarket also should help to pull down some of the jobs connected with the store operation.

Which is one way of saying that food stores are hiring more women, many for jobs once considered man's work.

One of the reasons is woman's talent as a housekeeper, which carries over into store operation. Another is the fact that even at a time when unemployment is high, there may not be a man available for the job.

"With the male labor pool tight in many areas . . . a good man these days may be hard to find," says Progressive Grocer in its current issue. "To fill the gap, many retailers are giving more thought to hiring women on a part-time or full-time basis for jobs usually filled by men."

THE PUBLICATION, in a review of the growing numbers of women in food retailing, cites as one example Bob Young, operator of four IGA supermarkets in Ohio. Young found part-time women workers successful in increasing sales and reducing out-of-stocks in his frozen foods departments. His stores, he added, are in small towns and are not high-volume businesses.

Fireco Sales, Ltd., Canada's largest service merchandiser with some 1,800 food stores spread throughout the dominion, started hiring women part-time three years ago. They worked primarily in rural and small town areas.

Fireco's President Michael Firestone said the project started as a way of having personnel on the scene when store shipments arrived. If shipments were delayed, it would save the company travelling salesman costs if someone in the neighborhood could check arrivals. No juggling of schedules, no costly long distance trips.

Women, he said, found the part-time jobs a good way of "getting out of the house," earning extra money, and still keeping up with the housework and children.

FIRESTONE SAID women in the main were the non-breadwinner, non-career types, often meaning less job turnover than with men who "tend to be more ambitious . . . impatient if growth opportunities are not immediately apparent."

Firestone said his company's experience with both the part-time and the full-time worker indicated the full-timer is more likely to produce better results.

He cited two reasons. The full-timer is more serious about her work. And working full-time maintains a pace that leads to more productivity through job knowledge and a "feel for the business."

Awards Given To Six Women Who Influence Government

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The six winners of the Federal Woman's Award this year know how to keep Uncle Sam's top secrets and have shown their skills in the fields of space dieting, social work, public health and statistics.

The women were selected for the honors because of their influence on major government programs and their unique contributions to a women's lib breakthrough.

Jeanne Wilson Davis, a native of Long Beach, who devised and installed procedures for handling foreign policy paper work in the National Security Council, was one of the winners.

SHE DESCRIBES herself as a "sort of traffic manager" preparing briefing books for President Nixon and his national security affairs adviser, Dr. Henry A. Kissinger.

Miss Davis coordinates staff work and schedules and records the meetings and work of the NSC which deliberates Nixon's top foreign policy moves around the world.

Another winner in the hush hush department is Juanita Morris Moody, born in Morven, N.C. She is a cryptologist and chief intelligence officer of the National Security Agency.

Among her achievements was her outstanding performance during the Cuban missile crisis in 1962 when she was put in charge of a division of the agency which was directly concerned with the crisis, and she did not leave her post until the danger had abated. During the emergency she displayed extraordinary executive talent and was later commended by President Kennedy.

A specialist in public health research, she was the first black woman graduate of the University of Maryland's statistics and research doctoral program.

She has said her use of neighborhood people to assist the Health Department's staff in Washington, D.C., in the ghetto areas has "helped to draw people back from deeply entrenched negativism and feelings about black genocide."

Essie Davis Morgan, born in Waycross, Ga., is a director of social work who has done highly original work in developing the social and emotional aspects of the care and treatment of Veterans Administration patients and their families.

She comes from a closely knit Negro family, and she and her four brothers were able to surmount formidable barriers to high achievement. Three brothers became professional scientists and the fourth, Ossie Davis, is a noted actor, director and playwright. Mrs. Morgan began her career with the Veterans Administration with the VA hospital in Tuskegee, Ala., in 1949.

RITA M. Rapp is an environmental physiologist, aerospace technologist and senior researcher in the functional systems areas of Apollo food and feeding systems.

A native of Piqua, Ohio, she tested living on daily diet consumed by the three Apollo 14 astronauts during their moon voyage and found "it really has a good flavor."

Joan Raup Rosenblatt, a mathematician and internationally recognized expert in statistics, developed new methods in the National Bureau of Standards where she has spent all of her government career since she joined the bureau in 1955. She recently assisted the Selective Service System in preparing for the random selection of sequence numbers for draft registrants.

How Can She Get Her Son To Fight For The Girl He Wants?

DEAR HELEN:

My son, age 28, has been going out with a wonderful girl for five years. She and I couldn't see why they didn't get married, so she started to drop hints, too.

Well, there was a fight, and he dropped her. You never saw a more miserable girl, and I was terribly upset also. I told him what a mistake he was making.

After two months my son had a change of heart and said he was ready for marriage. He went over to tell the girl and, Helen, you won't believe this: She said she had met a "wonderful fellow" and the marriage was set for spring.

No amount of talk would change her mind. I really tried, as I always felt she would be the perfect daughter-in-law. I think if my son would try harder, he might still win her — after all, five years can't be brushed off, while a two-month friendship can't be serious. But he just shrugs.

How can I get him to fight for what he wants?

DISAPPOINTED AND CONCERNED

DEAR D AND C.:

What he wants, or what you want?

Your son appears more relieved than bereaved. So shrug, too, Mamma.

H.

DEAR HELEN:

For years I have been aware of my homosexual tendencies. My doctor said there was no cure, and he advised women of this type against marriage. I hated my weakness, wouldn't give in to it, and determined to cure myself.

So I married a man who interested me very much. He fit well into my athletically active life, and I tried to love him. I thought I succeeded, but somehow we drifted into a nothing relationship.

We barely talk, though we are not angry. My mind is just whirling with the things we used to do, but now if I mention these activities the response is "Maybe tomorrow." It never comes. So I've been doing things on my own or with friends. The only time I get any real attention at home is when my husband decides he "needs" me.

In the beginning, I thought surely he could keep me on the right track, but now my interests are with someone else, and it's not a man.

I'm scared. I want to be morally straight, but these years of no communication and dwindling activities are slowly pushing me out of bounds. I feel guilty that I can't respond to my husband, and even guiltier when I can't control my fantasies.

Do you think having a baby would put me straight?

SO ALONE

DEAR ALONE:

No! Having a baby would only make you more confused. In-depth therapy is your hope. You've lived with undeserved guilt far too long.

H.

DEAR HELEN:

"Animal Lover" has a point. Who can afford to have animals altered nowadays? The cost has more than doubled in the past ten years: Over $40 to have a cat spayed in New York, and the Friends of Animals Society has no participating vet in our area. Even so, the F.A.S. cost would be around $20 (and you must show "need" which is embarrassing). The ASPCA should do more to help people who would adopt pets but can't afford to control their repopulating. A big campaign to have the State offer pet "altering" at minimum fees (veterinarians to be paid from tax money now spent on operating pounds, etc.) would be much more helpful than wailing about cruelty to animals.

The Facts Of Grapefruit Life

NEW YORK (UPI)—Do you think grapefruit tastes like grapes? Well, in the late 1700s someone thought it did, and that's how grapefruit got its name.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service, there is reason for those who relish grapefruit to rejoice. The current crop is up 24 per cent over last season's. Like other citrus fruits, grapefruit is packed with vitamin C.

Why Congress Is Considering Bills On 'No Fault' Insurance

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — One of the most controversial issues facing the new Congress is the question of what todo about automobile insurance.

Almost every one of the approximately 80 million automobile owners in this country has had some sort of complaint about the price of handling of insurance against losses due to accidental injury or property damage.

Based on extensive studies done in recent years, many of these complaints are justified. Almost everyone acquainted with the present system, including some influential industry leaders, concede that some sort of sweeping reform is necessary.

A $2 MILLION study done by the Department of Transportation has recently confirmed an earlier study by the Senate Subcommittee on Antitrust and Monopoly showing that only one dollar out of every two that are paid in comes back in benefits to the motoring public.

What is worse, victims of accidents are not compensated fairly. The ones who suffer less than $500 in losses get more than four times what they actually lose while the ones who lose more than $25,000 get only one-third of their actual losses through the present system.

A study done in New York state showed that only 14.5 cents out of every dollar paid in premiums came back in payment for economic losses not covered by Blue Cross or other insurance.

The basic trouble, according to these studies, is the necessity of proving who is at fault in an accident before claims are paid.

THE DELAYS and expenses involved in proving fault have sent company costs and lawyers' fees skyrocketing. The New York study showed that 23 cents of the premium dollar went to pay lawyers and claims investigators and 33 cents more went for company costs.

Most of these expenses could be wiped out, say proponents of a plan to eliminate the necessity of proving fault before payment of claims. And, they add, a "no-fault" system could also reduce the present time lag in making payments. The average court case takes 16 months to settle.

Such a plan has been gaining support steadily since it was proposed in 1965 in a book, "After Cars Crash. . . the Need for Legal and Insurance Reform," by Robert E. Keeton and Jeffrey O'Connell.

But it has faced rough going in the state legislatures where it has been introduced because of opposition by industry leaders who can call on support from the many lawyers and insurance agents who serve as legislators.

ONLY ONE state, Massachusetts, has adopted the "no-fault" concept. Under a new law that went into effect on Jan. 1, a motorist can collect directly from his insuring company for personal injury expenses up to $2,000.

Results after one month showed a substantial drop of 50 per cent in such claims from the previous January, but property damage claims rose 10 per cent. It is too early to tell exactly what these changes mean, but they appear to prove the contention that "no-fault" can cut a lot of costs.

Another optimistic note is the growing acceptance of the need for change among insurance companies. Two years ago, the "no-fault" concept was endorsed by the American Insurance Association, a group of companies writing about 30 per cent of the auto insurance business.

Last December, two groups representing almost all other companies endorsed a limited "no-fault" plan which leaves most of the present system intact.

The big test will come in forthcoming Congressional hearings on bills that would set up a comprehensive "no-fault" system throughout the country.

Freshness Codes

About 30 per cent of most grocery items fall into categories carrying freshness codes. These codes indicate the date on which an item is packaged or the suggested date for removal from sale stocks.

White Wash In Dirty Water?

By GLORIA WOLFORD

NEW YORK (UPI)—Detergent companies tend to regard housewives as "mindless nits."

That is the view of a group of University of Toronto scientists and, true or false, detergent companies apparently do see the housewife as a woman concerned only with whether her wash is as white or whiter than her neighbor's.

There are three elements in detergents which have scientists worried:

—Phosphates which speed the growth of algae in lakes and streams, cutting off oxygen for marine life and turning lakes into swamps.

—Enzymes which doctors say have caused allergic reactions —skin and lung diseases—in workers in detergent plants and whose effect on housewives has never been tested.

—Nitrilotiacetic acid (NTA) which some companies began using as a substitute for phosphates and which scientists fear may be even more of a pollutant.

In December, detergent companies voluntarily agreed to suspend the use of NTA pending further testing and at the beginning of February Lever Brothers said it was discontinuing the use of enzymes. Union officials at a plant owned by Procter and Gamble, makers of Tide, the nation's largest selling detergent, also said enzymes were being taken out. Procter and Gamble, however, refused to comment.

WITH NTA banned at least temporarily and enzymes apparently on their way out as the darling of the detergent industry, that leaves phosphates, and American housewives are pouring phosphate laden detergents into the nation's waters at the rate of five billion pounds a year.

Phosphates soften water and disperse dirt in clothes and were regarded as a major breakthrough when they were put on the market in the 1940s. The detergent industry, through its spokesman, The Soap and Detergent Association, maintains there is no proof that phosphates are killing lakes and streams and has vowed to fight any attempt to ban them.

The industry's second line of defense—offered in testimony before the House Committee on government Operations last April—is that instead of banning detergents, communities ought to build more sophisticated sewage treatment plants to take phosphates out before wash water is discharged.

BUT SUCH plants would cost billions and take many years to complete even if communities could find the money. President Nixon's $10 billion program to provide improved sewage facilities contains only $4 billion in federal funds. Local communities, already financially pressed, have to come up with the rest.

Meanwhile, a group of scientists at the University of Toronto are asking housewives to take the initiative in fighting phosphate pollution.

"The large detergent companies seem to regard the housewife as a mindless nit who has completely swallowed their whiter than advertising and therefore doesn't care about detergent pollution," the university group said. "We believe that there are a great number of concerned housewives who want to do their part to fight pollution but the basic information has until now been lacking."

Population And United Nations

NEW YORK (UPI)—Julia Henderson, United Nations associate commissioner for technical cooperation, has a new job. She is the first woman to serve as secretary-general of the International Planned Parenthood Federation.

Commenting on her appointment and new responsibilities, Miss Henderson said: "I am convinced that the population problem deserves a higher priority in terms of development resources than it has yet been given by the membership of the United Nations."

The Sullivan Reading Program made him a reading "all-star."

It's great to be a winner. No one wants to be a loser, yet many, many kids lose out every day in school because they can't keep up in the classroom. They just can't read adequately.

The Sullivan Reading Program has been making winners out of kids for years. In fact, more than five million school children have used nationally acclaimed Sullivan Reading Materials to improve their reading skills. Sullivan Reading Centers utilize these well-tested Sullivan materials to provide supplemental reading instruction for children at all school levels. (Ask your child's teacher about the Sullivan Reading Program.)

Sullivan Reading Centers offer personalized reading instruction and self-paced group instruction for your child. Classes are small, and a step by step Sullivan teaching program of reading success builds confidence while it improves your son or daughter's reading skills. He'll work at his own pace, competing only with himself, and he or she can come to the Center any day of the week or on Saturday morning. If he needs additional time to make sufficient progress during the course, he's given the extra time at no additional cost. Initial testing and all materials used by the students are also included in the $60 fee for the four-week course.

If your child's like most of our students, he'll enjoy the time spent at the Center as much as he does on the baseball diamond. He knows we believe in "all-stars," too.

but all the kids in the show wanted us to be married in the company. So when Ray came to Dallas, where some of my relatives had accummulated, I asked him, 'would you like to marry me now?"

Nadine even skated on her wedding day! When the bride introduced her solo number they played, "Here Comes the Bride." She continued to skate with Ice Cycles even though Ray had to return to Ice Follies. But within three months, Nadine was hired by Ice Follies where Ray was skating with his twin brother. They stayed a year and a half practicing two hours a day and performing matinees and evenings.

"I would have hated to give it up," says Nadine. "It was so much a part of my life." Compatible even through the long hours of rigorous work, Nadine and Ray agree it would be horrible to have to perform with somebody with whom you were not compatible. When you have to perform before an audience of 16,000 people and all eyes are upon you, you have to be at your very best.

Next they skated solo and in a pair in Hotel dining rooms across the country. It was financially more rewarding than the big ice shows, according to Mrs. Schramm.

Returning to San Francisco between hotel bookings, Nadine learned that some of her former dancing teacher's pupils were interested in ice skating lessons.

"WE LIKED the idea of putting down roots," recalls Nadine. Beginning with 35 names on the list posted at the dance studio, the Schramms accummulated several hundred pupils at the 48th Avenue Skating Rink in San Francisco during the next year and a half.

"We didn't miss the traveling. We had it out of our systems. We wanted our own ice rink," says Nadine. So she and Ray built a small rink, "wall-to-wall ice and a small reception room" on Redwood Highway in Mill Valley 16 years ago.

"We did everything from bookkeeping to cleaning for the first eight years on a seven-day-a-week program, without any time together. We were never able to close the door and walk away and forget it," said Nadine while relaxing in her immaculate home furnished with Oriental pieces collected on her step-father'? trips to the Far East, as chief steward with Matson Lines.

"When Hetti was born, Ray said our children would come first in my life. So I fit my working schedule around their needs. When children are younger, they are demanding but they do not need you as much personally as they do when they are growing up and developing character."

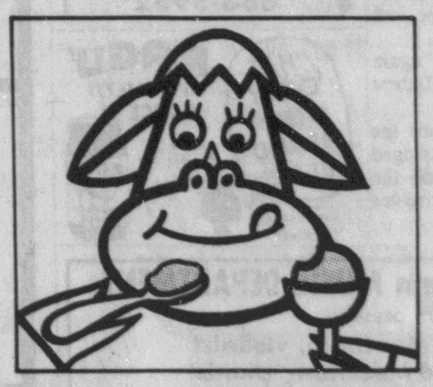
SECRET FOUND IN GRANDMOO'S SEWING BOX

"My new ice cream is just like Grandmoo used to make," says dairy industry celebrity.

Something old was announced to Redwood Empire ice cream lovers when Clo, famous spokes-cow for Clover Brand, introduced her new Clover Country Ice Cream.

"The recipe was Grandmoo's secret for many years," Clo said. "We found it in her sewing box, hidden among the thimbles and vanilla beans."

"And now, Clover Brand brings back this old-fashioned country ice cream for everyone in Clover Country to enjoy," she explained. "Its creamy smoothness and country-fresh taste take you right back to the joys of childhood."



Clo paused thoughtfully, then suddenly ambled off, mooing happily. "Hey, Clo," this reporter yelled, "Where you heading?"

"To the nearest store for some of that delicious, ever-lovin' Clover Country Ice Cream," she called, breaking into a full gallop.

"Wait for us," we muttered, strapping on our roller skates.

When you head for your favorite food store for some old-fashioned Clover Country Ice Cream, here's the brand new, zip-open carton to look for. It's as different as the ice cream inside it.

STANDS FIRM — George C. Scott as he appears in his role in "Patton" has asked his name be withdrawn from the Academy Award best actor race. His position was made known in a telegram yesterday to the academy board.

Scott Emphatic On Oscar Race Position

TORREMOLINOS, Spain (UPI)—George C. Scott asked Tuesday that his name be dropped from the list of nominations for the Academy Award.

Scott sent a cablegram to the Academy of Arts and Sciences in Hollywood saying "I simply do not wish to be involved. I will not attend the award ceremony nor will any approved representative of mine attend."

It was the second time Scott had asked his name be withdrawn for Oscar consideration. In 1961 he was nominated for best supporting actor in "The Hustler," and asked his name be stricken from the list. It was not, but he failed to win an Oscar.

"Once again, I respectfully request that you withdraw my name from the list of nominees," Scott said Tuesday. "My persistence in this matter has been generally well known for some 10 years. Please understand that my request is in no way intended to denigrate my colleagues, who saw fit to nominate me. Nor is it intended to insult or hurt the many talented people with whom and for whom I worked on "Patton."

Scott in the past has criticized the methods of nominating and selecting winners of Academy Awards.

In Hollywood, the Motion Picture Academy acknowledged it had received the telegram, but refused comment.

A member of the academy board said "It is impossible for anyone's name to be withdrawn from nomination. The members will simply have to vote their conscience."

"But it proves one thing we've always known—a man can be a horse's neck and a great actor all at the same time."

Sidewalk Music Scores Resounding Legal Victory

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven—they're all legal once more on the sidewalks of San Francisco.

The longhaired young musicians who perform classical concerts on downtown street corners won a resounding legal victory Tuesday.

"It's a victory for baroque music—and justice," said defense attorney Jerrold Levitin after a municipal judge dismissed begging and blocking-the-sidewalk charges against three young men arrested while playing Haydn's Divertimenti.

Levitin said the district attorney's office, which asked for the dismissal on grounds of "insufficient evidence," has promised to seek dismissal of similar charges when the "Mozart two" appear for trial today.

Flutist Ken Cramer, 23, a former student at Eastman School of Music, was a member of both groups of musicians. Charges also were dismissed against bass viol player Richard Feves, 21, and violinist Bob Dubow, 22. Cramer returns to court on the second charge with John Bernard, 25, an oboe player.

"Mozart would be tickled if he were alive," Cramer said.

He and Bernard, who met while playing in an army band, were arrested Jan. 14 while 30 bars into Mozart's duet No. 1 for Flute and Oboe. The American Civil Liberties Union set up a "Mozart defense fund" with the slogan, "free all musical prisoners..."

Cramer was arrested again Feb. 13 with Feves and Dubow while playing Haydn.

"We were ready to face the music," said Feves, who staged a victory concert outside the bookstore after the charges were dropped.

Hong Kong Experts

HONG KONG (UPI)—A big jump in exports in 1970 has made Japan the fourth largest market for Hong Kong products, replacing Canada.

Exports to Japan last year totaled $65.5 million, 57 per cent more than in 1969.

Bragdon's Successor Is Named

City Mgr. William H. Cunningham of Mill Valley announced yesterday he has appointed Tom W. Newton, planning director for Coronado, San Diego, as Mill Valley's director of community development.

Newton, 32, will assume his duties March 22 but will visit Mill Valley several times before then "to get acquainted with his new job," Cunningham said. His yearly salary will be $15,600.

Newton succeeds Harvey M. Bragdon, who resigned to take the job of director of current planning for Marin County.

Planning director for Coronado since January 1969, Newton also was head of current planning in Sunnyvale, and served 15 months as a planner in Lansing, Mich.

The new planning director served in the Navy from 1957 to 1961 and then entered Michigan State University, where he graduated in 1965 with a bachelor of science degree in urban planning.

He is married and the father of two children.

Sixty applicants filed for the job. Final selection was made on the advice of a three-man screening committee, Cunningham said.

Hasty Pudding Award Goes To Carol Channing

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)—"I feel my status in the theater is secure now," said Carol Channing, smiling broadly.

She came Tuesday to accept the Hasty Pudding Theatricals' 21st annual Woman of the Year award and she wore her crimson boots for the official color of her host, Harvard University.

"I like the company I'm in. Mamie Eisenhower and Piper Laurie. It shows how cosmopolitan you are."

The award is a scroll and a replica of the original hasty pudding pot. The saucer-eyed blonde sported a gaucho outfit and toted a bag of organic health foods.

286 To Receive Bayview Certificates

San Quentin Bayview Schools will award 286 certificates and diplomas to inmates at the prison on Friday, according to Associate Warden Wayne A. Bartels.

He said the schools will present four associate of arts degrees from College of Marin, 47 literacy certificates, 47 elementary school diplomas, 34 high school diplomas, and 150 certificates for completing correspondence courses and prison vocational courses.

ART REVIEW

First Tombstones, Now Watery Graves

By LAURA DEVENDORF

This is the second chapter in our continuing saga of the Ant Hill, the funk and found art group from the University of California including Ben Blackwell, Nancy Evans, Leonard Hunter, James Pomeroy and Michael Wright, which is putting on a series of six weekly shows at the College of Marin gallery.

Last week we found the Ant Hill inventing a College of Marin burial ground. There,in what was formerly the gallery, we found eight very genuine headstones from a local tombstone factory. This week we find the tombstones have been replaced by two groups of four-inch deep pools constructed of plastic sheets draped over edgings of 2 by 4s and filled with colored water.

Still, the sentiment isn't far away. The group on the theater side of the gallery with its four neatly aligned long slim rectangles looks ominously like four watery graves. While on the entrance side of the room the grouping of wood, plastic and water reads like a leaded stained glass cross.

Again this week, this sparse an offering is all there is. And the statement that accompanies it remains the same:

"A gallery space always influences the receptivity and understanding of the works of art within it. Each show is affected differently. A work may seem more profound or whimsical, large or small, well or poorly made, etc., etc., than the same work located elsewhere, or, any two works of art may relate differently in one space than they do in another."

Decisions on how well those pools reflect the idea are as individual as each person's understanding of the words themselves. Meanwhile, on the practical side, this week's illustrations are causing some concern. They leak!

The janitors are worrying about the mess on the floor. One member of the art department is worrying about getting the artists back to fix the problem. Plus, now that the wood outlines are full of water, it has occurred that removing them will pose the same problem one would encounter on trying to get rid of an old water bed.

To make things more confused, not too many people seem to have figured the whole thing out and comments such as this are not unique, "An art show? Oh! I thought maybe the drama department was trying to economize by making their own gels."

Or, if they have gotten the message, taking pokes at the show still seems irresistible. For example, "You could lie down in them and get an instant tie-dye."

But perhaps the most to-the-point remark of all was one student's wistful comment, "I hope nobody trips."

Renaissance Instruments To Be Played

Lyn Elder of Mill Valley will perform on handmade medieval and renaissance musical instruments in a free program Sunday at 4 p.m. in the main room of the Mill Valley Public Library.

Elder, owner of the Magic Mountain Workshop in Mill Valley, will demonstrate exotic musicmakers which include a dulcimer, a psaltery, a rebec and a hurdy-gurdy. Elder will also perform a few bars on reed instruments he has made — the recorder, the krumm horn, the shawn and the rackett.

School's Racial Panel Disbands

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The city school system's Integration Advisory Committee has disbanded—on grounds it racially was imbalanced.

The 46-member panel told the San Francisco Board of Education to appoint a new group to advise on plans for total integration of the city's schools.

Committee members said it had too many whites—27 of the 46 members. They asked that the new committee reflect the city's school population—34 per cent English-speaking whites, 13 per cent Spanish-speaking; 28 per cent blacks, 14 per cent Chinese; 4 per cent Filipino; 1 per cent Japanese and 1 per cent other nonwhites.

Threats Of Hospital's Closing Off

I-J Special Report

SANFRANCISCO — Threats that the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital will be closed have been lifted — at least temporarily.

The staff of Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District, said yesterday that the General Accounting Office of the Comptroller General's Office in Washington has ruled the Department of Health Education and Welfare has no power to close the hospital.

As an economy measure, the department had recommended closure of the San Francisco facility and seven other PHS hospitals that cost a total of $71 million a year to operate.

The San Francisco Hospital employs about 150 Marinites, paying them between $2.5 and $3 million a year, according to hospital officials.

The ruling was made at the request of Mailliard, who had urged that the hospital remain open, the congressman's office said.

The ruling left it unclear exactly who does have the power to close the hospital, the staff said.

Elliot L. Richardson, secretary of HEW, had branded the hospitals as "inefficient and outmoded." He said patients using them could be cared for in Veteran's Administration hospitals.

Bagley Asks Unemployed Parolee Aid

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A bill requiring the state to pay basic living costs of unemployed parolees was introduced today by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael.

The bill, requested by the Marin County Board of Supervisors, would require the Department of Corrections to pay the living costs of any unemployed parolee in a vocational rehabilitation or work incentive program. The state also would pay the costs, otherwise assumed as welfare by the county, if the parolee were awaiting participation in such a program.

Marin supervisors asked for the bill because of the number of parolees from San Quentin who settle in the county after their release.

Zelinsky Is Denied Restaurant Permit

Yet another attempt by downtown landowner Fred G. Zelinsky to develop a restaurant and bar at 11 Main Street has been derailed at least temporarily by the Tiburon City Council.

The council Monday voted 4-1 to deny Zelinsky a master plan amendment which would have allowed him to build the two-story restaurant and bar on property he owns adjacent to the Windjammer. Councilman Branwell D. Fanning cast the dissenting vote.

The council's decision was based on a lack of parking available for such a facility. The Council indicated it felt the addition of a restaurant would overburden what little downtown public parking now exists.

The decision drew a roar of anger from Zelinsky.

"I'm getting sick and tired of coming before this council and arguing over parking," he bellowed. "You can just forget this application and I'll leave the lot undeveloped and dangerous. I don't have to build anything."

The site of Zelinsky's proposal contains the remains of a building which was destroyed by fire several years ago.

The council's decision overturns a city planning commission decision which looked favorably on Zelinksy's proposal.

Despite his outburst, Zelinsky indicated he would file an amended proposal with the planning commission in the future after trying to find additional parking or by developing something other than a restaurant on the property — some thing which requires less parking.

Leary Sees Young Drug Culture A Passe Thing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Dr. Timothy Leary says the time has passed for the young to "tune in, turn on and drop out" with psychedelic drugs.

Youthful radicals today should be following the "correct way" of the militant Weatherman and Black Panthers rather than "clowning or tripping," Leary advised in a videotaped interview shown here Tuesday.

"There is a time to expand and a time to contract," he said. "This is the time to tighten up, organize."

The one-time high priest of the American drug culture recanted while standing beside Eldridge Cleaver, the Black Panther leader who put Leary under virtual house arrest last month allegedly for taking too many LSD trips.

Both men are exiles in Algeria, where they fled from California authorities. Cleaver is wanted as a parole violator and fugitive from an attempted murder charge. Leary escaped jail while serving time on drug charges.

He said he was under "no coercion" by the Panthers and told Cleaver: "We're here voluntarily with you."

Cleaver, the Panthers' "minister of information" announced last month he had "busted" both Leary and his wife because it had "become very clear to me that there is something seriously wrong with both Dr. Leary and his wife's brains...I attribute this to the uncountable number of acid trips they have taken."

The two men discussed drugs and revolution for 57 minutes in the interview taped Feb. 12 in Cleaver's apartment by Glen Angell, a 27-year-old San Francisco documentary film maker who spent five days with them. Excerpts were shown over KQED, the local public television outlet.

"The people who are walking around seeking liberation through drugs are hallucinatory revolutionaries," Cleaver said. "I don't think they are helping us.

Correct Contact For New Classes

The Independent-Journal erred Monday in reporting that Mary Hanks of Belvedere should be contacted for information on registering for organic gardening classes for adults and children in Belvedere and Tiburon.

Persons wishing information on registration and fees should contact Mrs. Quentin Lewton, of 2441 Paradise Drive, Tiburon.

Four-week classes for youths will be held every other Tuesday beginning April 6 from 4 to 5 p.m., for those from ages 10 to 14 and from 5 to 6 p.m. for ages 14 to 18.

Adult classes will begin March 24 and run for six consecutive Wednesdays. Morning classes will be held from 10 a.m. to noon and evening classes from 8 to 10 p.m.

The classes will be taught by Dr. Bargyla Rateaver, a Kentfield gardening teacher, and sponsored by the Belvedere-Tiburon Committee for the Environment.

Two Natural Workshops Scheduled

Two sessions of nature workshops will begin March 1 and April 19 with first meetings to be held at the Richardson Bay Wildlife Sanctuary on Tiburon Boulevard.

The workshops, sponsored by the National Audubon Society and a group of Marin women biologists, will provide outdoor nature study for the non-biologist and general public and will include several field trips.

The workshops will be held on successive Mondays from the starting dates except April 5, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. They will be conducted by Natural Sciences Education Resources, a Ross-based group of professional biologists.

Further information on enrollment may be obtained from Nona Dennis, 69 Marlin Avenue, or Phyllis Faber, 145 Marlin Avenue, both in Mill Valley.

Two Treated For Injuries In Auto Accident

A Tamalpais Valley man was hospitalized and a Tennessee Valley woman treated for injuries suffered this weekend after their car ran off North San Pedro Road near China Camp.

Jerry W. Ellsberg, 32, of 522 Shoreline Highway, was reported in good condition today in the intensive care unit at Marin General Hospital with head injuries. Barbara Prosser, 27, of 457 Tennessee Valley Road, was treated and released for bruises.

The California Highway Patrol said a car driven by Ellsberg, northbound on North San Pedro Road three-tenths of a mile south of China Camp, left the road and plunged over a 20-foot enbankment, striking a large tree.

The accident occurred Saturday at 6:10 p.m., officers said.

Plans Under Way For Library Folk Dance Research Center

Plans are under way to establish a folk culture center at the Novato branch of the Marin County Library in memory of Bernice Schram. She was a leading force in folk dancing and dedicated to folk dance research.

Miss Schram, a Novato resident who died last November, was a member of Chang's International Folk Dancers Petaluma International Folk Dancers and Folk Dance Federation of California.

An area will be set aside at the new branch library now under construction for a "Bernice Schram Research Center," reported Naomi Rosenberg, a director of the research memorial.

The center will have pictures and descriptions of folk dance costumes, folk dance calendars and descriptions of folk dances.

Eventually the feasibility of stocking records and tapes will be considered, reported Mrs. Rosenberg.

Miss Schram served at Hamilton Air Force Base for 28 years and retired as supervisor of the base transportation office.

Funders are deeded for the planned center and for a plaque commemorating Miss Schram's dedication to folk dancing research, Mrs. Rosenberg said.

The intent is to create a center that will serve as a clearing house of information for folk dancers.

Contributions toward the center can be sent to "Bernice Schram Research Center" in care of Mrs. Rosenberg, 12 Kristin Lane, Novato.

Hereford cattle are named after the English county of that name.

Nuclear Defense: Teams Rule Out One-Man Error

WASHINGTON (UPI) —For want of a fail-safe system, America's civil defense emergency warning center mistakenly ordered broadcast stations from coast to coast off the air Saturday with an authenticated message signaling a national emergency.

But because of an elaborate fail-safe system —beginning with the President and reaching down to pairs of missile launch teams somewhere in America —U.S. defense planners feel certain a similar mistake will never send nuclear weapons streaking from their silos toward another country.

The civil defense National Warning Center and the North American Defense Command (NORAD) both operate out of the same huge complex buried inside Cheyenne Mountain near Colorado Springs, Colo. Strategic Air Command (SAC) missile and nuclear bomber crews receive alerts through the NORAD command post. The public gets its warnings from Civil Defense.

But NORAD and SAC operate so independently of the Civil Defense center that neither was aware of Saturday's alert to civilian radio and television stations. The way the two alert systems are set up is as different as night and day.

"The key difference is that one man, acting by himself, sent the alert Saturday," said one Pentagon official. "At NORAD, no one man can do anything by himself. It takes teams of men working together."

As a direct result of Saturday's false emergency alert, the Civil Defense warning center will get a mini-fail-safe system of its own. But it will still fall far short of the complicated procedures necessary to unsheath the fury of America's Minutemen missiles and nuclear armed SAC bombers.

UPI and AP spokesmen said Monday they would suspend testing of the Emergency Action Notification System (EANS) until proper safeguards could be worked out.

At the Colorado Springs site, center chief Louis I. Smoyer said steps have been taken to insure that no repeat performance is staged of the false national alert.

FAIL-SAFE SYSTEM — The U.S. radar defense systems designed to protect against nuclear attack are diagrammed in this UPI Newsmap. The system comprises eight fail-safe steps involving teams of men in each step which would prevent the type of one-man error as occurred Saturday.

"One is left to wonder what might happen if a real emergency arose," Griffin said. "Hopefully, we wouldn't get a routine test announcement during a real nuclear attack, but who knows?"

To fully understand how the missile fail-safe system works — and why nothing like Saturday's false alert is supposed to happen in it — step into the chain of events that would follow the appearance on radar screens of hostile missiles sweeping down on the United States.

Word would flash from NORAD to the National Military Command Center in the Pentagon —the "war room." Where the missiles came from. How many there were. Where they were aimed.

The war room would notify the President. There lies the first step in the fail-safe system.

The President, or the proper person in the chain of presidential succession if the President were incapacitated, would have to decide on a retaliatory strike. Only he holds the power to order it.

But it takes far more than a simple presidential phone call, or an appearance on television, or even a personal appearance in the war room, to order missiles launched and bombs dropped. There lies the second fail-safe step.

"Whoever sends the order has to have knowledge of an encrypted, closely controlled format," an Air Force officer said. "If it wasn't in the proper format, the missile crews would not react."

Everywhere the President goes, a secret service man follows him with a locked black box containing the current coded strike orders. No other orders will do the job.

Even if someone managed to steal the orders —or if the President for some reason transmitted them at a time when there was no attack or threat of attack —there are the third and fourth fail-safe hurdles to cross.

"Possession of the code is not enough," the Air Force officer said. "He has to get them into the correct military communications channel, and the order has to be sent over two types of systems."

Getting into the communications system means going through the Pentagon war room or one of the alternate war rooms the Department of Defense maintains. If the strike order reached the war room and took it by surprise, officers there would immediately question its validity.

Sending it over two types of communications systems might mean using a NORAD telephone line and a teletype circuit, or broadcasting it over two different military radio frequencies.

Once a valid order was issued, it might travel over one of two routes. It could be sent to the SAC command post at Omaha, Neb., and relayed from there to missile launch capsules buried in fields all over the country. Or it could be sent similtaneously to SAC headquarters and to the launch capsules.

Whichever way it went, both SAC headquarters and the missile teams would have to decode the order and verify its authenticity. This is the fifth fail-safe step.

A Minuteman missile squadron consists of five underground launch capsules, or firing posts, separated from each other by ten or more miles. Each capsule is commanded by two officers and controls 10 missiles. The officers in a pair of capsules must work closely together to launch any missiles.

"No one of them has the capability to verify the entire authenticity (of the presidential order to strike)," said the Air Force officer. "He has only a piece of it.

"No one individual has the necessary information by himself, nor does any one team of two men. It takes the entire crew of four men in two capsules."

To verify the order, the men in each firing post open two combination locks on a red strongbox fastened to the wall and each removes his own cipher to check the message. Then, if it is authentic, comes the sixth fail-safe step familiar to most civilians through movies and novels.

At each launch capsule, the two officers take keys and go to a pair of widely separated consoles. They insert their keys in locks on the consoles and turn them similtaneously. The consoles are so far apart no one man can turn both keys at the same time. If they are not turned together, the missiles fail to fire.

But there is a seventh fail-safe step before the missiles blast out of their silos. The keys in at least one other launch capsule must also be turned simultaneously, meaning that at least four men must act together.

As a safeguard against four men deliberately plotting to launch missiles, all the launch capsules in a squadron can see any firing preparations and must cooperate. Similarly, cooperation within the squadron may block an unauthorized launch. This is the eighth fail-safe step.

If the fateful hour ever comes when four or more keys are properly turned, nuclear missiles will be on their way within about half a minute. At that point there is no turning back, no system to destroy the missiles in flight.

"The odds are a billion to one against that ever happening by mistake or without the proper orders," the Air Force officer said.

As a final check against this happening, however, the Air Force has a "human reliability program" for all its missile crews. Every man is regularly investigated both professionally and personally. Family troubles, a bank account unexplainably soaring, a drinking problem —all of these would be danger signs that could indicate "a rebel on the crew."

LEARNING BY EATING

Four seventh graders at Lagunitas School get a taste of other lands by sampling native foods. The four — from left, Deanne Johnson, 12, Heidi Marden, 12, Nancy Isaac, 13, and Demetria Sunmer, 9 — were among more than 40 students who participated in a world festival at the school yesterday. The festival, created by humanities teachers Mary Anne Kolanoski and Rubin Gornbein, was designed to give the children a feeling for foreign countries. The children made their own costumes and food.

Purchase Of San Marin Club Delayed

Conceding that the status of the San Marin Club, now inoperative, is confusing, the Novato City Council postponed action last night on purchasing or leasing it.

A group of San Marin residents reportedly is negotiating for purchase of the club and a "private party" has made an offer, reported Mayor Douglas M. Merrill.

"The picture is very muddled" commented councilman Wayne Sartain.

The city parks and recreation commission had recommended that the city consider purchase or lease of the club, which has a swimming pool and tennis courts.

Parks and Recreation Director Edward W. Adams, who was absent, had submitted a memorandum that the deed of trust on the property is held by G and R Associates. Standard Investment Co. has an option to buy the club, pay the real estate commission and back taxes for a total of $240,000, but is no longer interested in purchase and is willing to transfer its interest to the city, Adams said.

Richard Kuhn, president of the San Marin Improvement Association, suggested a council postponement and said there would be a meeting of San Marin residents at San Marin High School Monday night to discuss various proposals for the club.

Councilmen also became muddled about how to proceed to investigate the possibility of purchasing a 4.6-acre park site along the south side of San Marin Drive, opposite San Mateo Way, from T. V. McGuire.

After some discussion and a reluctance to ask City Atty. Clark M. Palmer the price being sought by McGuire, the council voted 3-1 to authorize an appraisal of the site at a cost of $300 to $500.

Councilman J. Wayne Womack dissented and George C. Quesda, who explained he once worked on the site, abstained.

Womack contended that some council members knew the asking price and he felt "If one can have it others should."

Palmer advised the council it couldn't have a closed session to discuss the asking price, and offered to tell them the price.

At this point, Mayor Douglas M. Merrill said it would be up to the majority of the council tc decide if they wanted to hear the price.

Councilman Wayne Sartain said he didn't believe discussing the price would be "in the best interest of the city."

Why it would not was never explained.

A 6-year-old child playing with matches in a bedroom closet caused a $7,500 fire in the George Weger home, 214 Dubois Street, San Rafael, at 5:49 p.m. yesterday, San Rafael police reported.

Damage was estimated at $2,500 to the home's contents, and $5,000 to the structure.

Conditional Nod To Spaying Clinic

The San Rafael Planning Commission last night granted conditional approval for the establishment of a spaying and neutering clinic at 738 A Street.

Chairman Joseph J. Garbarino was opposed to the clinic which had advertised that cats or dogs would be released on the same day after they have been rendered sterile.

Garbarino quoted a letter from the veterinarian Robert M. Bramman, which said that after hysterectomies there would be "certain patients who will require hospitalizations."

(The application was submitted by veterinarian John R. Sujohn, stipulates that none of the animals would be kept overnight.)

Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner recommended the commission grant approval if the noise, smell and insects be kept inside the building.

The application was approved 5-to-2 with the conditions recommended by Hotchner and an added condition that Dr. Sujohn be allowed to keep the animals overnight if he so desired. Garbarino and commissioner Jorgen V. Lunding were opposed.

The San Rafael Planning Commission also:

OUTDOOR MOVIE — Voted in favor of a suggestion that the outdoor movie on Bellam Avenue be considered for use by the Golden Gate Bridge District for bus repair and office site as it would be consistent with the zoning and land use for the area as stated in the general plan.

HOLIDAY MAGIC — Denied a use permit for Holiday Magic, 529 Jacoby Street, for construction of a warehouse and office complex of five buildings. They recommended that the application with the attached conditions as previously proposed by the planning commission be reviewed and acted upon by the city council.

TRAILERS — Approved conditionally the request for temporary office trailers to be used in conjunction with existing contractor's yard. Commissioners agreed that the use permit would expire 60 days after the city made a decision on permanent streets for that area.

SIGN — Conditionally approved a sign for the Davis Realty at 900 Mission Avenue as submitted with the understanding that when the proposed sign ordinance is in effect, the sign would then be nonconforming and would require alterations.

OFFICE — Agreed to sanction existing office use and to permit final phase of Margarita Plaza development at the Office Complex at 4380 Redwood Highway.

SIGN — Conditionally approved an architectural plan for a free-standing, interior illuminated sign to be located at 807 Francisco Boulevard. The sign would have to be 36 square feet and not the 55 square feet as proposed by the owner, Ray Willits.

STANDARD SIGN — Approved the replacement of the existing sign at Standard Oil Co. at 729 Fourth Street, with a sign 21 feet high with floodlights mounted on the new sign column.

Human Rights To Draw Up Budget

Marin County Human Rights Commission will meet in special session tomorrow night to draw up a preliminary budget request for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

The meeting will be at 8 o'clock at the home of Commissioner Frederick S. Mayer, 1053 Lea Drive, Terra Linda.

The total budget for the human rights department this year is $35,000, as compared with $51,400 last year and $40,700 the year before.

During budget sessions last year, County Administrator Alan Bruce recommended that the department be abolished as an economy move, but the Marin County Board of Supervisors decided to save it and operate it on a reduced scale.

New Status For West Marin Court

The West Marin Justice Court at Point Reyes Station is going big time.

Marin County supervisors yesterday approved a $20 revolving fund for the court so that attaches can make change for violators paying their fines.

Up to now, the practice has been for Judge David R. Baty to dig into his own pocket to make change.

Apartment Plan Passes

In approving the plans, the council required that pedestrian access be provided to Southwest Boulevard. It was also stipulated that if a new road is constructed adjacent to the property, the developers will pay half the cost.

City Mgr. Peter M. Callinan said a public hearing will be scheduled in late March or early April to determine the alignment of a future entrance roadway from Cotati to Rohnert Park. He said developers would then have a better basis on which to make plans.

The Rohnert Park City Council also:

BRIDGE — Awarded the contract to Murdoch Engineering at $52,000 for construction of a bridge over Hinebaugh Creek on Commerce Boulevard.

STUDENTS — Approved a work-study agreement with Sonoma State College. Callinan said 80 per cent of students' salaries will be paid by the federal government.

Proposal On Broader City Manager Powers

The Novato City Council last night introduced an ordinance amendment which would give the city manager broader power over hiring and firing of department heads.

As proposed the city manager could hire, fire or demote department heads, except that appointment of a city treasurer requires ratification by the city council.

Under the present ordinance the city council ratifies appointments of all department heads.

Dropped from the proposed amendment, after revision, was a provision that the city manager be granted severance pay, one month for each year of service, up to four years.

Councilman J. Wayne Womack moved that the section giving the city manager the hiring and firing power without council ratification be deleted, but there wasn't any second.

Councilman George C. Quesada moved that there be severance pay of a half a month's pay for each year of service, up to three month's pay, but there wasn't any second.

There wasn't a vote on the introduction, but Womack said he would vote against adoption of the change.

The city manager's hiring and firing powers wouldn't apply to the post of city attorney.

The Novato City Council Also:

FLOOD CONTROL INSURANCE — Received notice from the Department of Housing and Urban Development that Novato residents are eligible to obtain flood control insurance at subsidized rates through Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of San Francisco, designated by the National Flood Insurers Association as the company to service Novato.

HOUSING SURVEY — Voted 3-2 against appropriating $600 toward a survey of condition of housing in Novato with Councilman George C. Quesada contending the proposed program was a "bureaucratic boondoggle" that wouldn't provide adequate information. Mayor Douglas M. Merrill and Councilman Wayne Sartain favored the survey.

PRAYER AT MEETING — Heard a protest from Fred MacDonald of 66 Queva Vista against a proposal by Quesada that there be a denominational pray at the start of council meetins. MacDonald said any prayer wouldn't represent all divergent views including atheists and agnostics.

WESTERN HOSTS — Postponed action for two weeks on precise development plans for Phase 2 of the Western Oaks development, 87 townhouse units west of Highway 101 at the end of Redwood Boulevard, by a 3-2 vote, with Merrill and J. Wayne Womack dissenting. Sartain contended that trees that were to be saved in Phase 1 have been damaged and in danger of dying and the council should have assurance that remedial work was done before second phase work is acted upon.

SAN MARIN — Approved a land use change from apartments to single family townhouses along both sides of San Marin Drive, east of San Carlos Way toward Simmons Lane, and approved precise development plans by Standard Growth Properties for 72 townhouse units on the south side of the San Marin Drive in that area.

CAR PURCHASES — Awarded Novato Ford, lowest of four bidders, a contract to provide three cars for city staff at a cost of $5,958.

CORPORATION YARD — Consented to annexation of the city corporation yard off Davidson Street to the Novato Sanitary District.

INTERSECTION — Gave notice of intention to acquire right-of-way and make street improvements at South Novato Boulevard and Diablo Avenue and that anyone seeking a public hearing on the project must notify the city clerk by March 18.

UTILITY BOXES — Agreed that installations of above ground installations of appurtenances by the utility company and cable television franchise holders should be subject to review and approval of the planning and public works staffs.

REZONING — Introduced an ordinance to rezone lots at 1033 Second Street and 1032 Third Street from single family to apartments as requested by Jack Chernow.

WESTERN WEEKEND — Voted to appropriate an additional $1,000 to Novato Western Weekend, for a total appropriation of $2,000.

PARK PLANS — Received a letter from Loma Verde Homeowners Association endorsing plans by Marin County to develop recreation facilities at Stafford Lake.

POLICE SERVICES — Opposed unanimously Marin County's hiring of a criminal justice coordinator to study the feasibility of consolidation of police agencies in Marin, and postponed taking a stand on consolidation of police services until further study.

BUDGET CHANGE — Established a policy that the capital improvement budget will be administered through the general funds on an annual basis, and transferred $70,292 from the capital improvement fund to the general fund.

PREZONING — Introduced an ordinance to pre-zone 20.5 acres in the unincorporated area south of Center Road and East of Eucalyptus Avenue for single family residential along Sun Lane and limited agricultural along Eucalyptus Avenue.

MOBILE HOME AREA — Introduced an ordinance to prezone 31.5 acres in the unincorporated area east of the Marin Valley Mobile Country Club park, as requested by Marin Valley Mobile Country Club.

Townhouse Cluster Plan Hit

A proposal for a cluster of hilltop townhouses overlooking Oleander Drive, that at first appeared favorable to the San Rafael Planning Commission last night, was vehemently opposed and delayed by a group of residents whose homes surround the site.

The plan, as proposed by the Pell Development Co., which has tried unsuccessfully since 1964 to develop the site, would arrange the 70 townhouses into small clusters. As explained by the architect, Richard Omsted, they would be sold individually at $30,000 to people with moderate incomes.

The residents living in the shadow of the hill, which is already scarred from its former use as a quarry for rock and fill, said they had been notified of the proposal only a few days ago and had objected that the planning commission take any action without having notified them.

Omsted said he had called for a meeting of the residents in that area earlier but only five persons attended, but admitted to a charge that the meeting had not been properly advertised.

A petition expressing the residents concerns and signed by 120 of the residents of Oleander Drive and Blossom Lane was presented to the commissioners by Richard LeKander of 304 Orange Blossom Lane.

He said that the proposal did not consider increased traffic control and safety for the area as there was only one route proposed for the development.

The residents, he said, were concerned about erosion, landslides and falling rocks, as the proposal did not provide for any retaining walls.

He urged that the commission consider the area for a park site but was told by chairman Joseph J. Garbarino that the City of San Rafael had no money to buy the site.

On hearing that the planning director's staff had recommended the commission approve the proposal, Anthony Marcelli of 285 Orange Blossom Lane said: "I don't think the planner director is representing the people who are already living in the area . . . " you ought to give our proposals consideration as well as the architects."

Garbarino said that Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner only made the recommendations after careful study, "we are your true representatives and suggest that another meeting be held of the residents concerned and the developer."

Commissioners unanimously agreed to review the proposal again at the March 9 meeting.

Concern To Kidnapping Is Voted

Novato City Council, shaken be the kidnapping of four residents by an escapee from San Quentin Prison, called last night for measures to avoid a reoccurance.

Mayor Douglas M. Merrill, seated where only a few hours before, the kidnap victims held a press conference, spoke of the council's concern.

In the past few weeks there have been eight or nine escapees from a "particular program" at the prison, which he viewed as a serious threat to the community, the mayor said.

The council should seek appropriate remedial measures to avoid what has happened," Merrill contended.

The results of the operations at San Quentin "are something less than acceptable to the community," he said.

The council asked City Mgr. Charles A. Brown and Police Chief Allen V. Klemme to prepare a resolution on the matter for council action Tuesday.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —Mrs. June R. Becker wants $36,750 for a kiss—and she was only a bystander.

She has sued a pleasure boat skipper and his woman acquaintance for that amount on grounds their kisses led to an accident in which she was injured.

Mrs. Becker, 50, a Sacramento divorcee, sued David A. Borth of Stockton and Helen L. Harris of Sacramento. She asked damages for a broken leg suffered July 11 when Borth's boat struck a tree along the bank of a deep water channel.

School's 'Modular Scheduling' Praised, Scorned; No Action

By JEFF GREER

San Rafael High School's experiment in "modular scheduling" has helped the good students, may have worsened the lot of poor students, and possibly has strained school-community relations, it was reported to the San Rafael Board of Education last night.

However, both students and faculty members urged that the program be tested for at least two years.

Board chairman Herman L. Childress cut off the discussion after an hour. No formal action was taken on altering the program; nor was there any indication the test authorized last spring would not continue at least for the rest of this school year.

David Plotkin, student representative for San Rafael High on the board, praised the flexible scheduling as giving more free time for students and teachers to become better acquainted, said it made more courses available, offered more resource centers and provided more free time for students to study, chat and eat.

On the minus side, Plotkin said "only a minority of students have benefited by learning self-discipline" and the program is "a community relations flop" because the free time and open campus have strained neighborhood tempers.

"The failure is the people involved, not the system," he suggested.

"The system is worth it; given another year or a year and a half, students and the community can work out their problems," the teen-age trustee argued.

Margaret Tierney, social science instructor and modular scheduling steering committee spokesman, said 26 teachers polled after the fall semester echoed many of Plotkin's findings.

The teachers felt the experiment in differing class lengths and increased free time lessened tension in the classroom, allowed teaching technique experiments and made some teachers feel "more successful," she said.

The teachers' critiques uncovered a long list of shortcomings, she said. These included complaints that the six-period day still was too rigid, that "underinvolved students were more alienated than ever," and that smoking, vandalism and litter were in the rise.

"It's much easier to pinpoint shortcomings than success," she noted.

Member Carl J. Brown reported surveying other school districts testing the modular schedule idea. He reported near unanimity that the campus should be closed for at least the first year to prevent neighborhood trouble during students' free time.

"The board's got to remember the test needs more than one year," he argued. "The board's got to have a thick skin."

One thing that he found had been ignored was that much of the community relations problem was caused by undesirable outsiders mingling with students near the campuses, Brown added.

Principal Alan Ellsberg agreed, saying that teachers patrolling the area "found a lot of pretty seedy looking characters. Even with a closed campus . . . it's a good market for those who want to push drugs, or are attracted by a lot of young people."

Member Lawrence I. Kramer declared he wanted to see a three-year test, but with changes made as needed.

Crash Victim 'Fair To Poor'

Jerry W. Ellsberg, 32, of 522 Shoreline Highway, Tamalpais Valley, was reported in "fair to poor" condition today in the intensive care unit of Marin General Hospital, with head injuries suffered Saturday evening in a highway accident.

The California Highway Patrol reported that Ellsberg's car plunged off North San Pedro Road south of China Camp, hitting a large tree below a 20-foot embankment.

A passenger in Ellsberg's car, Barbara Prosser, 27, of 457 Tennessee Valley Road, was treated for bruises and released Saturday, the hospital said.

Discordant Note On Safety Issues

Sweet and sour notes sounded over safety problems at last night's meeting of the San Rafael Board of Education.

Members harmoniously chorused "aye" to plans by music director Hugo Rinaldi, to convert a once-condemned school bus into a mobile music classroom for the district's nine elementary schools.

But they rang a harsh bell on delays in correcting safety hazards at Terra Linda High School.

The bus, with chairs and music stands for 14 pupils learning to play stringed instruments, will take the classes out of elementary schools' faculty lounges — and in some cases out of "hallways near latrines," Rinaldi reported. "There, the traffic is tremendous." Board and audience members laughed.

The 30-foot long bus was one of six retired for failing to meet California Highway Patrol safety tests several years ago, Dist. Supt. John F. Plank explained. He said district mechanics had refurbished it to meet standards.

Meanwhile, district maintenance chief John Thomson was scolded for not acting sooner on reported safety hazards in Terra Linda High's gymnasium.

George Starn, chairman of the Terra Linda High physical education department, wrote the board that students risked cuts from faulty lighting in the showers, that heavy steel bleachers werein hazardous condition, that tile around the pool was dangerously slippery, and that electrical outlets near the pool were risky because they lacked proper covers.

"The thing that concerns me is that this thing is coming from the wrong source," board member Lawrence I. Kramer declared. "You should be coming to us to correct this," he told Thomson, "not waiting until Mr. Starn comes to us."

Charles L. Condrotte, district business manager, said that work could be ordered immediately to replace the defective lighting fixtures, instead of budgeting for the work next year as previously planned. The job is expected to cost about $800, he said.

School maintenance crews have already roughened the slippery tiles with sandpaper.

Board members ordered immediate action to correct the bleacher, glass and shock hazards, and asked for a report at their next regular meeting.

35-Cent Lunches For Two Schools After Easter Break

Pupils of two San Rafael elementary schools will be offered 35-cent lunches after the Easter vacation, board of education members decided last night.

The test lunches will be the first food service at the two schools — Laurel Dell and Hartzell.

The board's unanimous decision was based on a poll of 4,758 families in the district, in which 1,784 said they favored the bag lunch program and only 354 opposed the idea.

District Supt. John F. Plank reported that predicted lunch sales at Hartzell would be 446 per week and at Laurel Dell would be 416 per week at the start. Plank said the lunch program was planned by food consultants Flambert and Flambert, as part of a $2,450 survey they made of the district cafeteria operations.

One parent in the audience objected that the parents polled were not told that the sandwiches to be served in the lunch would be "cold storage — made 24 hours in advance." She also claimed that Novato schools "had gone down the drain for the 45-cent lunches."

Another mother objected that she could pack lunches for less than 35 cents for each of her children.

Plank said menus for the lunches would be announced at least a week in advance, and that the test program would last either a month, or to the end of the semester.

The San Rafael Board of Education also:

ADJOURNED — Continued the conference portion of last night's session to 7:30 p.m. March 2 for a briefing session with candidates for board seats at the April 20 election.

LEGISLATORS — Continued to the March 2 session a discussion of what legislative policies would be brought up at the Marin County School Boards Association meeting with Sen. Peter H. Behr, and Assemblyman William T. Bagley, both R-San Rafael, on March 25 in Novato.

CALENDAR — Tabled adoption of the elementary and high school districts' 1971-72 calendar until Plank has more opportunity to gather data on other Marin County districts' calendars.

POLICY — Unanimously adopted a board policy statement on teachers' and pupils' political activities on campus, as drafted by Richard V. Godino, assistant county counsel.

ADULT CLASSES — Approved a list of courses offered for the spring quarter adult education program. A total of 1,150 adults registered in 50 classes in the fall quarter, the board was told.

TRAVEL — Granted Terra Linda High School teacher Al Gautrad permission to travel to Washington, D.C., March 4 through 7, to attend a Model United Nations conference. The district will pay $150 plus the cost of a substitute teacher. The same trip was approved last year.

HIRINGS — Approved appointments of Gary Carroll and Robert Goodrich to custodian positions at $3.11 per hour; Edward Tait to a custodian II job at $2,395 for the rest of the school year; Joan Dooley as a primary grades teacher at $4,326 for the rest of the year; George Grist as an instructional aide at $2.50 per hour and Judith Sherman as an instructional aide at $2.62 an hour.

COACH — Appointed Bill Ronney as swimming coach at San Rafael High School at an extra pay rate of $519 for the school year.

PERSONNEL — Granted leaves of absence to San Rafael High French teacher Caterina Bess, counselor Jules Chouree, Bahia Vista third grade teacher Elinor Parsons and district psychologist Doris Pick, and accepted the resignation of bus driver Sondra Womack.

LAUREL DELL — Approved a change order for $1,196 in extra work needed on a Laurel Dell School construction project after relocation of a ramp, filling of a recently discovered forgotten well and other changes were found to be needed. Plank said the district's inspectors reported the building will be ready for use by next September.

PRESCHOOL — Authorized Plank to begin work on applications for a three-year federally funded program to correct language problems in preschool children. Member Lawrence I. Kramer warned that the program would be a forerunner of far-reaching and possible costly changes in district educational operations.

GIFTS — Accepted, on behalf of Terra Linda High School, a movie projector offered by Perry Barker, and a projector, camera and viewer-editor donated by Dr. Jack W. Stage.

While he deplores Marin County's lack of disaster planning, state civil defense official William W. Ward says the county's neighbor — San Francisco — has "the best plan we've seen to date."

"It's no accident," Ward told the Independent-Journal. He gave much of the credit to Edward P. Joyce, the city-county director of the San Francisco Disaster Corps.

Joyce formerly worked in the state civil defense program as a planner, Ward explained. He said that Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, showing himself "aware of his responsibilities," hired Joyce for the disaster job early in his regime.

San Francisco's state of readiness has been accomplished despite statewide budget cuts in similar planning, Ward noted. As director of the state's Region II office responsible for all Bay Area counties, Ward added that the state's budget writers have used a "cut squeeze and trim" policy on his office, too.

"But the (recent Los Angeles) earthquake has alerted legislators to the need for disaster preparedness," Ward optimistically added.

San Francisco disaster chief Joyce spent all last week in Los Angeles, both helping and observing how the disaster was handled. He left his assistant, Louis Cambou, in charge in San Francisco.

Cambou reported that city and county department heads meet regularly with utility firm officials, Red Cross directors and other emergency agencies.

"Mayor Alioto himself attended the meeting last week, and stayed for more than 20 minutes. That's fantastic, with his busy schedule," Cambou claimed.

At the regular meetings, the department heads review their staff preparedness, and adjust responsibilities as the need arises. The disaster program makes only limited use of volunteers, Cambou explained.

Most of the enrolled volunteers are members of the police or fire department reserves — or amateur radio hobbyists who maintain an emergency network for the hospital.

San Francisco itself owns a mobile radio van capable of communicating on many frequencies. The van "is sent automatically to every fourth-alarm fire" to keep it and its crew in practice, Cambou said. The Disaster Corps headquarters is manned 24 hours a day by one or more of the city-county's nine paid disaster workers, Cambou said.

The headquarters keeps a plentiful supply of printed material on hand to help citizens prepare for disaster or know what to do in case of trouble.

All of the material stresses that the citizen should avoid using the telephone except to call for help in emergencies. Rather, the citizen is urged to depend on radio and television broadcasts for public instructions. The disaster office has installed extensive communication links with all the mass media headquarters in San Francisco, Cambou explained.

As to Marin's problems, County Administrator Alan Bruce said his office is arranging a meeting between the Marin County Counsel's office and all the cities' attorneys, to work out agreements on jurisdictional responsibility for disaster planning.

Bruce's assistant, Thomas F. Campanella, said he and James V. Burdick, county deputy director for civil defense, will be holding a parallel meeting with city managers and administrators "in the next few days."

Each of the cities is responsible for getting its own disaster plan approved by the state. Under the new law, the county's plan now in preparation would be put into operation if a disaster were too much for a city's facilities, Bruce said.

The board of supervisors has not seen the draft plan worked out by Burdick and Bruce's office. If the tentative plan wins interim state approval — a probability reported in the first article in this series — much work remains to be done before the plan is accepted in toto.

Each of the department heads given disaster responsibilities will be required to flesh out "annexes" to detail their specific roles in the skeleton of the overall county plan, Burdick said.

The supervisors' previous reluctance to meet state and federal demands to prepare for a nuclear holocaust apparently has evaporated in light of the new willingness to stress planning for natural disasters, Burdick reported.

"I have more hope than I've ever had" that Marin County and its citizens soon can become prepared for trouble, Brudick declared.

Marin's officialdom, verbally at least, has accepted its "moral and ethical responsibility" to plan for disaster.

Whether the public will do likewise is anyone's guess.

A clipping from the Independent-Journal of Jan. 10, 1964 may have told the tale for tomorrow as well as a decade ago:

"Corte Madera civic and neighborhood organizations told Councilman Charles F. Pendleton and town officials they could not agree there was any real necessity to form a disaster commission."

Two Charges Are Dismissed

Charges of possessing marijuana and petty theft against Guy Brodnax of San Rafael were dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

Judge Robert A. Smallman dismissed the case at the request of the district attorney's office which reported there was insufficient evidence to proceed.

Brodnax was arrested Jan. 24 at Mayfair Market in San Rafael on suspicion of shoplifting. Police said they later found a plastic bag containing suspected pot in his possession.

High Court Upholds News Media

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court further broadened the immunity of news media from libel actions by public officials and candidates today.

In a new series of opinions based on the precedent-setting New York Times libel decision of 1964, the Court threw out libel awards against the Concord, N.H., Daily Monitor, the Ocala, Fla., Star-Banner and Time Magazine.

The Court held in the newspaper cases that a charge of criminal conduct against an official or candidate seeking office was always relevant to his fitness for office even if the allegation proved to be untrue.

Population Rise

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Sweden's population increased to 8,093,000 in 1970, but it was not because of a higher birth rate, says the Swedish Census Bureau.

HAS TO SELL

The owner hates to leave after 16 years, but now she finds it imperative! Located across from Park School on a large lot, this "large family" home has 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, family and dining rooms. It's in fairly rough shape now, but with a little money and imagination (and a lot of elbow grease) this could be a tremendous family home. Will consider any reasonable offer!

Keeping Cotati's Rural Look Strongly Supported

By BONNIE BARD

Planning consultants last night urged that Cotati maintain its small town, rural atmosphere and offered preliminary suggestions on how it might be accomplished by making the plaza the focal point.

Representatives of Herman D. Ruth Associates of Berkeley made the presentation at what was to have been a special joint meeting of the city council and planning commission. However, only Mayor Alfred Falletti and Planning Commissioner Kenneth Garner attended.

The planners said the plaza park, surrounded by the hexagonal street pattern, should become one of the focal points of the community. The report noted that East Cotati Avenue and Old Redwood Highway intersect in the center of the plaza and recommended that in future years that all traffic be routed around the hexagonal pattern.

"Much of Cotati is now designed on the scale of the automobile. More attention needs to be given to humans. Reclaiming the plaza will be an excellent start in this direction," the report said. "Only then will people be encouraged to walk on the plaza, to eat lunch there, to sit in the shade and to congregate there with others."

Planners also urged that a physical openness be retained and that future development be strictly controlled to avoid conventional grid-pattern subdivisions. The report also remarks that excellent views of the Sonoma mountains should be protected for all to enjoy.

In looking at problems of Cotati, the planners said that scattered development has provided for less than maximum efficiency. They said the city services and traffic flow had suffered because of the scattering.

A shortage of housing was also listed as a major problem, but was accompanied by a warning to regulate housing patterns closely.

"Unless Cotati takes affirmative action before development has begun, conventional subdivisions and strips of low-quality student apartments will be built, spoiling one of the pleasant aspects of the city, its openness and small town atmosphere," the report said.

The report by the citizens advisory committee followed closely with thoughts of the planners and suggested that light industry and commercial development be encouraged to improve Cotati's economic condition. The citizens, however, said that heavy industry should be discouraged.

The committee also proposed a better use for the plaza area and suggested the city establish architectural control over development there. It was also recommended that the city acquire the Cotati Women's Club building at the plaza for use as a community recreation center.

Nixon Proposes Powers To Protect Consumers

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon asked Congress today for legislation empowering the government to ban hazardous consumer products, regulate warranties and quickly stop allegedly deceptive advertising and sales practices.

In a consumer message to Capitol Hill, Nixon proposed federal standards for testing of certain products so buyers would know whether an item met federal standards.

Nixon also asked for a study aimed at creating a "small claims" system that would arbitrate disputes between a consumer and a store or manufacturer. But he maintained his opposition to a Democratic proposal under which buyers could band together in "class action" lawsuits.

Nixon said he would propose a federal consumer advocacy function among existing departments to take the buyer's side in arguments before regulatory agencies. Democrats have proposed creation of a separate federal consumer advocacy agency, and Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., has proposed creation of a separate Cabinet department for consumers.

Nixon promised "new and better methods for inspecting foods" by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and said he would issue an executive order reinforcing the powers of the White House consumer affairs office, headed by Virginia H. Knauer.

Although broader than his own consumer proposals that foundered in Congress last year, Nixon's message appeared certain to spark a new battle with congressional Democrats who have introduced consumer legislation they consider much stronger than the President's.

"In today's market place," Nixon said, "the consumer often finds himself confronted with what seems an impenetrable complexity in many of our consumer goods, in the advertising claims that surround them, the merchandising methods that purvey them and the means available to conceal their quality."

"The result is a degree of confusion that often confounds the unwary, and too easily can be made to favor the unscrupulous, Nixon said, "I believe new safeguards are needed, both to protect the consumer and to reward the responsible businessman."

Nixon proposed a consumer product safety act similar to that pushed by Democrats, but said it should be run by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., has proposed a separate consumer product safety agency.

Under Nixon's proposal, HEW would set mandatory safety standards for products, and ban any that were judged too hazardous.

He proposed legislation empowering the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to get court injunctions that would immediately halt allegedly deceptive sales or advertising practices. Under present law, the practice can continue until the case is adjudicated, a process which sometimes takes years.

Nixon's proposed warranty act would authorize FTC to require full disclosure, in simple language, of warranty and guaranty terms. It would prohibit warranty disclaimers under which the manufacturer uses small print to protect himself against consumer claims.

The product testing proposal would provide for development of test methods, product by product, and let manufacturers advertise test results when they are in compliance with federal standards.

Nixon said he still opposed creation of a separate federal agency to act as the consumer's advocate in regulatory disputes on subjects such as fraud and utility rates. But he said such advocates are needed and might be placed within the FTC. He promised a specific proposal after April 20.

Nixon proposed new powers for the Justice Department to crackdown on fraudulent practices, with penalties for violation doubled to $10,000.

Spate Of Consumer Bills Vie For Congressional Attention

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., introduced legislation today that would reform the nation's auto insurance system so an accident victim would receive almost complete compensation without regard to who was at fault in the accident.

He said under the present system only 14 cents of every dollar paid for auto insurance goes to victims of accidents. Lawyers collect $1.1 billion in legal fees fighting auto liability cases which occupy nearly a fifth of state courts' time, creating a tremendous backlog in the nation's courtrooms, he said.

Hart's bill was one of a number of consumer-interest measures offered in Congress today in advance of President Nixon's message on consumer legislation.

Among the other bills were:

—A measure by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., under which the Federal Trade Commission would be required to impose "strong, fair and rational rules on companies which offer warranties or guarantees for their products. "Too many manufacturers and retailers have been playing the warranty game abusively and with impunity," Magnuson said.

—Another Magnuson bill to create a national product safety agency "for the comprehensive policing of unsafe products wherever they may be found." It grows out of a five year study by the National Commission on Product Safety.

—A third Magnuson measure that would allow a few consumers to sue a manufacturer or business on behalf of all consumers who feel they have been cheated. This "class action" bill was opposed by the administration when it was introduced by Magnuson in the last session of Congress.

—A bill from Sen. James B. Pearson, R-Kan., to require "unit pricing" of food and other commodities covered by the Fair Packaging and Labeling act. Under unit pricing, a grocer has to show the price of a package and how much it works out to be per ounce, pint or other common unit of measure so buyers can compare prices of competing products in different sized containers.

—A bill from Sen. William B. Spong Jr., D-Va., imposing penalties of up to six months imprisonment or fines up to $10,000 for making false statements in advertising products, services, systems or devices which are designed to prevent or control the emission of pollution agents. Spong said many industries are placing more emphasis on advertising their pollution abatement activities than they are on abatement itself.

—A bill from Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., under which the federal government would devise safety standards—and states would be encouraged to adopt them—covering summer camps attended by seven million children each year. Ribicoff said most states have lax standards on camps and 19 have none at all.

Under Hart's "no fault" insurance bill, a victim would be compensated for all out-of-pocket expenses for medical treatment, rehabilitation and incidentals resulting from an auto accident as well as 85 per cent of his lost income, up to $1,000 a month, for 30 months. Deaths would be compensated by a $30,000 payment.

The present auto insurance system, Hart said in remarks prepared for the Senate, demands that some person take the blame for each accident.

Infant Flown To His Mother

HONOLULU (UPI) — The baby boy found in a trash container of an airplane lavatory was to be flown to his mother in Guam today.

Mrs. Rade Awane of the state Department of Social Services said the baby is in excellent condition.

The mother is Vawna Scricomolscip, 28, a Thai national who gave birth on a TWA flight from Los Angeles to Honolulu Feb. 15. The woman told authorities she put her son in the trash container because she thought the infant was stillborn.

The mother has been in Guam memorial Hospital recuperating from the birth.

The Elephant Seal Thriving

The big seals—some are 16 feet long and weigh 5,000 pounds—were threatened with extermination a century ago when they were hunted for their fine-quality oil.

The State Fish and Game Department reported Tuesday that 10,000 of the elephant seals are living on islands off the Southern California and Mexican coasts.

Nixon Stops Just Short Of Freezes

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon, proclaiming an emergency in the construction industry, has suspended a depression-era law originally enacted to prevent pay-cutting in the building trades. He stopped short, however, of imposing a widely rumored freeze on construction wages and prices.

The President's action was the mildest of the anti-inflation alternatives available to him. It means federal or federally assisted contracts let from now on will not require contractors to pay "prevailing" local wage rates to plumbers, carpenters and other construction workers. Prevailing wage rates usually are the highest union-negotiated scale in the area involved.

It may be months before the action starts showing up at the paycheck level, but criticism from organized labor was immediate. AFL-CIO President George Meany said "it is an open invitation to unscrupulous employers to exploit workers by competitive undermining of fair wages and labor standards."

"We consider it unfair. We resent it: We think construction workers do not deserve to be treated in an arbitrary, one-sided fashion," Meany added. Edward J. Carlough, president of the Sheet Metal Workers Union, predicted the nation's 3.5 million construction workers would be "angry as hell."

Of the $90 billion worth of construction slated this year, $25 billion involved federal or federally assisted funds and was covered by the now suspended Davis-Bacon Act of 1931. It was not known how much of the $25 billion already was contracted for.

Existing contracts will not be changed and ones for which bids have already been submitted will not have to be re-bid. And although builders bidding on government work are now freed of the legal wage requirement, many still will have to pay going wage rates if they hope to hire workers.

Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson conceded the effect would not be immediate; but he said the action will eventually dampen construction industry wages.

Nixon said he realized that seasonal and economic fluctuations led construction workers to seek higher wages. But he said higher wages only have fanned inflation and resulted in a building trades unemployment rate that was twice the national average last year.

"Government programs which contribute to excessive wage and price increases must be modified or rescinded in periods of inflation," Nixon said.

Administration officials hinted all last week Nixon would use the authority Congress gave him last year to freeze wages and prices in construction. Hodgson carried that threat to the annual meeting of the AFL-CIO in Miami Beach.

But Hodgson said Tuesday the labor leaders were firmly opposed to the administration singling out construction for special regulations.

Asked why Nixon rejected the freeze proposal, Hodgson said: "He simply did not want to force government wage and price controls on a reluctant group . . . I believe the President has made it clear that he simply does not want to impose wage and price controls."

But the administration did not close the door on the possibility of future controls. Treasury Secretary John B. Connally urged the House Banking Committee to approve legislation extending the President's authority to impose controls beyond the scheduled March 31 expiration date.

Innocent Pleas To Growing Pot

Jack Martin Kelly, 22, and Ruth M. Herr, 30, both of 360 Woodside Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, have pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing and cultivating marijuana.

A preliminary hearing has been set for March 4.

The pair was arrested Feb. 2 when drug agents raided their residence with a search warrant obtained after marijuana plants were allegedly seen growing near the door of the house.

Jury Finds Hub Man Innocent of Burglary

The jury deliberated one hour and a half before finding that Botai did not burglarize a residence at 10 Meadow Way, Fairfax, Dec. 9.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Help Your Heart: Consume Less Calories, Fats, Cholesterol

Evidence has shown that the high death rate from coronary heart disease (especially in men under 65) stems from too much cholesterol in the blood, hypertension, heavy cigaret smoking, obesity, diabetes, sedentary living tensions and heredity. Many studies involving large numbers of people are being conducted in this country and elsewhere on whether the death rate from coronary heart disease and stroke can be lowered by reducing these high-risk factors.

ENCOURAGING results have followed the intake of fewer calories and less cholesterol and animal (saturated) fats. Polyunsaturated fats or vegetable oils (with the exception of coconut oil) are added to replace the saturated fats removed from the diet.

Clinical studies supported by the American Heart Association and our government have outlined methods to prevent atherosclerotic diseases. These investigators are doing their best to get the food industry to make available leaner meats and a greater variety of processed meats , along with dairy products, frozen desserts and baked goods that are low in saturated fats, cholesterol and calories. In addition, they want people to modify their eating habits in regard to the five major sources of fat — meats, dairy products, eggs, bakery items, and table and cooking fats.

IN ESSENCE this means:

1. Lean cuts of beef, lamb, pork, veal, poultry, and fish. Visible fat should be removed and the food should be broiled or baked.
2. Fat-modified processed meats.
3. Limiting the intake of cholesterol-rich organ meats and shellfish.
4. Use skim milk and fat modified dairy products.
5. Avoid egg yolk, bacon, lard and suet.
6. Use salad and cooking oils, new soft margarines and shortenings low in saturated fats.
7. Avoid butter, margarine and shortenings high in saturated fats, such as coconut oil.
8. Avoid candies high in saturated fats.
9. Use more grains, fruits, vegetables and legumes.
10. Use fat-modified baked goods — cookies, cakes, sweet rolls, doughnuts, crullers and pies. Avoid pastries rich in saturated fat and cholesterol (loaded with butter and cream).

GIVING UP COFFEE

N. C. writes: I am trying to give up coffee but develop a severe headache when I don't have a cup in the morning. Have you any suggestions?

REPLY

As a rule, one cup in the morning does no harm. If you have a good reason for giving up coffee, stop drinking it and, in time, the headache will disappear.

HEAD STANDS

W. B. writes: Will standing on the head permit a better flow of blood to the brain?

REPLY

It may but it could also distrub the blood flow returning to the heart. The circulation to the head is designed for bipeds who stand upright.

CYSTS ON WRIST

G. H. writes: Do ganglions on the wrist come from hard manual labor?

REPLY

The cause of these small cysts is no known. Ganglions are connected to the tendon sheaths and they develop in persons of all occupations.

FBI Talk Draws Bomb Threat At Tamalpais High

Agent Harold Leggett of the Federal Bureau of Investigation was discussing the bureau's career opportunities with about 75 students in Room 21 of the business education department when the threatening phone call came at 10:18 a.m.

A male voice said a bomb was set to go off in Room 21 and ended the call with the slogan "power to the people," police said.

The room was evacuated and police searched it. In the speaker's podium they found a device made of a metal pipe, with switches, batteries and wires taped to it, containing a white powder that looked like salt.

Officers removed the "bomb" from the building, then called the U.S. Army's bomb disposal unit from the Presidio of San Francisco. The bomb squad dismantled the device and labeled it a phony.

States Would Be Split By Time Zones

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe has asked Congress to amend the 1966 Uniform Time Law so that any state divided by two time zones can observe different times in the different zones.

The law now says only one time zone can be observed throughout any one state. States containing more than one time zone include Indiana, Kentucky, Tennesse, Florida, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Idaho, Texas, Oregon, Alaska and Kansas.

Residential Zoning For Novato Site

The Novato Planning Commission has recommended planned residential zoning for a 15.4-acre site east of the north campus site of the College of Marin.

Planners noted that the parcel was a portion of an area which had a "key position" in respect to the adjacent college site.

Commissioners Monday night recommended rezoning from limited agricultural to planned residential single family as requested gy Redwood Land and Investment Co.

The Novato Planning Commission also:

SAN MARIN PLAN — Recommended that the San Marin master plan be changed from multiple-family to single-family townhouse on five lots on the east side of San Andreas Drive between San Marin Drive and Andreas Court, as requested by Standard Investment Co.

CONDOMINIUM PLANS — Approved precise development plans for a 16-unit condominium complex on the east side of San Andreas Drive between San Marin Drive and San Andreas Court and for a three-unit apartment building at the northeast corner of San Andreas Drive and San Andreas Court.

REZONING — Recommended rezoning 8.88 acres on the east side of Marin Valley Drive, south of Bolling Drive, from Highway commercial to planned residential as requested by Myron Kaplan.

Protection Of Mountain Lions Asked

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, yesterday introduced legislation to save California's last remaining mountain lions from probable extinction.

Behr's bill would prohibit the use of dogs in hunting the vanishing lions.

The senator said the effect of his bill would be to bar hunting of the lions because dogs were the "only effective way to hunt them." Hunters use the dogs to track and tree lions, then shoot the treed lions.

He said the state Fish and Game Commission has estimated that only 600 mountain lions are left in the state. Since last July, he added, 48 lion kills in the state were confirmed by the Department of Fish and Game.

"At this rate, it will not be long before all remaining lions are killed," Behr said.

He said his bill fell short of an absolute prohibition on hunting, but that he had decided to try a less restrictive bill to help the measure pass.

Hearing On Flood Plan March 10

Depsite a Mill Valley plea for more time, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will proceed as planned with a public hearing March 10 on proposed flood control methods for Arroyo Corte Madera Del Presidio.

Corps officials have decided that, because several thousand fliers were sent to residents, politicians and businessmen, it is too late to call off the hearing.

On Feb. 15, the Mill Valley City Council voted to ask the corps to delay the hearing for two or three months to give the council time to set up a committee to study the creek and come up with a solution to ease flooding.

That solution, once adopted by the council, would be Mill Valley's official position on flood control and would be presented to the corps at the delayed hearing.

But the request reached the corps too late, and the March 10 meeting will take place as scheduled, at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Park School.

In the fliers sent to interested parties, District Engineer Col. Charles R. Roberts sets down the choices: do nothing, construct a concrete channel, build a bypass culvert to handle flood waters or floodproof some buildings and remove others.

Each plan has its advantages, he said, "A concrete channel is undesirable for environmental, ecological and aesthetic reasons but is one of the least expensive solutions; the diversions will cost more but putting the culvert underground will leave the stream in its natural state; uprooting the people who live and work (along the GCC creek) preserves the environment but would cause a great deal of personal stress."

A perfectly valid option, Roberts stressed, "could be, of course, to do nothing at all."

Roberts invited all interested persons to attend the hearing and contribute to the planning of the project. "We need the help of those who live in Mill Valley to reach a solution which represents a consensus," he said.

Labor Supports Antiwar Bill

The Marin County Central Labor Council has voted support for a bill now before the state legislature to exempt California servicemen from fighting in an undeclared war.

According to the North Bay Labor Journal, the council "placed itself squarely against" the war in Southeast Asia as well.

The Journal said the council agreed to send letters to three Marin County supervisors commending them for their support of the bill authored by Assemblyman John Vasconcellos; D-Campbell. The three supervisors are Michael Wornum, Peter R. Arrigoni and Arnold M. Baptiste.

Hiring On Agenda Of Strawberry Board

Hiring of a building manager and recreation supervisor and a custodian will be discussed when the Strawberry Recreation District board holds a special meeting at 6:30 p.m. today at the new community building.

Also on the agenda is setting of a date for a formal dedication of the building, according to Clerk Jeanne Heick.

This is the kind of story I like to write.

It's about a gentleman named Ted Cain of 75 Half Moon Road, Novato.

You probably read about his Herculean performance in College of Marin's 69-66 victory over Hartnell College of Salinas in their opening track and field meet of the season last Friday.

Cain merely contributed 26 points to the Marin upset. Besides anchoring the victorious mile relay team, he won the high hurdles, 440-yard run, the intermediate hurdles and the triple jump and placed third in the long jump.

Now, you can imagine how exhausting this would be. Especially when you realize that Mr. Cain will reach his 30th birthday on March 25! Yep, he's the senior citizen of junior college track. Heck, when I was 29 I spent most of the time with my rotund posterior firmly in a rocking chair.

Said Bailey: "During the meet Ted came up to me and asked how the score was going. When I told him it was pretty close, he told me he was going to enter the triple jump, although he hadn't tried that event since high school at Drake in 1961! And darned if he didn't WIN the thing. That's the type of a dedicated competitor and team man he is."

Cain is a quiet, modest type. Last season he was a wide receiver on the Marin football squad, although he sat out the latter part of the season with a knee injury.

Besides school work and track, he coaches basketball at Del Mar School in Tiburon. He is majoring in physical education and will graduate from Marin next June.

A native of San Rafael and a graduate of Drake, Class of 1961, Cain worked for a time in a cannery and then became a missionary for the Mormon Church. Before entering the Army he spent a year pursuing his education at Santa Rosa Junior College.

In the Army for two and one-half years, Ted first went to Officers' Training School and then to Vietnam for a year as a First Lieutenant in the Military Police. During the war Cain won a Purple Heart for a shrapnal wound in the back and also received a Bronze Star for what he modestly says was ". . . almost nothing."

As I said, I like to write stories like this because you can see that we have great sportsmen in Marin County and I know you will join me in wishing Ted Cain continued success.

TWENTY-NINE years old???? Where's my rocking chair?

THAT RUMOR going around that Craig Murray of San Rafael, president of Sears Point International Raceway until its collapse last year, is attempting to reopen the Southern Sonoma County auto speedway is true.

Murray confirmed the rumor yesterday by telling me that he has been in contact with Filmways, Inc., owner of the facility, and is continuing enthusiastic negotiations with the Los Angeles-based corporation.

A's Dobson Admits Taking 'Greenies'

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) —Chuck Dobson of the Oakland A's says he has taken "greenies . . . and Idon't see anything wrong with it.

"I had to pitch last year with the flu, so I took a greenie and pitched a shutout," he said in a training camp interview Tuesday.

Dobson said the pills, used to control appetite and emotional stress, had been around at least since he broke into professional baseball six years ago.

But Athletics trainer Joe Romo said he never gave out the pills on orders of the team doctor and owner Charlie Finley.

"There's no one on this team who depends on them," said Dobson. "That's what you've got to watch."

"You can't let them be a crutch. You're in trouble if you say 'I need them.' "

"Sometimes it make you feel like you have more stuff than you really do."

By DAVID EINSTEIN

As victory is sweet, the Redwood High School Giants tasted pure honey last night.

Before 2,000 fans in their gym at Larkspur, they won their 40th consecutive Marin County Athletic League basketball game under coach Dick Hart, and their third straight league championship as they turned back arch rival Tamalpais High of Mill Valley, 40-38.

Big Steve McGee singlehandedly erased a six point Tam lead late in the third quarter, and junior forward Dave Tikker sank three straight baskets early in the final period to vault the Giants past the only team that had a chance to catch them in the league standings. With only one game left in the season, Redwood is 13-0, the Indians 10-3.

With the MCAL crown goes an automatic berth in the Tournament of Champions next month in Oakland, and although no Marin team has ever won that prestigous event, Redwood has to be given a good chance — overall they are 19-5 this season, and currently are ranked seventh among all high school teams in the Bay Area.

Last night marked the second time this year the Giants have beaten Tam, but this one came much harder. At no time did the champions lead by more than five, and with 33 seconds to go, Tam's John Earl Huff made good on a diving layup to produce the final margin.

The ultimate winning points came 12 seconds earlier, when McGee went up over Will Garner for a layup. The play was,

LaFerriere Scores 43, But San Rafael Triumphs

Giant Dana LaFerriere of Novato's San Marin High School poured in a Marin County Athletic League record 43 points last night, but the amazing San Rafael High School Bulldogs rose to knock off the Mustangs, 79-75 in an MCAL basketball game at San Rafael.

LaFerriere, a 6-foot-9 senior who last year led all MCAL scorers with a 21-point per game average, continued his drive toward a second straight title as he boomed in 15 field goals and 13 free throws, to eclipse by four the record established last year by Ken Gommeringer of Tamalpais. LaFerriere began the game second in scoring behind Will Garner of Tam, but the latter got only nine points against Redwood, so the San Marin star moves into the lead with one game left to play.

What was surprising was San Rafael's offense, which has been rather anemic this season. Up until last night, in fact, the Bulldogs' best point effort had come in a 79-57 loss to San Marin in the first round robin.

Wayne Lechner came up with with his best effort of the season — 24 points on 11 baskets and two free throws — to pace the victory, San Rafael's fourth in 13 games. And he got ample support from three other Bulldogs in double figures; Jim Thorne had 15 points, and Jerry Molinari and Brad Wright collected 10 each.

From beginning to end the game was a free for all that saw San Rafael leading by eight at halftime and by five at the end of three quarters. That third quarter was particularly hectic, as a total of 47 points were scored by both teams.

For San Marin, the whole show was LaFerriere. The closest Mustang to him in scoring was Brad O'Riley with nine points. The loss was the Novato team's eighth of the MCAL campaign against five wins.

Warriors Play Tough, But Not Tough Enough

The Bucks took their 12th victory in a row Tuesday night with a 118-107 defeat of the Warriors, who play Detroit tonight.

The Bucks have taken the Warriors nine times out of nine this season as part of their overall 56-11 record. And the Warriors will have to open against Milwaukee should they make the NBA playoffs.

In Tuesday's game, Milwaukee appeared to have things wrapped up 69-53 early in the third period when Nate Thurmond hit three quick buckets and Nick Jones made a three-point play to make it interesting.

That was the last Warrior burst as Milwaukee led 84-79 after three stanzas and the Warriors never came back.

Jones and Thurmond had 31 and 24 for the Warriors and Oscar Robertson and Lew Alcindor hooped 26 and 25 for Milwaukee.

Marin Tars Host No. 1 DeAnza Tonight

When the College of Marin Tars faced De Anza Junior College last month in Cupertino, they lost by two points. And as they prepare to face the Dons tonight in Kentfield, Marin coach John Panagakis says, "Those two points look awful big right now."

The reason for his point of philosophy is plain to see. With only tonight's and Saturday night's games left in the regular season, the Tars trail De Anza by two games in the Camino Norte Conference. So, regardless of the outcome tonight, the Dons have but to beat last place Solano in their finale to clinch the title.

That fact doesn't diminish Marin's will to beat the league leaders, but it doesn't do much for the morale either. The Tars have come a long way, winning 24 of 28 games this season, to finish second. Their league record is 9 - 3, while De Anza is 11 - 1.

At any rate, Panagakis thinks, "it's going to be one heck of a ball game tonight," and judging by the last two games the Tars have played in Kentfield, that's a fair assumption.

In fact, Marin has not lost any of their 15 home games this season. Most recently, they edged Skyline Feb. 6 by a single point on Joe Smith's last second jump shot, and turned back Contra Costa last Wednesday on the final second heroics of Charlie Flynn.

Against De Anza Panagakis will try the same formula that proved successful against Contra Costa - namely an interchanging offense that continually moves center Roosevelt Green from a high to a low post and back again on the left side. This, when it works, accomplishes two things. It gives Green more manueverability than if he is constantly pinned on the baseline at the low post, a freedom he needs to be effective.

And as the 6-foot Green invariably draws the opposing center outside with him, it clears the middle underneath the basket. Ed Herrnberger took advantage of the open space for 23 points in the win over Contra Costa.

De Anza, led by 6-foot-6 Mike Tarabanovic, plays the same slow down, set up style as Marin, with possibly a little more emphasis on the full court press as a weapon. In general they rely on their defense more than their offense, although in Tarabanovic they have a player averaging 18.3 points per game.

Game time tonight is 8 o'clock.

BOATING

A Helpful Hint On Navigation

Here's a suggestion for anyone planning a cruise or just a long day trip that requires the frequent consultation of a chart. This hint is particularly useful if the chart is one of the very large ones which needs a seven-foot chart table to be spread out.

Before starting, go over your intended route or track and make a checklist of all the buoys and markers by type and number, and all the landmarks and hazards you will pass.

A list of this kind is very easy to manage. Also, it eliminates the danger of studying the chart for long periods of time since you can read it and still keep your eyes on the water ahead. By glancing at the checklist the skipper can see immediately what he has to look for next as he moves along.

Naturally, the chart will be carried along as well just in case more complete information is needed at some particular point.

Cruising has its own set of problems as many of the questions we get indicate:

Q. I'm planning a canal trip through several locks. Anything I should know?

A. Most lock walls are pretty rough, and if you scrape them, you can damage your boat. Take lots of fenders and bumpers of good quality and great strength. Also, throw in an extra boat hook and two or three lengths of mooring line. When you need them, you need them badly.

Q. I am about to retire, I would like to cruise the Pacific Northwest and the Gulf. Where can I rent or charter boats? Is there a list of charter and rental organizations?

A. The best list I know is in Boat Owners Buyers Guide, 50 West 44th Street, New York, N.Y. 10036. It costs $1.95. One word of advice. . .when renting be sure you have a complete and perfect understanding — on paper — with the charterer or lessor.

Q. I like to take along a shotgun to practice trapshooting with claybirds. I'm told I could get into trouble in some places. Is this so?

A. Lawyers assure me that as long as a gun (shotgun or rifle) is cased, taken down or obviously just being stored, you can take it almost anywhere. However before you take a gun out, and load it, ask some resident if there are local laws or hunting regulations that might apply. I ran into trouble myself this way once. . .I had a shotgun in a bird sanctuary that I didn't even know existed.

Q. How about insurance if I cruise to the Bahamas, Mexico and the Caribbean?

A. Check with your insurance agent or broker before you go, of course. Generally speaking, your present insurance will cover you — with only minor adjustments — in the once-British or still-British islands of Bermuda, the Bahamas and Caribbean, as well as the French, Dutch and U.S. islands there. However, in Mexico you had better buy new insurance from a Mexican company.

Q. How much does it cost to maintain a cruising type power boat?

A. I would say that depending on where one lives the cost of "owning" a cruiser runs between $35 and $60 per foot per year. I live in a high cost area and several cruising families I know budget for the higher figure. If there is anything left over at the end of the season, which is seldom, they put it in the sock towards a bigger boat.

Q. We're taking a couple we've known only a short time on a week's cruise. . . . .?

A. When they first come aboard be very businesslike and firm and show them where to stow their belongings. Point out that on a boat there must be a place for everything, and everything must be in its place. If trouble strikes, there's no time to put something away or look for whatever you need. Incidentally, going for a week with strangers is not a good idea. Take them for a day first. If they are messy people you will discover quickly that they won't take the same care of your boat as you do.

Trojans Wallop Novato

Joe Casteel, as exciting a basketball player as you're likely to find in the Marin County Athletic League, scored a career high 35 points last night to help the Terra Linda High School Trojans bury the Novato High Hornets, 70-53 in Novato.

The Trojans led all the way in winning their seventh of 13 league games this season. The victory assured them of a third place finish; with one game to go, they can neither rise nor fall in the league standings. For Novato, the loss kept them in fourth place with a 5-8 record.

Casteel, whose razzle dazzle style of play gained him 25 points last Friday night, displayed even less caution last night in sinking 12 field goals an 11 free throws. And he could have had more, but he missed on seven attempts from the free throw line.

The senior forward's performance, which will without doubt move him up from the No. 6 spot he holds among the league's scoring leaders, overshadowed a 20-point effort by the MCAL's third leading scorer, Joe DeMaestri. The Novato guard, who scored 34 points last Friday night, was devastating on the free throw line, where he collected 10 of his points.

in a sense, a capsule summary of the game, as it saw the Giants' 6-foot-6 center, who embodies more than anyone else his team's undeniable will to win, challenge the awesome Garner and come out ahead. The points were McGee's ninth and 10th of the second half; he led all scorers with 11.

Tikker, a reserve forward bothered early in the year by a problem ankle, came off the bench in the opening minutes of the fourth quarter and put Redwood ahead to stay with his first basket. After breaking a 31-all tie, he came back with two more layups that virtually decided the outcome.

In the first half the game was a dead even contest, with the lead changing hands eight times. Yet Redwood took the game to Tam, and it was only the superior defensive work of Garner that kept the Giants from breaking things open. He blocked five shots — did not allow a cheap layup, and kept McGee under control.

For Redwood, the key man in the first half was its leading scorer on the year, 6-foot-6 forward Scott Trobbe. The Indians succeeded in nullifying his threat, but it took two men, Lee Eaton and Steve Miles, to do the job, and they each picked up three first half fouls in the process. Trobbe, who finished behind McGee with eight points, went to the free throw line six times before intermission, and came away with five charity points.

Huff led the Indians with 10 points, followed by Garner with nine and Eaton with eight.

PGA TOURNAMENT UNDER WAY

Stockton Insists He's Not Favorite

By JOHN G. GRIFFIN
UPI Sports Editor

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (UPI)—Defending champion Dave Stockton, "tired" and suffering from low blood pressure, insisted today he shouldn't be the favorite in the PGA golf championship opening here on Thursday.

"Just because I won the PGA six months ago in Tulsa, Oklahoma, doesn't mean I should be favored to win the PGA this week in Florida," said the dark-haired, 30-year-old champ from Westlake, Calif.

"Some fellow who has actually won over this particular course would be a bettter choice," he added, but then admitted that he believes he does "have a chance" because he has been playing well recently despite not feeling very well.

"I'm just tired and run down," he explained. "I've been trying to do too much —running all over the country doing a lot of things that were business but weren't really golf. I got them done, but I darn near killed myself doing it.

"As far as I'm concerned," he said with a grin, "I'm ready to tell Arnie Palmer that he can have all this chasing around in airplanes, going here and there.

"I was in New York City last week," he went on, "and when I got home to California on Wednesday I was feeling punk. So on Saturday I went to the doctor. He took my blood pressure and then took it again because he didn't believe it. I always have low blood pressure, anyway, but this time it was 70.

"Heck, my doctor said he's got cardiac cases that have better blood pressure than that. He told me I should rest four or five days, but I told him I couldn't because I had to come here this week. He laughed and gave me some shots, and I took one day off with my family, and then came here, I'm feeling quite a bit better now."

Stockton, who won by two strokes in Tulsa, said the par 36-36—72 East course of the PGA National Country Club, where the tournament will be held, could be the kind of course on which he plays well.

"It's fairly narrow, and one of the strong points of my game has been keeping the ball in play," he said. "At Tulsa I was the only player in the field who finished the tournament under par. And right now, if you offered me, I'd accept an even-par score here, and I don't think there'd be very many, if anybody, beat me."

Like Palmer, Stockton also was concerned about the gusty breezes here.

"It's going to be blowing for sure," he said. "It seems to be a rule, though, that the wind blows in a different direction for practice rounds than it does for the tournament. Tuesday I hit a 7-iron to one green and thought that with the wind coming from the opposite direction I'd be lucky to reach it with a 2-iron."

Stockton's reign could be the shortest in PGA history if he loses here, because the PGA was the last of the "Big Three" U.S. tournaments to be played in 1970 and is the first this year. But history is on his side —the last time there was only six months between tournaments, Denny Shute successfully defended the crown in 1936.

Stockton and Palmer were not among the pros who competed in last weekend's Tucson Open and were forced to fly here after a rain-dalayed 36-hole windup on Monday. The Tucson players straggled into West Palm Beach via a charter plane and reached their hotel at 4:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Marin Catholic Too Much For Drake '5'

The Marin Catholic High School Wildcats, behind a magnificent all-around effort by forward Tim Stone, broke a five-game losing streak last night by defeating the Drake High School Pirates, 60-40 in Kentfield.

As a result of the contest both teams, along with San Rafael, share last place in the Marin County Athletic League basketball standings with identical 4-9 records.

Stone, a junior, netted 27 points and ripped off 25 rebounds to lead the Wildcats to their first victory since Jan. 29, when they beat Terra Linda. Twelve of Stone's points came in the last quarter, but that was just so much icing on the cake. By that time Marin was comfortably in command, having preserved a 15 point halftime lead throughout the third quarter.

In order to be fair to the Pirates, it must be considered that they were coming off a tough loss to undefeated Redwood. They simply had nothing left for this one, and they got mauled. Bob Gregg had a decent night with 14 points to lead the San Anselmo team, but none of his teammates hit double figures.

Stone had plenty of help, as Marin, an up-and-down team all year, was definitely "up." Bill Donellan, the league's fifth leading scorer, got 11 points, and Jim Sullivan added 10. But Stone was the deciding factor; he accounted for his points with 13 field goals and a single free throw. Most of his baskets came from the middle distance range of about 15 feet.

No Secrets, Just Some Hard Work

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. — Charlie Fox flipped through the pages of a Press-Radio-TV Guide compiled by the publicity office of the Giants. The front cover bore an artist's sketch of Fox with the legend, "The Year of the Fox."

"I WISH I did have some secret up my sleeve," said Fox as 1971 spring training for his 35-man squad got under way. "The only secret I know to success is work."

But what about the slogan attributed to him in the biographical sketch of the manager on Page 6 of the Press Guide? "Fun in '71," said the slogan.

"I did say something about fun when they asked me for a quote," said Fox. "However, it's only fun in baseball when you win."

FOX THEN patted a loose leaf folder he was carrying. "This," he said, "will be my guide for the next six weeks. It took me a good part of the winter to prepare it. You know, this is the first time I've been in charge of a major league spring training operation. So I prepared my own manual."

Fox, of course, has been a member of spring training staffs many times previously. But this is the first time he's been boss. He didn't become manager of the Giants last year until the season was six weeks under way and his predecessor, Clyde King, was fired.

"I COULD have trusted my memory on day-to-day training schedules," said Fox. "If I had, sure as shooting, I'd forget something."

There isn't anything startling in the Fox manual on how a spring training camp should be operated. There are the usual references to "cover first base" drills by pitchers, "relay-cut-off" drills by outfielders and infielders, and similar routines dealing with baseball basics.

EVEN THE NEW defense alignment of the Giant infield, with the shortstop and second baseman playing closer to the bag while the third baseman moves off the line closer to the shortstop hole, is not startling. Other teams have featured such defenses long before this. The Giants, under Fox, are just getting around to it in an effort to improve double play production.

"I said a couple of weeks ago when I met with the press in Candlestick Park that we wouldn't guard the third base line this year," said Fox. "That goes even for the ninth inning."

FOX ALSO said during the Candlestick press conference that the Giants could win the pennant if they cemented their DP combo and if they came up with reasonably reliable No. 3 and No. 4 pitchers behind the team aces, Gaylord Perry and Juan Marichal.

Would he care to make a fearless and unqualified pennant prediction now?

"I'm on a tough enough vot as it is," said Fox. "Remember, this is my first spring training as the boss."

Giants' Veteran Brannick Retires From Baseball

It's the first day of his official retirement from the game he was a part of for 65 years—longer than any living person.

Brannick, who will be 78 in July, joined the New York Giants as ball boy to manager John McGraw and office boy to owner John T. Brush in 1906 and remained with the club until Tuesday, when he informed current owner Horace Stoneham of his desire to retire as club secretary.

Brannick has decided to live his retirement years in Palm Beach, Fla., a town he "fell in love" with many years ago while storming through Florida in spring training.

Figure Skating

LYON, France (UPI)—Mens European skating champion Ondrej Nepela of Czechoslovakia held off a late challenge from Patrick Pera of France Wednesday to win the compulsory figures at the world skating championships by 0.8 of a point.

No Agreement Yet By Mays, Stoneham

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. (UPI) —Willie Mays usually signs his contract early and without protest—but not this season.

The soon-to-be-40 centerfielder of the San Francisco Giants is already two days late reporting and negotiations between boss Horace Stoneham and the Giants' superstar reportedly have broken down.

One big logjam to settlement is Herman Franks, the ex-Giants manager who lives in Salt Lake City and acts as Mays' business agent. He plans to fly here in a few days.

Mays made a reported $135,000 last year and reportedly wants a $20,000 hike and a multi-year contract.

Mays, who will enter his 19th major league season, hit .291 last year with 28 homers and 83 runs batted in.

Meanwhile, the club planned a morning workout today, with three other unsigned Giants included—catcher Dick Dietz, outfielder Bobby Bonds and infielder Tito Fuentes.

New Seal Tom Williams In Lineup For Tonight

OAKLAND (UPI)—Newly acquired Tom Williams will be in the lineup tonight when the California Golden Seals host Montreal.

Each had scored 10 goals while Hampson led in assists 20-13. But Williams, one of the few American-born players in the game, has played in 19 fewer games.

Williams had recently been suspended by North Star coach Jack Gordon for insubordination. Seals coach Fred Glover said Williams can either play wing or center.

Hampson, expected to play for Minnesota against Los Angeles tonight, led the Seals in scoring the past two seasons with 75 and 52 points. He was the team's Most Valuable Player and winner of the Bill Masterson Memorial Trophy two seasons ago.

"I was reluctant to give up Teddy," Glover said Tuesday. "But they wanted him and I feel both sides will benefit."

"Teddy was shocked," the coach said, "but he took it properly, like the class guy he is. There are few guys around with his attitude."

Hampson said later he wasn't surprised, since the club has been going badly and trades are usually the result.

"I'm not unhappy about where I'm going, but I'm sad about leaving here."

Williams has scoring ability, as shown by the 23 goals in Boston in 1962-63 before the expansion and his 18 goals and 32 assists for the Bruins in 1967-68.

ALMANAC

Today is Wednesday, Feb. 24, the 55th day of 1971.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Pisces.

On this day in history:

In 1920 a group of Germans organized the National Socialist party, a forerunner of the Nazi party.

In 1922 Henri Iandru, best known to the world as "Bluebeard," was executed in Versailles, France, for murdering 10 of his 13 sweethearts.

In 1945 American troops liberated Manila from the Japanese.

In 1966 President Nnkrumah of Ghana was ousted from office.

A thought for today: French writer Pierre Corneille said, "He who allows himself to be insulted deserves to be."

French Bulldog Wins Honors

I-J Special Report

SAN JOSE — A 6-month-old French bulldog owned by Joy MacFarlane of Corte Madera was judged "best of winners" at the American Kennel Club dog show held by the Santa Clara Valley Kennel Club in San Jose.

"Raha" was also named winner of the novice class for French bulldogs, best of breed and winner's dog. He is one of a litter of puppies raised by Janice Hampton of Tiburon.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

A Popular Song Supplies Very Poor Guide For Play

Many years ago, when I was still in school, I used to sing a popular song of the day, "The Best Things In Life Are Free," to my girlfriends. It didn't do me much good then, and my experience at the bridge table has reinforced that lesson. If I had any talent for songwriting, I would use this title: "Things Things That Look Free Are Usually Expensive, Tra-La."

"FREE" FINESSE

West led the five of spades, and South was delighted to take the "free" finesse with dummy's jack. If this held the trick, well and good. If it didn't, South assured himself, he could still win the trick with his own ace.

The spade finesse was so free that it cost South the game and rubber. East covered the jack with the queen of spades, and South won with the ace. Declarer led the queen of clubs for a finesse, and East won with the king. East promptly returned the ten of spades.

Declarer saw the handwriting on the wall but tried to recover by refusing the second round of spades. He took the next spade with dummy's king, ran the clubs and then tried for a heart trick.

NO MERCY

East had no mercy on declarer. As soon as hearts were led, East stepped in with the ace of hearts and defeated the contract with the rest of the spades.

As we have seen, the spade finesse was very expensive. South makes his contract if he resists the temptation to play dummy's jack of spades at the first trick.

LOW SPADE

South should play dummy's low spade at the first trick, winning in his hand with the ace. When declarer next loses the club finesse, East cannot afford to lead spades up to dummy's king-jack. East must shift to a diamond.

South wins with the king of diamonds, runs the clubs and leads the king of hearts to force out the ace. He is sure of 10 tricks and scores 630 points instead of minus 100 points.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - Q 10 9 8 7
♥ - A 9 2
♦ - Q 10 6
♣ - K 7.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade.

You have 11 points in high cards and one point for the doubleton, just enough for an optional opening bid. You choose to bid rather than pass because of the exceptionally good spot cards in spades. (Some conservative experts would pass this borderline hand.)

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL

IRS Code Allows You Deductions On Certain Necessary Expenses

The Internal Revenue Code allows individuals to take a deduction for ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred (1) for the production and collection of income; (2) for the management, conservation or maintenance of property held for the production of income; or (3) in connection with the determination, collection or refund of any tax.

The expenses of commuting between your residence and any business location situated within the area of your tax home are not deductible, regardless of distance, or different locations on different days.

If you haul tools, etc., in your car in commuting to and from your place of business for your convenience, the cost of operating the car is nondeductible. However, if you cannot store the tools, etc., at the place you work, or if you work at different locations every day, and also you would not have used your car except for hauling tools, etc., which are too bulky or heavy to be carried otherwise, the expense may be deductible.

Work clothes and uniforms are deductible if your occupation is one which specifically requires special apparel or equipment as a condition of employment and it is not adaptable to general or continued usage so as to take the place of ordinary clothing. Deductible work clothes include the cost of special apparel and equipment required in the occupations of transportation workers, actors, ballplayers, firemen, police officers, letter carriers, nurses and civilian faculty members of a military school.

If you are a reservist in the Armed Forces, you may deduct, to the extent not reimbursed, the cost of your uniform if it may legally be worn only while performing duties as a reservist. In computing the deduction, the cost must be reudced by any non-taxable allowance you receive on account of such expenses. If you are on full-time duty in the Armed Forces, the cost of your uniform is not deductible.

School teachers: Amounts which you pay for a substitute teacher to take your place are deductible. However, you are not entitled to this deduction to the extent that it is allocable to amounts excluded as sick pay.

The following, if requirements are met, may also be deducted:

Subscriptions to professional journals, etc., relating ot your business or profession; membership dues in professional societies; union dues; small tools and supplies; employment agency fees; physical examination fees paid by you and required by your employer to establish your physical fitness to retain your job; moving expenses for a new job; traveling expenses not reimbursed by your employer; entertainment expenses not reimbursed by your employer; school teachers' sabbatical leave expenses; use of your home in your work; attorneys' and accountants' fees on tax matters; automobile expenses not reimbursed by your employer; educational expenses.

Get a copy of "Your Federal Income Tax 1970 Edition for Individuals" from your office of the IRS (cost 75 cents) and look up every item of expense you had in 1970. You may have an unexpected deduction.

Prices Firm In Brisk Day On Exchange

NEW YORK (UPI)—Prices were strong through the second hour on Wall Street Wednesday. Turnover was fairly heavy.

Some analysts said the market continued to benefit from aggressive buying by institutions convinced better times are ahead for the economy. Others noted that President Nixon's mild stand against the inflationary spiral in the construction industry also helped spur demand for stocks.

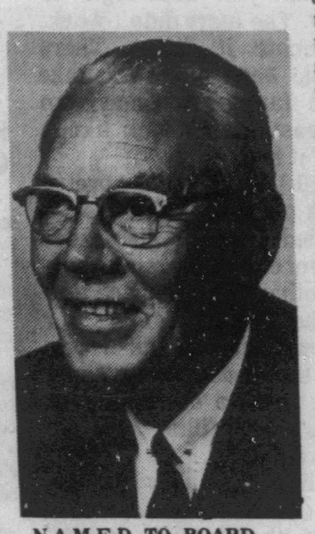
Shortly before noon, the Dow Jones industrial average was ahead more than 6 1-2 points at 876.71. Advances led declines, 952 to 282.

Prices also gained in heavy turnover on the American Stock Exchange. Of the 981 issues on the tape, 623 pointed higher, while 156 retreated.

On the Big Board, IBM gained 2 3-4, Burroughs 3 3-8, Atlantic Richfield 3 3-4, and Walt Disney 2 3-8.

Up a point or more were Du Pont, United Aircraft, Flying Tiger, Honeywell, Fairchild Camera, American Research & Development, and Wrigley Co.

Motors were fractionally higher, while steels traded in narrowly irregular fashion.



NAMED TO BOARD — Fred F. Enemark, executive vice president and managing officer of Bell Savings and Loan Association, has been elected a director of the parent company, Pacific Coast Holdings, Inc. He was with Marin County Savings and Loan Association in San Rafael for 18 years before it was merged with San Mateo Savings and Loan last June to form Bell Savings.

Singer Co. Buys Bescoe Builders

SAN LEANDRO (UPI) —The Singer Co. of New York has purchased Bescoe Builders Inc., a home building organization with annual sales of approximately $57 million.

Besco, which has headquarters in San Leandro, will be known as Singer Housing Co., it was announced Tuesday.

The purchase price was not made public.

3 Affiliated Insurance Firms Take Offices At Holiday Plaza

Now installed in their new offices in the Holiday Plaza Office Building, 1050 Northgate Drive, Terra Linda are three affiliated companies — Automobile Mutual Insurance Co. of America, Factory Mutual Liability Insurance Co. of America and AMICA Life Insurance Co.

They take up the entire west wing of the fifth floor with slightly more than 4,000 square feet, leased last September through Grubb and Ellis Co. The group has its headquarters in Providence, R.I. and this office represents an enlargement and removal from the Russ Building in San Francisco, where it was located for many years. Factory Mutual Liability, by the way, is entirely unrelated to Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Co., another company which has an office on Gallinas Avenue, not far from here.

Automobile Mutual is reported to be the first company in the United States to have written a policy on an automobile - so its operations go back for a considerable period.

Heading the Terra Linda staff is Rodger Broomhead, resident vice president, who lives in Ross. Earl Kroehler, a vice president and district claims manager is a resident of San Rafael. Altogether the offices are staffed by eight men and 12 women, some of whom are moving to Marin or already own property in the county.

THE INDEPENDENT DRUG STORE has a better record for survival than most other independent businesses, but is still being threatened by skidding net profits caused by intense competition and higher operating costs, according to the Bank of America.

The bank's last issue of its Small Business Reporter deals with many of the independent drug store's problems and gives suggestions for its success. Single copies of the report are available through any of the bank's branches or by writing Small Business Reporter, Department 3120, Bank of America, San Francisco 94120.

DENNISON L. LARSON of Novato has been named a vice president of Ross Medical Corp. He has had 17 years experience in the medical facility field and since last year has been administrator of the Broadway Hospital in Vallejo, one of the institutions owned by Ross Medical.

Larson Berghout

J.M. BERGHOUT of Novato has been promoted to superintendent of American Mail Line in Portland and will transfer to that office on March 1. A Marin resident for about 10 years, he has been district operations manger in San Francisco since 1966. Previously he was with General Steamship Corp. for nine years. He and his wife are natives of the The Netherlands and have been citizens of this country since 1962.

STATE FARM INSURANCE COMPANIES agents Albert S. Re and Colin G. Hill have moved their offices to 1554 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael. Re was formerly at 1314 Second Street. Hill was previously at 1380 Lincoln Avenue.

REAL ESTATE: Alice Woodson is now with the Frank Howard Allen and Co. Tiburon office . . . There has been no change in the state requirements to obtain a real estate salesman's license, which are identical to what they have been for years. Some confusion exists, says the Anthony School of Real Estate, because of additional requirements for a real estate broker's license.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Alberto-Culver's Push In Marketing

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Many people are saying that consumer-oriented stocks are among the best groups for 1971. I've been thinking about investing in Alberto-Culver. Please advise. — L.P.

A. Due to an aggressive advertising effort and new product introductions, Alberto-Culver's growth has continued uninterrupted since 1966. Even amidst a generally sluggish economy, Alberto managed to ring up substantial gains for 1970, with a 19 per cent advance in per share profits and a 10.1 per cent increase in sales.

Company also reported improved results for the first quarter of 1971, ended December. Sales and earnings were up 7.7 per cent and 12 per cent, respectively. Aiding recent results was the success of such new items as Born Free shampoo and Shimmy Shins creme depilatory plus continued strong growth for the FDS feminine hygiene line, Milani Foods and international operations.

Alberto's proved marketing expertise and the prospect of further expansion of the product line lend long-range appeal to shares.

Q. I bought shares in Ivy Fund as a small investment. Should I hold and increase my shares, or sell? My wife and I are retired but do not need the money now. Would you assess this fund? — L.G.

A. Ivy Fund is best suited for investors who can afford to take above-average risks. Overall, the fund's portfolio is speculative. For the most part, Ivy specializes in small, young growth companies, large numbers of which are over-the-counter or traded on the American Stock Exchange.

While many of these issues are still lagging behind the general market, Street interest is definitely accelerating in these secondary situations — a potential plus for Ivy.

Although results for the past two years have been rather disappointing, Ivy has compiled one of the best five-year records in the mutual fund field. Fund's net asset value climbed 142 per cent in the 1965-1969 period. Retain present holdings for recovery. Use new money for diversification of your portfolio.

Banker Predicts Inflation Stop

LONDON (UPI) — A top U.S. banker says he is optimistic that the United States would be able to put a cap on inflation.

"We have won a couple of battles but this does not mean we have won the war," Richard D. Hill, president of the First National Bank of Boston, told a luncheon group. "Setbacks are always possible."

He said he had noted slowdowns in price increases and unit costs.

The Code Words Were 'Hatefulness Hatefulness'

The foulup which sent a false "national emergency" alert to all radio stations last Saturday — but did not cause all of them to leave the air as they were supposed to do according to the script — tells us a few things about both the state of national preparedness ,and the degree of national sanity.

What it tells us is not reassuring.

BACK IN THE DAYS when the Berlin Wall was new and Cold War tensions were high, when frightened Americans were building bomb shelters in their back yards and winding country roads were being marked as "escape routes" in case of an attack, the assorted "preparedness" plans included what was then called Conelrad.

Its purpose was to use the radio stations to alert Americans immediately in case this country were attacked — presumably with atomic missiles. Certain stations were designated to broadcast instructions emanating from the Defense Department, if an alert were broadcast. The rest were to get off the air and stay off.

To keep the stations on their toes, the Defense Department from time to time sent out a "practice alert." But to prevent panic, it was carefully labeled as such.

THE COLD WAR did not heat up. People quit building bomb shelters. Some reality returned to the national thinking. But Conelrad, renamed Emergency Alert Network, remained in being. And the "practice alert" became scheduled as exactly as any other radio program: every Saturday at 6:30 a.m.

Every Saturday, a Civil Service employee in a cave in Colorado would lift a piece of punched tape off a hook and feed it into a transmitter connected with Associated Press and United Press International radio news networks. It would send the practice alert message.

At the radio stations, the men handling the news wires of course became accustomed to this. As they tore off the teletype copy, they would just cut off the "practice alert" message and discard it.

THAT'S WHAT a lot of them did last Saturday. Only this time it was not a practice alert. It was the real attack message.

Nobody had attacked. The President had not ordered the real message sent. That man in the cave in Colorado just picked up the wrong tape.

It is fortunate it didn't. There would have been panic to make Orson Welles' famous invasion from Mars broadcast alarm look like a tired yawn if it had.

THE FOULUP SHOWS pretty plainly that a planned "alert" is not to be depended upon. It also gives chilling evidence of what might happen if some other Civil Service employee, in the Pentagon, for instance, should feed in the wrong tape or push the wrong button some time, causing missile bases around the nation to start filling the air with atomic warheads.

The Orwellian unreality of the whole approach — and the state of national sanity that brought it into being — is epitomized by the code words used to identify the "real" alert. They were: "Hatefulness Hatefulness."

Strange Inconsistency

San Francisco Local 21, International Typographical Union, won San Francisco Labor Council backing recently to seek an investigation by the legislature of the local's strike against the Independent-Journal. Obedient to the labor council's wishes, Assemblyman John L. Burton, D-San Francisco, introduced a resolution calling for such an investigation.

Last week, it was disclosed that a special federal grand jury is starting an investigation of the strike. This came to light when an attorney for the ITU local attempted to quash subpoenas issued for some of its members.

Why does the ITU advocate an investigation by the legislature but oppose an investigation by a grand jury?

Sales Tax On Gasoline Might Answer Transit Needs

By JACK COOPER

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Assemblyman Wadie Deddeh, the San Diego Democrat from Bagdad, may have a winner in his bill to pour a little state money into local public transportation.

Deddeh, this semester's chairman of the Assembly Trnasportation Committee, has introduced a bill to wipe out the sales tax exemption on gasoline and use the proceeds, about $150 million a year, to shore up city, county and district operated transit systems.

A specific exception is San Francisco's BART, whose electric train system was born of a bond issue and is nourished by an extra half-cent general sales tax in the three counties of the district.

Deddeh's bill, AB 544, would let the local agencies tap the fund for up to half the operating costs of their systems, and this is a big thing because nobody can remember when farebox revenues have paid for local transit operations on any but a few choice lines.

Removing the sales tax exemption would result in an added cost of about a cent and a half for a gallon of gas, and in this column's opinion, that isn't too much to pay to give a lift to those who need one.

Deddeh's scheme has the advantage that it would support public transportation, buses in most cases, without cutting into funds for city streets, county roads and state highways.

It has the funds managed by the secretary of the state Transportation and Business Agency and keeps the purse strings in the hands of the Legislature, making the whole project a statewide concern.

The governor wouldn't even have to look on it as a new tax. The sales tax is old hat in California, and Deddeh's bill simply closes up one of the many loopholes in its application, you might say.

Hunt Clubs Have Control Purpose

In answer to Ian K. McDougall on his negative response to hunt clubs:

I wonder if he puts out a mouse trap. If he didn't the mice would chew the shoes off his feet.

The deer, rabbits, cougars, etc. have a controlled hunting reason. Only a specified kill to balance their existence.

If we listen to him he would close all the butcher shops. No beef steaks and I like them.

Death Penalty For The Guiltless?

I was very upset with the story which you printed after the abortion symposium at Dominican College on Feb. 9. The story that appeared was not reporting — it should have been on the editorial page. I couldn't believe that I had been at the meeting.

It was obvious from the story that the reporter was remiss for not staying for the second half of the program.

Rev. Charles Carroll emphasized the tragedy that is occurring when today's society isn't concerned with the taking of life.

Dr. (Ronald) Connelly strongly pointed out that the embryo is a human being — in that it has the potential for rational thought, and the potential for growth from within.

Dr. John Noonan gave a resume of the position the law has had in regard to the fetus —and it has since the 1st century recognized the wrong in abortion. Dr. Noon also asked the question why abortion is popular today? He saw it as the desire for freedom —particularly sexual freedom —pregnancy as a deterrent to this sexual freedom. He saw it also as a desire for order — desire for a plan —part of the plan for population control.

These are the selfish reasons people have when outwardly they say they are concerned for the theoretical case of incest, rare case of rape and the defective child. Planning cannot include the taking of life. It is strange that we can be so concerned with the taking of life in the death chair but show little concern for the life that has done no one harm.

May all people show love and concern for all human life.

Students' Sense Of Values Right

This letter is with reference to Mr. J. Nelson King's letter on the reasoning power and sense of values of Redwood High School students who would rank comedians and draft evaders near the top of the list of men they most admire and the President and vice president at the bottom. . .

First, I would like to stress I am a grandmother and I do not have any member of my family attending Redwood High School, so my opinion of the choice these kids made is completely impersonal. I not only admire their integrity and honesty in picking a draft evader since almost all of them think the war is wrong. I admire their common sense in picking a comedian who encourages them to laugh at the absolutely tragic aspect of their future, so that they don't go insane at the thought of what they are likely to take on in adulthood because of this President and vice president Mr. King is so incensed about their not admiring.

No matter what the President says about his motives for doing this, the fact staring these kids in the face is that we have expanded this war into two other countries and it certainly does not look like these kids and/or their friends are going to be sitting safely at home living the life they want to live as Mr. J. Nelson King is doing. . .

In my opinion these kids show a great deal more sense of values and reasoning power than Mr. King.

Make Plans Now For Next Oil Spill

In the aftermath of the recent San Francisco Bay oil spill, as participants in the bird-washing operation at the Audubon Sanctuary on Richardson Bay, we feel that the high mortality rate of the birds was partly a result of lack of knowledge and coordination in the efforts of the volunteers. As future spills seem inevitable, it is imperative that guidelines be formulated now for the next emergency.

First, we believe that in the future, supervision of rescue and care of all oil-soaked birds should be authorized by one organization such as the Audubon Society. Ideally, such an organization would conduct periodic bird-care classes for members and maintain an up-to-date list of trained volunteers who could be called upon in an emergency. . .

Second, to achieve this goal, a follow-up study needs to be done to determine which of the various cleaning and care techniques used in the San Francisco and other recent oil spills proved to be the most effective . . .

We also would like to suggest that consideration be given to ways of effectively organizing the available manpower at the time of crisis. In this recent experience, many people, in their desire to be helpful, insisted upon staying beyond the point of exhaustion where their services were more detrimental than helpful to the well-being of the birds. This situation was unfortunate as many capable individuals who volunteered to help were turned away.

And so, no matter where another major oil spill occurs, whether it is next week or in the next decade, let us benefit from this tragic experience and be prepared to face the next one more efficiently and effectively.

Langendorf Replies To Ralph Nader

On Feb. 16, your paper reported on a complaint filed by Ralph Nader with the Federal Trade Commission in Washington, D.C.

While Mr. Nader's complaint dealt with a specific brand of bread and his implication of its false nutritional claims, I feel that your vast readership may accept this as a sweeping indictement (sic) of all branded white bread.

Specifically, neither American Bakeries Co. nor its Langendorf Division, have claimed unfounded nutritional benefits for its enriched white bread. In fact, one week before Mr. Nader filed his complaint, American Bakeries Co. embarked on an ambitious program that will result in a significant increase in the nutritional level of every one of its enriched bread and roll items. . .

Since you are in the position of shaping and influencing attitudes, I think it is important that you enlighten your audience that not all branded white bread is sold under a cloud of suspicion. More specifically, some of us are earnestly striving to provide the American consumer with the most nutritious product possible.

Those Who Cry 'Credibility Gap' Should Check Own Credibility

WASHINGTON — The credibility-gap epithet has been hurled so constantly at the Johnson and Nixon administrations that somebody ought to look at the other side of the coin.

What about the epithet-hurlers themselves? What is their record on credibility? Is it so impeccable that their accusations against the President, the secretary of state, the secretary of defense and others should be readily accepted as true, or is it so bad that the public ought to begin to wonder who really are the guilty ones — the accused or the accusers?

Consider this:

THE DRUMBEAT of most of the extreme Senate doves for a long time was that military victory for the United States in Vietnam was impossible, that we were losing the war and couldn't win it.

It is a debatable view, but one which certainly could be honestly defended.

Those who embraced this premise — that we were losing the war and never could win — concluded that the United States ought to get out and get out quick.

But they did not want to try to sell the American people on the proposition they really believed in — that we ought to quit because we couldn't win. And they apparently did not wish to seem to be presiding over the first defeat in war in American history.

SO WHAT DID the get-out-quick advocates propose to tell the American people? They proposed that the President of the United States proclaim that the United States had won the war and that we could then withdraw immediately in a victorious retreat self-proclaimed as a victory!

How is that for a credibility gap? Isn't that intellectually corrupt? Isn't that morally dishonest? What do you think?

Certainly it is credible to argue that the United States was losing the Vietnamese war and wasn't likely to win it militarily.

Certainly it is credible to argue that for any number of reasons the United States should end its combat role in Vietnam.

But it is incredible for these same people to ask the nation to take their word that the United States couldn't win the war and simultaneously urge that the President proclaim we had won it and should therefore withdraw.

These are the people who cry "credibility gap" whenever the President says or does something about Vietnam with which they disagree.

Consider this:

WHEN THE PRESIDENT told the American people that the U.S. ground forces would be out of Cambodia in 60 days, the epithet-hurlers instantly called into play the "credibility ap" accusation. But when U.S. ground forces were withdrawn right on schedule, did the epithet-hurlers find a way to admit their error? They didn't.

When the President told the American people that no U.S. ground troops were being used in the thrust against the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos, the credibility gappers were at it again. They first suggested that the administration was returning to the illusion of winning the war on the battlefield. Pure fabrication.

Next, some correspondents set out to find at least one lone GI who may have strayed across the border by mistake. A photographer claimed that he had "identified" a soldier in Laos in U.S. uniform. It was only a one-day story but it was something on which to hang another credibility gap accusation.

IT IS A FINE tradition of Anglo-Saxon law that litigants can't go into court except with clean hands.

Isn't it time to begin to question the credentials of those who manufacture the biggest credibility gaps in the political market place?

Turkey's Poppy Fields Grow Death For U.S.

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — Deaths from misuse of heroin have become so commonplace in our big cities that they get little more attention than traffic accidents. This week a Washington youth was found dead with a syringe hanging from a vein in his arm, and it was worth three paragraphs far inside the newspaper. Routine news.

On the same day, a firing squad executed five men in the city of Rezaieh in northeast Iran for illegally trafficking in heroin. That brought the number put to death for such dealing to nearly 60 since the government there began a crackdown.

BETWEEN THE POPPY fields of the Near East and the dead boy on a doorstep in an American city is a well-primed international pipeline for illegal heroin, out of which smugglers, processers and pushers are tapping millions of tainted dollars every week.

The mood of some in Congress it to shut off the pipeline cold, if necessary by cutting out all American aid to the countries where the deadly drug originates. But the House Select Committee on Crime, in a thorough study of the international traffic, discloses endless and subtle complications, involving the domestic politics and regional traditions of one of our country's firmest allies.

That ally is Turkey, source of about 80 per cent of all the heroin reaching the United States. From there most of it flows through the French port of Marseilles, to be smuggled by air and sea into the trade here.

THE TURKISH government's effort to reduce the illegal traffic has not been nearly so harsh as those in next-door Iran. About 80,000 Turkish farmers make their living from growing poppies, and the government buys a large part of their crop for legal processing into morphine for medical use. Under American pressure, the Turks have cut down the number of provinces in which poppies may be grown legally to only four from a previous 50 and the legal acreage to less than a third of what it was 15 years ago.

Yet in the same period, during the rapid growth of drug abuse in this country, the demand has grown for illicit heroin — and the demand has been met, at great profit to the traffickers-in-death who transport the drug, process it, cut it, package it, and eventually sell it on the street.

The irony is that Turkey itself has no serious heroin addiction problem. Its officials are reluctant to believe American reports of how urgent the problem is here. And they are restricted by other factors from simply wiping out poppy cultivation, which has been a way of life for farmers in some areas there for generations. The political potential of the issue there is clear in the fact that Prime Minister Suleyman Demorel himself comes from the largest opium-producing province in Turkey.

COMBINE THESE facts with the hard geopolitical realities: Turkey has been for years the indispensable southeastern anchor of NATO, controlling the Dardanelles, which are the only direct route for Russian naval movement into the Mediterranean and the Middle East. In addition, there has been increasing anti-American agitation in Turkey and a softening of the long-standing Turkish hatred for the Russians.

Getting tough with the Turks is thus a delicate diplomatic exercise. Every approach was considered by the House committee, and the international steps on its list of 20 recommendations were advocated with this uneasy situation in mind.

They include negotiations toward erasing all opium cultivation everywhere, outlawing importation here of all opium and morphine, U.S. government assistance to crop shifts in opium-producing countries, alterations in existing international conventions controlling drug traffic, and pushing bodies like the United Nations into a more active role.

ASSUMING THE SELECT committee is reconstituted by this Congress, a bill to ban imports into the United States will be introduced this spring. Its main impact would be on Turkey, of course, but it would not point the finger of guilt directly at the Turks.

It is not an immediate solution; it is not being suggested as the only attack on the problem. A strong bill against illegal sale and use of drug paraphernalia in the District of Columbia also is planned, intended as a model for all 50 states.

But the legislators, including the committee chairman, Rep. Claude Pepper, are convinced that attacking the evil at its roots is mandatory, no matter how drastic it may seem in international politics. It is not half so drastic as a dead boy with a syringe stuck in his arm.

THE PEOPLE'S SCHOOLS

IQ Test Scores Trap Public School Pupils

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

This is the story of Priscilla and Lloyd Jones, children of a well-to-do couple in well-to-do California suburban community.

The Jones children attend the public school in their neighborhood (which I shall call La Pereze School for convenience's sake.) Like many California schools, it has a gifted child program. In some schools this is called a more able learners program, or an achievement group program, or some other name. Its purpose is to provide something extra (what the educators call "enrichment") for those pupils who are brighter than most and who — at least in the belief of the educators — are likely to become bored in the ordinary classes.

The State of California provides special funds to underwrite gifted child programs. These funds are allocated on the basis of the number of pupils who qualify by making scores of 130 or higher on Stanford-Benet I.Q. tests,

AT LA PEREZA School, the gifted child program starts in the fourth grade. To qualify for state funds, the school gives a standard I.Q. test to all children in the third grade, then the Stanford-Benet (which is given each child individually) to those who appear likely to score 130 or above.

Lloyd Jones made a sufficiently high score on the test to be placed in the gifted child program the following year. He did not seem to enjoy it particularly, and his parent did not notice any significant improvement in his attitude toward school. However, he remained in the gifted child program in the fifth grade and again in the sixth grade — since the I.Q. test determined this placement and his I.Q. would not be tested again until his sixth year, when a blanket I.Q. test is required by the state.

WHEN LLOYD ENTERED sixth grade, Priscilla entered fourth. Priscilla is much more interested in school than is her brother. Also, she is one of those children who don't want to miss out on anything. So when she saw that some of the children were being given special things to do while the rest studied their language arts or numbers skills, she wanted to be part of the group. She mentioned it to her mother.

Mrs. Jones went to the school and talked with Priscilla's teacher about it. Since Priscilla was so interested, and since she seemed to be doing very well in school, Mrs. Jones wondered whether she might join the special group.

The teacher shook her head. It was impossible, she explained. The group Priscilla had observed was the gifted child group. To qualify for the gifted child program, a pupil must have scored 130 or higher on an I.Q. test in the third grade. The teacher produced her class roster and showed Mrs. Jones that Priscilla's score, written opposite her name, was 114. That was on the standard test given all the pupils; she had not even qualified for the Stanford-Benet.

SO PRISCILLA JONES must not participate in the special program which looks so interesting to her — although it has proved uninteresting to her brother Lloyd.

The I.Q. score that Priscilla made in third grade will follow her until she enters junior high. No matter how hard she works, no matter how well she does in her classwork, no matter how high her grades on her subject examinations, no matter how much interest and enthusiasm she brings to class, Priscilla can never be a gifted child. Her third grade I.Q. score says no.

It is just the opposite with her brother Lloyd. No matter if he cares little about the school, no matter if he is disinterested in the special program or even in his regular classwork, no matter if he makes not the slightest extra effort, Lloyd will always be a gifted child — at least until the seventh grade. His third grade I.Q. score says yes.

THESE SCORES are entered in the record. The record moves with the child from teacher to teacher. Each teacher looks in the book. There is Lloyd, the gifted child. There is Priscilla, the non-gifted child. Their fates are sealed.

La Pereza is an imaginary school. Lloyd and Priscilla Jones are imaginary children. But what happened to Lloyd and Priscilla happens to thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, of real California children in real California schools. The odds are that it happens to your children in the school they attend.

Trial Set On Theft Of $20,000

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A 61-year-old former bank employee who lives in Ross will face sentencing in U.S. District Court on March 22, after pleading guilty to a charge of stealing more than $20,000 from the accounts of a San Francisco woman millionaire.

Thomas Michael Murphy of 1 Camino Bueno had been scheduled to go on trial on two embezzlement counts, Monday. Instead, he pleaded guilty to one count and asked that the second count be dismissed.

Murphy, then an assistant cashier at a San Francisco branch of Wells Fargo Bank, was indicted by a federal grand jury last Dec. 9. One count charged him with taking more than $20,000 from the accounts of Norva Boas of San Francisco during 1967. The second count accused Murphy of taking another $6,465 from the savings accounts during 1969.

The federal attorney general's office said Murphy was a veteran of 42 years' service with the bank. He faces a maximum penalty of $5,000 fine and five years in prison, if the judge dismisses the second count.

New Insecticide Invented In Italy

MILAN, Italy (UPI)—An Italian scientist said today he has developed a new weapon against harmful insects—a chemical which stops their growth and prevents them from reproducing instead of killing them.

Prof. Giorgio Ferrari of the Simes Research Laboratory said the new product will cost one-fifth the price of norml insecticides and, unlike DDT, is harmless to humans.

Ferrari said the new product is based on two hormones—Crustecdisone and Makisterone A—which exist in small quantities in insects and governs their growth processes. Their use proper doses checks the growth of insects before they reach reproduction age, thus leading to their extinction, he said.

Concert Time In Afternoon

The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported in Monday's paper that the time for the Bach-to-Mozart Ensemble concert on March 7 in the Stinson Beach Community Center will be at 7:30 p.m.

The concert, like others scheduled for Sundays in March and April, will be at 3:30 p.m.

Lease Agreement Reached On Building

A long-sought agreement for leasing a building used as an art center and belonging to the Lagunitas School District has been approved by the district board.

The lease to the San Geronimo Valley Art Association for an old school building between the district's two schools on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard provides for a rent of $90 a month.

The building does not meet the state's Field Act earthquake resistance standards for schools and was leased last year to the association. Question was raised later over payment of utilities charges.

In granting the lease which includes an amount for utilities used by the association, the board also directed Supt. Joseph Amato to next find out how the district can also lease the center 1,300 square feet of adjoining playground.

According to Amato, once the land is leased to the association, it will in turn sub-lease the land and one art center room to the proposed Valley Family Pre-School Center.

The Lagunitas School District board also:

FOUNDATION — Discussed briefly and then continued to the next meeting, March 8, a proposal for a district foundation to maintain funds for special projects.

SEPTIC TANKS — Directed Amato to find out how the county's proposed septic tank ordinance will affect the district which has two.

CLOSED SESSION — Entered closed session to give instructions to its negotiator in clerical personnel negotiations.

STAFF UTILIZATION — Heard a report on a study in progress on teaching staff utilization for next year.

Burglars Hit Safes At Schools

Burglars hit safes at San Clemente and Neil Cummins schools in Corte Madera Monday night apparently successfully entering one previously damaged by burglars, police reported yesterday.

Officers said the two schools were entered sometime after closing yesterday and 7 a.m. today. They were uncertain whether the school burglaries were connected.

Both schools were entered by prying doors.

At Neil Cummins School, where the safe was damaged but not opened, no loss has been established.

At San Clemente School, camera equipment was taken and the school's previously damaged safe, pried open. What was taken from the safe, if anything, is not known.

Officers said the safe, damaged by burglars in November, had not been replaced but rather sealed in a wooden frame.

Invalid Search Ends Pot Case

No complaint has been filed in Marin Municipal Court against Michael Andrew Nail, 29, of Mill Valley, who was arrested last Tuesday on suspicion of possessing marijuana and destroying evidence.

The district attorney's office reported that a search that revealed suspected marijuana was invalid.

Nail was arrested after he went to the California Highway Patrol office in Corte Madera to clear up a vehicle inspection violation.

'500,000 Jews Would Exit Russ'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Leonid Rigerman, a Jew recently allowed to leave the Soviet Union after proving his U.S. citizenship, says 500,000 Russian Jews would leave the Soviet Union for Israel if given the chance.

He told a news conference Tuesday Jews are afraid to apply to leave the country because of the consequences. Rigerman's parents were U.S. citizens who moved to the Soviet Union after they were married in this country.

Tracy Wood, UPI reporter, interviews William T. Bagley, assemblyman from Marin County

What's going on in Sacramento?

It's a new legislature facing new problems and issues which will have a direct effect upon you and your family. Keeping informed is critical to your best interests.

How the I-J lifts the lid of the state Capitol to keep you informed of legislation

You have double representation in Sacramento. First, politically, through your assemblyman and senators. Second, through the large and competent news bureau of United Press International which reports for the I-J and hence for you. At least seven top political reporters sit through legislative sessions, question the legislators, examine the issues and keep you "on top" of legislation and coming events.

As George Skelton, UPI bureau manager, states, "Despite myth, most stories are not developed in dimly lit bars. The good ones, more often than not, are produced by sitting patiently through boring committee hearings or sifting through dull reports, reading small type. This is the unglamorous part of the job, but the one which often results in a big story in your evening newspaper." Comment: read the I-J and be well-represented. Our first job is to keep you informed.

STORY OF KIDNAPPING

Tired Hostages Home

By FRANK FARRARA

Novato's four kidnap victims, tired and emotionally shaken, arrived home yesterday from a harrowing experience to face a press conference, eager for details of their adventure.

Mrs. Joyce Stansfield, who had laryngitis, could only whisper, and Mrs. Harold Smith spoke only briefly before she burst into tears under the press of questions.

In contrast the Stansfield children sat quietly in the flood of television lights and a barrage of questions from newsmen cramped into the small council chambers.

Sgt. Lyn T. Stoutt announced at the outset that details of the crime couldn't be discussed because the case was still under investigation.

During the interview, this censorship covered the exact nature of threats made, where they obtained gasoline when the supply ran low and what motivated their abductor, James D. Harvey to escape from San Quentin.

Harvey, 24, was captured yesterday after a bullet-marked high speed chase in Fullerton. The convict drove into a shopping center parking lot, smashed into a parked car and fled on foot into a laundry. There, he was tackled by the owner.

Mrs. Stansfield reached Novato before 5 p.m., carrying her 4-month-old daughter, Susanne, and accompanied by their 6-year-old son, Robert.

Stansfield spoke for his wife after explaining that she had laryngitis as a result of the emotional experience and talking through the night to their kidnapper.

Stansfield said threats were made against the two women but he couldn't give the details, because of the information ban.

He said due to the efforts of his wife and Mrs. Smith the lives of all were saved. Mrs. Stansfield was driving the car with Harvey seated behind her, he explained.

Harvey learned about 4 a.m. by car radio that he had abducted the family of a police officer, and his reaction was surprise, Stansfield said. At that point he told the two women he was "pretty hot."

Asked if there were ever a time she thought Harvey, who was armed with a pair of scissors, would kill someone, Mrs. Stansfield nodded affirmatively.

During the long ride, they made two stops in an attempt to get gasoline for the car, once in Tulare County where Harvey tried to siphon gasoline and was chased away by the car owner.

Several police cars, apparently California Highway Patrol vehicles, passed them along the highway, but the women fearing for the safety of the children made no attempt to attract them.

Mrs. Stansfield, who was dropped off in Bakersfield, couldn't explain why Harvey let her and her two children go.

Asked what his son said when reunited with his father, Stansfield replied, "He asked my why I didn't get the bad guy."

About a half-hour later, Mrs. Smith arrived and said she felt there had been real danger "if anything was done out of hand."

During the ride "there was a lot of guessing" by everyone, "about who was going to do what" and the two women "tried to reach a certain degree of rapport" with Harvey, she said.

"A few times I was shaking from limb to limb," Mrs. Smith said.

Asked if Harvey had told them why he had escaped from prison, Mrs. Smith started to answer and then stopped apparently approaching a taboo topic.

When California Highway Patrol cars approached she hoped they wouldn't do anything, she said. "I thought it was bad enough that it didn't warrant any further stress.

She thhough: Harvey let Mrs. Stansfield and the children out because the Stansfield baby had a cough, but she couldn't explain why

Post For Sweeping Reforms

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post today recommended "major reforms" in welfare, MediCal and school financing coupled with a net $183 million increase in Gov. Ronald Reagan's $6.73 billion austerity budget proposal.

The Legislature's chief fiscal expert, in his annual report to lawmakers, also suggested that government provide free birth control services for welfare mothers.

—$116.2 million in salary increases for state employes and university and college faculty. Reagan had recommended none.

—Leaving $72 million in the teachers' retirement fund that the governor had proposed removing to balance his budget.

—$26.1 million in construction projects and purchase of new equipment at the state colleges. Reagan had provided little money for this.

—A $70 student fee increase at state colleges to bring in $15.6 million. Post said this corresponds "in principle" to a fee recently assessed University of California students.

—A "preliminary" proposal to reduce state welfare spending by $17.1 million, and Medi-Cal by $452,000.

—$30 million in new state aid for elementary and secondary schools.

In all, Post recommended $222.4 million in increases and $39.3 million in reductions in the spending program for fiscal 1971-72 that Reagan submitted to the Legislature three weeks ago.

Post's recommendations are strictly advisory, but over the long haul they are more often accepted by the Legislature than rejected.

Post, who has been analyzing governors' budgets for a quarter of a century, was somewhat critical of Reagan for submitting a spending program "lacking pertinent program information and basic statistical detail."

Because of this, the nonpartisan fiscal watchdog said, "we have been unable to provide the Legislature with a meaningful analysis of certain portions" of the budget — particularly in Medi-Cal, welfare and education.

Post said he found "many areas in which state cost reductions can be justified."

But he warned that "conversely, there are areas in which ... good public policy justifies increases or smaller reductions than those proposed in the (Reagan) budget."

He said these state augmentations were necessary to "avoid shifts in cost to local government, which thereby would have the effect of increasing property taxes."

Calley's Story Of Close-Range Shots

My Lai Incident Told In A Trembling Voice

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI) — His voice trembling, Lt. William L. Calley Jr. told today how he shot into a group of civilians at My Lai with the muzzle of his rifle only five feet from the victims.

Calley said he fired six to eight shots into a group of villagers in a ditch, holding his M16 with one hand. When he left them "they were apparently all dead—lying still."

The 27-year-old former platoon commander testified in a sometimes-faltering voice, but otherwise was composed and articulate.

He is accused of the premeditated murder of 102 South Vietnamese on March 16, 1968, the day he led his platoon on an infantry sweep through My Lai.

Calley said at one point a helicopter pilot landed and asked him if he could evacuate some people from the area. Calley said he replied "the only means that I have to get the people out was hand grenades—that I had no helicopters."

This was similar to the prosecution testimony of Hugh Thompson, a warrant officer helicopter pilot during the My Lai sweep. He said when he spoke to an officer on the ground that day about getting people out of a bunker, the officer said: "The only way to get them out is with a hand grenade."

Calley's testimony on this 32nd trial day came after an unexplained hour and a half delay in getting the trial started. During this period the judge, Col. Reid W. Kennedy, conferred separately with each of the six officer-jurors. Kennedy made no mention of the conferences or the delay when court convened.

Calley said that when he fired into the people in the ditch, he was standing about three feet from them, but he told the prosecutor, Capt. Aubrey, M. Daniel III, he could not say whether he hit them. He said he had no idea how many were in the ditch but it was not a large group.

At lunch that day, Calley said, he talked with the company commander, Capt. Ernest L. Medina, but did not tell him "the circumstances" of rounding up villagers and shooting them.

"No, sir, why should I?" he said to Daniel. "He knew what circumstances. He told me to shoot them, sir."

"When?" Daniel asked.

"The day before and that day," Calley replied.

Calley had testified previous-

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist troops staged a rocket attack tonight on Quang Tri, the major staging and supply base for the South Vietnamese strike into Laos. The U.S. Command also reported the loss of three more American helicopters in Laos and the deaths of 11 crewmen, heaviest one-day toll of the Laotian operation.

The South Vietnamese incursion into Laos to cut the Ho Chi Minh supply trails remained stalled 16 to 17 miles inside the border and front dispatches reported heavy rocket attacks had resumed on an isolated ARVN paratroop unit 15 miles inside Laos.

The U.S. Command so far has reported the loss of 29 helicopters with 40 Americans killed, 26 wounded and 15 missing since the incursion into Laos began Feb. 8. Correspondents in forward posts put the helicopter loss at 72 or more over Laos and South Vietnam. The South Vietnamese admit losing four more.

Officially, despite heavy losses, the South Vietnamese incursion has been described as a "success" since it disrupted Communist supply lines. Today, the U.S. Command said American air strikes had killed more than 500 North Vietnamese and destroyed 800 tons of ammunition plus vast quantities of other supplies.

UPI correspondent Joseph Galloway reported from Quang Tri, the big base near the northern coast of South Vietnam, that the Communists fired between 15 and 20 of their big 122 millimeter Soviet-made rockets shortly after 9 p.m. but apparently did little damage.

The rockets missed the ammunition dump at Quang Tri and a five-truck gasoline tanker convoy passing through the area. The convoys move along Highway 9 from Quang Tri into Laos, paralleling the DMZ. Many of the convoys have been ambushed in recent days.

Military sources said one air strike Feb. 14 destroyed 300 tons of munitions and it was the most destroyed in a single location in one day by any U.S. aircraft in the Indochina war.

Lt. Gen. Hoang Xuan Lam, commander of South Vietnamese troops in Laos described the destruction of four fuel pipelines running parallel to the Ho Chi Minh Trail system as the most important accomplishment of the Laotian operation to date.

Eight crewmen were killed Tuesday when two U.S. Army UH1 Huey helicopters collided in flight over the Laotian Lower Panhandle.

Board Kills Police Services Proposal After 4-Year Fight

By WAT TAKESHITA

The cities of Marin County last night lost their long and bitter struggle to force residents in unincorporated areas to pay a bigger share of the sheriff's patrol costs. (For reaction in San Anselmo see story, page 6.)

By a 4 to 1 vote, the board of supervisors killed proposed formation of a police services district in the county's unincorporated area. The district had been pushed by the cities for the past four years as a means of equalizing the police cost burdens. (Other supervisors stories, page 10.)

City representatives have contended they are paying twice for police services — once in city tax to finance their police departments and again in a county tax for the sheriff's patrols.

This is how a police services district would have operated: The cities would continue to help pay for the existing level of police services in unincorporated ares. But if any community wanted "extended service" beyond the present patrols — the cost of which is now shared by cities — it would have to create a zone and tax itself for the added patrol.

Yesterday, Supervisor Michael Wornum stoutly defended the cities' position and cast the lone vote to proceed with the services district. Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste also favored the concept but voted "no" because the proposal was not specific enough, especially in the definition of "existing level of police services."

Almost every homeowner group in the county's unincorporated region solidly opposed the proposed district.

Merritt A. Robinson of Sleepy Hollow, spokesman for the organization, argued that the cities with unincorporated areas should share lucrative sales tax revenue if cities want to shed some of the tax burden of sheriff's patrols. He said county residents make most of their purchases in cities but get nothing in return in the way of sales or cigarette taxes.

Frank Solomon Jr., a director of the Marinwood Community Services District, declared that formation of a police services district, and possibly smaller tax zones for beefed-up enforcement, would fragment rather than consolidate police services. "Instead of 12 police departments we will have 30 police departments," he said.

Furthermore, said Solomon, once the county service district was formed, the unincorporated areas would have no way of protecting themselves against increased taxes in the name of "added police services beyond the existing level of services."

The most telling blow against the cities came when the supervisors began quizzing Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos on how sheriff's patrols would operate under a new police services district.

Sonoma To Vote On ABAG Issue

SANTA ROSA — The Sonoma County Board of Supervisors yesterday called for an April 20 election to allow voters to decide if the county should withdraw from the Association of Bay Area Governments after forming a new alliance of northern counties.

The resolution setting the election was proposed by Supervisor Robert Theiller, a long-time advocate of withdrawal. He said he felt the association would eventually become a full scale regional government with taxing powers and one in which Sonoma County would have little voice.

Board Chairman Ignazio A. Vella, also association president, agreed to the vote, saying he has always felt he would support another regional association if it would better serve the county's needs and be eligible for federal and state fund grants.

Theiller had proposed the new group be known as the Redwood Empire Regional Association and include Sonoma, Marin, Napa, Solano, Mendocino, Lake, Humboldt and Del Norte counties. Vella asked Theiller to gather supervisors from all the counties for a March 15 meeting in the Sonoma supervisors chambers to discuss the proposal.

Theiller said he was advised by state Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, that any new regional association must first be approved by the state Legislature and that April 9 is the deadline for introducing legislation.

The supervisors said the final decision on ABAG membership would rest with the advice of the voters, the reaction from the other counties and the decision of the federal government on recognition of the new association for grant processing.

Actress Attacked

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)—Katharine Hepburn was attacked and bitten early today by a hammer-swinging woman who had been hiding in a closet in the home of Miss Hepburn's father, police said.

Miss Hepburn, who opened in the lead role in "Coco" at Hartford's Bushnell Auditorium Tuesday night, was treated for an injured finger at Hartford Hospital and released. Police arrested Louella G. West, 55, of Richmond, Va., whom they said was a "recently discharged employe" of Miss Hepburn.

Miss Hepburn, appearing for the first time in her hometown, told officials the woman came at her with a hammer but apparently did not strike her, then bit her when the actress' brother tried to interfere.

The woman was held on $10,000 bond charged with burglary with personal violence. She was to be arraigned later today.

Upset Victor

CHARLESTON, S.C. (UPI)—Mendel J. Davis, who became an aide to Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., three days after graduating from high school 10 years ago, upset three veteran politicians Tuesday to win the Democratic nomination to succeed the late congressman.

With 218 of 219 precincts reporting, Davis reported 26,873 votes to gain a majority over former Charleston Mayor J. Palmer Gaillard, former Charleston County Council Chairman J. Mitchell Graham and State Rep. Thomas Hartnett. Gaillard received 11,997 votes, Hartnett 5,247 and Graham 5,151.

Davis, 28, Rivers' godson, will meet Republican James B. Edwards and the United Citizens Party candidate Victoria Delee in an April 27 special election.

Clear Streets

REGGIO CALABRIA, Italy (UPI)—Police using armored cars and road graders cleared away the barricades for the second consecutive day today from the two rebel strongholds of this riot-scarred seaport.

No incidents were reported as authorities cleared away wreckage blocking the St. Peter and Calpinace Bridges leading to Sbarre on the south side of town, and the Liberty Bridge to the Santa Caterina neighborhood on the north. Both are separated from the main section of the city by nearly dry streambeds.

Police made a raid through Sbarre Tuesday backed by armored personnel carriers and wearing bullet-proof vests. Tuesday night the barricades went up again, as they have most nights after police raids.

Center Planned

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mayor John V. Lindsay has announced plans to build the nation's largest convention center and said it would be ready in time for the 1976 political conventions.

Meanwhile, Robert Tisch, head of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, said negotiations were continuing with both the Democratic and Republican parties to hold their 1972 conventions in Madison Square Garden.

Lindsay said Tuesday the new convention hall would cost $100 million and take five years to build. It will be built on pilings and extend over the Hudson River between 44th and 46th streets on Manhattan's west side.

A similar proposal died in the State Legislature last year because the proposed site for the convention hall had been between 10th and 11th avenues and would have required relocating a great number of people.

Nixon Firm

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon won't back away from his controversial proposal to reorganize the federal government just because it has run into some criticism, according to a top Agriculture Department official.

"Don't mistake the President's intentions on this," Don Paarlberg told the opening session of the Agriculture Department's annual Outlook Conference Tuesday.

"He and his team are in earnest," said Paarlberg, director of agricultural economics for the department, which would be abolished under Nixon's plan to telescope seven civilian government departments into four new big agencies grouped along "mission" lines.

Paarlberg conceded, indirectly, that Nixon would not find it easy to get congressional consent to his plan. The proposal will be "before the country for a considerable time," the official said.

Ecuador Seizes 20th Tuna Boat

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The San Diego tunaboat Nautilus today became the 20th tuna clipper seized by Ecuador since Jan. 11, August Felando, manager of the San Diego Tunaboat Association, said.

The Nautilus was boarded about 1:15 a.m. while skipper Tom Giacolone was in radio contact with the association, Felando said. The boat was expected to be taken to the Ecuadorian port of Salinas with an expected arrival time of 8 a.m. (PST), he said.

Giacolone said he was drifting about 80 miles offshore when a patrol boat put a spotlight on the Nautilus, Felando said.

Funnel-Like Clouds Spotted

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Tornado-carrying funnel-shaped clouds were spotted in several sections of San Diego County Tuesday, but no damage was reported.

A spokesman for the National Weather Service said the clouds were rare here but could be destructive.

Parts of the county received up to six inches of snow and some schools were closed. Other sections had considerable thunder and lightning as a storm passed through the area.

Conviction In Military Case Upheld

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Supreme Court refused today—at least for the time being—to make retroactive its 1969 ruling that military personnel who commit non-service crimes must be tried in civilian courts.

The court took the position in unanimously affirming the court martial conviction of Cpl. Isiah Relford of kidnapping and raping two women in 1961 on grounds both crimes occurred on the military reservation encompassed by Fort Dix, N.J., and adjacent McGuire Air Force Base.

charged with an offense committed within or at the geographical boundary of a military post and violative of the security of a person or of property there, that offense may be tried by a court martial," the court held in an opinion by Justice Harry A. Blackmun.

"The case today marks an area, perhaps not the limit, where the court-martial is appropriate and permissible," he said. "What likes between is for decision at another time."

Lawyers for Relford had urged the court to make retroactive its June 2, 1969, ruling in the case of James F. O'Callahan that upset his conviction for rape in Honolulu.

In the O'Callahan case, the court held that military personnel who commit crimes in a civilian community in peacetime must be tried in civilian courts.

It came nearly eight years after Relford's 1963 conviction. His lawyers urged the court to make the ruling retroactive. The government took the opposite view but asked that the issue be decided.

The court ducked the retroactivity issue on grounds that the circumstances of Relford's case differed in that the crimes he committed occurred on a military reservation while O'Callahan's did not.

"We recognize that the retroactivity question has important dimensions, both direct and collateral, and that the government strongly urges that the question be decided here and now," Blackmun said.

Rabbi Denied Entry To Session; Detained

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Rabbi Meir Kahane, militant head of the American Jewish Defense League, was refused entry to a conference on Soviet Jews today and later was detained for questioning by Belgian security police.

Kahane arrived in Brussels today from New York where he was convicted Tuesday of disorderly conduct. He tried to enter the conference at the Palais des Congres to present a 10-point program he said would help the 3.5 million Jews in the Soviet Union.

Dozens of delegates at the conference jumped to their feet and began shouting when news of Kahane's detention reached the hall. The hall quieted down only after most of the 750 delegates left a short time later.

Police confirmed they picked up Kahane "for verification of the reason for his stay in Belgium." They also took the passport of at least one of his supporters. Kahane was picked up as he walked away from the Palais after being barred from entering.

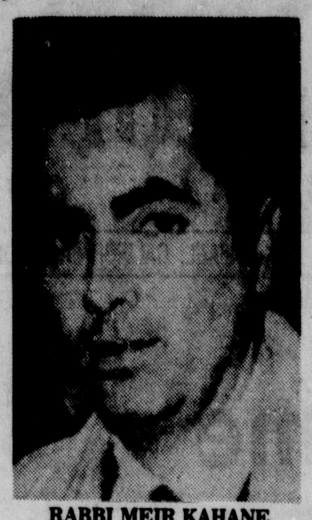
At 2.30 p.m. (8:30 a.m. EST), after Kahane had been detained for nearly three hours, a police spokesman said "he was picked up because his presence was not appreciated by the organizers of the conference."

"What happens to him will depend on his own statements as regards his future intentions," the spokesman said.

Police sources said Police at Brussels International Airport had been told to detain Kahane if he flew into the country. They said Kahane had definitely not entered Belgium through the airport.

The sources also said police had told the presidium of the Conference on Soviet Jewry they would free Kahane if the presidium would accept him as an official delegate.

Morris Braufman, chairman of the National League for the Repatriation of Jews from the Soviet Union, said Kahane had turned down an offer by some 300 young delegates accredited to the conference to either storm the conference hall or smuggle him in.



RABBI MEIR KAHANE
Militant Jewish Leader

An American, who was not immediately identified, and a Russian-born Israeli identified as Dov Sperling were detained by police along with Kahane, police spokesmen said.

Sperling, described as a former inmate of a Soviet prison camp for Zionist activists, had distributed a printed statement to delegates before he was picked up.

After Kahane's detention, the presidium of the conference convened an emergency meeting.

Menahem Beigin, former Israeli vice premier and leader of the Gahal, Israel's second largest political party, said he would intervene with the presidium on Kahane's behalf. He said he would ask the presidium to seek Kahane's release and allow him to address the conference.

Israel To Stand Firm Over Land

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israel said today it will formally refuse total withdrawal from Arab territories when it replies to Egyptian peace proposals.

A statement issued by Prime Minister Golda Meir's office said reports the reply would not reject complete withdrawal were "groundless."

In Amman, Foreign Minister Abdullah Salah said Jordan will consider recognizing Israel if there is a total withdrawal from Arab lands.

Salah told the semiofficial Amman newspaper Al-Difa it was "premature" to discuss the possibility of establishing demilitarized zones after an Israeli withdrawal.

But he added "Jordan will look into the question of recognizing Israel if she withdraws from all occupied Arab territories."

The Israeli cabinet announced Sunday that Israel would not withdraw to the boundaries it had prior to the 1967 Middle East war, but political sources in Jerusalem had said there would be no specific reference to this in the formal reply to be submitted to the U.N. peace envoy Gunnar V. Jarring.

The prime minister's office said today "The draft of Israel's reply to the Egyptian proposals which were submitted through Dr. Jarring contains the governments decision as reported in its official communique, i.e., that Israel will not return to the armistice lines of June 4, 1967."

Racism Accusations Without Foundation

Investigation by the Independent-Journal of anonymous accusations against a Redwood High School athletic coach indicate that the charges were wholly without foundation.

Members of coach Richard H. Hart's basketball team as well as Tamalpais High players contacted by the I-J, unanimously replied that charges of racism against the coach were unfounded.

Officials of Redwood High School and Tamalpais Union High School District likewise flatly rejected the charges and expressed confidence in Coach Hart.

Nor did the I-J intend to indicate that there was any truth in the charges when they were reported in connection with a bomb threat against a basketball game between the Redwood and Tamalpais varsity teams February 2.

The I-J regrets any embarrassment which Coach Hart may have suffered as the result of the reporting of the anonymous accusations.

More Flood Threats To Stricken Nebraska Area

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Northeast Nebraska —declared a major disaster by President Nixon — was threatened by more severe flooding today as spring-like weather began to melt up to two feet of snow dumped by Monday's blizzard.

An intense winter storm that has plagued the East pushed into the North Atlantic today, but left in its wake gusty winds and heavy snow over northern New England. Travelers warnings were posted in Maine, northeast New York, Vermont and New Hampshire.

Residents of the Missippi Delta continued cleanup operations today in the tornado-stricken area. The latest death toll issued Tuesday by civil defense at Jackson said at least 86 persons were dead and 500 injured. Searchers continued to find bodies in creeks and under debris.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said Tuesday it would assist the Office of Emergency Preparedness in a recovery program for 15 northeast Nebraska counties declared a disaster area.

The corps sent boats and earth-moving units into the area Tuesday to begin cleanup operations on rescue work. At least seven highways were closed because of washed out bridges. Officials estimated 305 square miles was flooded and damages would exceed $2.35 million.

Rescue workers provided food for 500 residents of King Lake who did not flee from floods.

The Oklahoma National Guard scheduled an airlift early today with 40 tons of hay for cattle stranded in northwest Oklahoma by deep snowdrifts. State officials were awaiting word from President Nixon on a request to declare 16 counties a disaster area.

Calley's Story Of Close-Range Shots

ly that Medina had ordered him on five occasions to "waste" everybody in the My Lai region because they were all enemy.

Calley said that he recognized two of his men at the time he fired into the ditch, but that he did not know whether they fired also. Tuesday he had testified that four or five of his platoon members fired in the ditch.

He said his main concern was in getting the villagers out of the way so he could get his men across the ditch fast and into a defensive position.

Calley also admitted he had struck a male villager on the mouth "quite hard" with the butt of his rifle. He said someone had brought the man up to him for interrogation.

Calley said the man was dressed in white, had short black hair and was about 23 years old.

He said he asked whether the man was a Viet Cong and where the Viet Cong were and that the man replied that he did not understand. This, he said, was in the vicinity of the ditch after he had fired into it. Calley said he asked him the question twice.

"I butt-stroked him in the mouth, sir," he told Daniel.

"How tall was he?" Daniel asked.

"My height, sir—maybe a little taller."

"How hard did you hit him?"

"Quite hard, sir . . . it bloodied his face."

"Did he go down to the ground?"

"Yes, sir."

Calley said he saw the helicopter coming in "and I started walking away from him — he was on the ground, and by the time I had gone two steps he was in the ditch."

"How did he get in?"

"Somebody drop-kicked him in."

"Didn't you fear the people in the ditch were booby-trapped, had grenades on?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you search them?"

"No, sir."

"Did you get that close to a potential mine?"

"If I thought it was a potential mine, I wouldn't get that close at all."

He said there were some of his soldiers who had searched them.

"Did your platoon meet any resistance in the village?" Daniel asked.

"I don't know, sir," Calley replied.

"Did you inquire?"

"No, sir."

"Had you ever been shot at before?"

"Yes, sir."

"Were you shot at that day?"

"I don't know, sir."

Calley testified that the first time the helicopter landed the pilot said there were "a lot of wounded people in the area and wondered if I could get any assistance to them. I told him I would report to higher headquarters."

Asked if the pilot appeared upset, Calley said he did not, but then added: "He wasn't violent or hysterical or anything. He told me what he wanted."

Calley said he radioed Medina that the pilot "didn't like the way things are being done down here and requested medical evacuation for the wounded."

Calley said that Medina after hearing of the pilot's request said "he knew about that and to get on up where I was supposed to be."

He said that when the helicopter landed a second time he told the pilot: "There was no way I could evacuate them except march them with me—if he could get a helicopter in there, I'd be glad to help."

Daniel then asked him if he had not made the remark about a grenade and he replied: "No, sir, I did not."

A moment later, Calley said: "Let me retract that statement—there would be no way for me to get them out. I believe I told him the only means I had to get people out was hand grenades, I had no helicopters."

Calley say he noticed during two trips by evacuation helicopters that there were children among the evacuees.

"You were discriminating at this point?" Daniel asked.

Calley had testified Tuesday that he did not discriminate as to sex or age among the villagers, merely considering them as enemy in his "psyched up" state.

Calley replied to Daniel that he could discriminate at that point because a no-firing order had been given.

At lunch, he said, Capt. Medina asked him for a body count and "I told him I had no idea and for him to come up with an estimate." He said he presumed Medina would "put in any body count that was reasonable — the highest he could."

Later, Calley said, he told Medina to make it 50 bodies for his unit, one of two platoons that made the search-and-destroy sweep. Calley said Medina "probably came up with between 250 and 300" as a total body count.

Calley, unlike other witnesses who were veterans of the My Lai sweep, had no estimate of the width or depth of the drainage ditch in which the people were shot. The government contends at least 70 people, screaming in fright and pain and with mothers falling on their babies to protect them, were murdered in the ditch.

PATROL

asked this hypothetical question: If Marinwood decided it wanted three extra sheriff's deputies to patrol that area and paid for that added service, could the sheriff order those three men to other areas of the county?

If the need arose elsewhere, Sheriff Mountanos said it would be his duty to pull the three men from Marinwood and any other deputies available and send them to the trouble spot.

That statement stunned the supervisors. They had been assuring unincorporated areas that if they paid for extra patrolmen, those patrolmen would be available to them at all times.

"That puts me in the position of having to tell Marinwood or Santa Venetia that you pay for the extra men but you may not always have them when you need them" said McInnis.

McInnis and two of his colleagues, Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. and Louis H. Baar, all conceded the proposed district probably was doomed even if the supervisors voted for it because the unincorporated areas could block it by referendum.

Bay Waste Monitoring Letter Hit

The president of the Sausalito-Marin City Sanitary District board reacted angrily today to a letter from the Regional Water Quality Control Board ordering the district to begin immediately self-monitoring of the treated wastes it dumps into the bay.

Cyril G. Hansen said the district has asked to defer action on the requirement until the next fiscal year because funds for the monitoring project have not been budgeted for the current year.

The water control board turned down the district's request in a letter received today. Hansen said he is consulting with the district's legal counsel to see if the water board has the right to demand immediate action.

Hansen said a monitoring program, to determine if any pollution is resulting from district operation, would cost nearly $17,000 a year.

He said $2,400 would be needed for laboratory work, $2,000 for a sampling machine, $3,500 for a boat and $9,000 for hiring a man to do sampling and testing.

To get the program operating under the sanitary district's current budget, Hansen said the money will have to be taken from funds earmarked for plant improvement. The district cannot spare that money and still meets its own needs, he said.

Only Two Names To Confuse Now

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — The road from Petaluma to Bodega Bay — changing names five times en route — was reduced to a two-name thoroughfare yesterday by the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors.

The road from Petaluma to Two Rock will be known as Bodega Avenue and the section from Two Rock to the Shoreline Highway at Bodega Bay will be called Valley Ford Road. The board asked the county road department and state Division of Highways to place new markers as soon as possible to end confusion.

Harvey let her out in Anaheim.

Asked if she felt hostility toward Harvey, she said: "I'm so tired I feel nothing. I feel sympathy."

Then someone asked "why" and she bowed her head and started to cry and was escorted from the room by her husband who had been sitting by her side holding her hand.

The Stansfields, flown back from Bakersfield in a rented six-passenger plane, landed at Petaluma airport shortly after 4 p.m., and Mrs. Smith arrived later at San Francisco International Airport where she was met by her husband.

Reduction On Billboard Plea Denied

A variance application to reduce the size of Larkspur's last billboard — an alternative to its removal — was denied last night by the city's planning commission.

John W. Appleton, city planning director, said today the controversial sign, located east of Highway 101 near the Greenbrae interchange, was denied because the commission felt inadequate justification was given for its continuance.

The sign, owned by developer Niels J. Schultz Jr., was judged as illegal and ordered removed by the city council last December.

It was erected prior to 1962 when a sign ordinance ruled billboards nonconforming and set a time period for their removal. Schultz's sign became illegal in 1969.

Schultz last night again voiced his argument that a billboard is needed at the Greenbrae interchange for direction to Greenbrae and Bon Air. Neither area is listed on state highway signs.

He proposed reducing the existing sign's size by two-thirds thus leaving a billboard 203 square feet in size. He also proposed the new sign be similar in color to state signs.

Commissioner Leonard S. Rubin, who was the lone supported of Schultz's proposal early in the discussion moved its acceptance with minor modifications. The motion died for lack of a second.

The Sprouts In Planter Boxes Gone

Eager tourists and street people who scanned city planter boxes along Bridgeway in Sausalito today looked in vain for the tiny plants which have caused such excitement in recent days.

Sausalito police plucked the sprouts yesterday and said the plants were on their way to the Federal Narcotics Bureau laboratory in San Francisco for analysis to determine whether they are indeed marijuana.

Police said the question, which has been on practically everyone's lips, should be answered "within a week."

Sausalito Police Chief James D. Wright, viewed the seedlings Friday and said they were not the illicit drug. But yesterday the chief said the plants he was shown last week were "immature" and did not have the serrated center leaves that characterize young marijuana.

Car Accident Victim Released

Harold J. Thayer, 22, of 570 San Marin Oaks Drive, Novato, was released from Hamilton Air Force Base Hospital yesterday, after treatment for being thrown from his auto Sunday morning.

Thayer's car rolled over twice on Highway 101 north of the Novato Creek bridge, plunging through the chain link divider fence. Thayer suffered numerous cuts of the head, face, hands and arms when he was ejected. He was not wearing a seat belt, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Officers reported Thayer's car hit the fence when he swerved to avoid another car moving into his lane.

Ross School Budget Less Than 1970

The Ross School District board has been presented a rough draft of the fiscal 1971-72 budget, showing a $2,745 reduction from this year's.

However, according to Supt. Thomas A. Anderson, the proposal does not include salary increases or certain maintenance projects.

He said inclusion of those items into the $523,896 budget will come after the board considers capital outlay and maintenance priorities and gets an indication on teacher salary requests from its negotiator next month.

This year's budget totals $526,641 with a tax rate of $3.28 per $100 assessed valuation.

A second draft of the budget will be presented the board in April, Anderson said.

The board also tabled discussions on boundary adjustments with the San Rafael Elementary School District after it was learned that such changes would require changes in the San Rafael city limits.

In other action, the board increased the mileage compensation paid district employees from 10 cents and 12 cents per mile and adopted a resolution thanking individuals who aided the Ross School basketball team during practice sessions.

Savio Is Out Of Berkeley's Race For Mayor

In a letter to the University of California newspaper on Tuesday, the 1964 Free Speech Movement leader declared he would devote his efforts to a proposal that Berkeley have three independent police departments.

Before voters at the next municipal election is a proposal that the city have departments for its Negro, white and campus areas.

Both Savio and his wife filed nomination papers for mayor, he said, to encourage another candidate to announce his advocacy of the plan. Instead the candidate, Warren Widener, decided to oppose the police project, Savio declared.

Sentencing Is Scheduled On Importing Bargeload of Pot

I-J Special Report

LOS ANGELES — Sentencing for three men involved in trying to import a bargeload of marijuana into this country has been set for April 19 in U.S. District Court.

The three, who were arrested earlier in Marin County in connection with the confiscation of 1,000 pounds of grass, are Douglas Edward Rambo, 29, of Fairfax; Herbert Bryan Berez, 32, of Los Angeles and Davis Bruce Tate, 23, of Tigard, Ore.

Federal prosecuter Arnold Rigarde said that Rambo and Tate were convicted last week by Judge Jesse W. Curtis Jr. after he denied motions that the case be dismissed and that the evidence be suppressed.

Their attorneys stipulated that the judge could decide the case on the evidence he had heard during the hearings on the motions. It was a foregone conclusion they would be convicted, Rigarde said.

They were charged with conspiracy to smuggle in the marijuana plus receiving and concealing pot.

Tate pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of smuggling pot without paying the transfer tax on it.

Rigarde said that Berez and Rambo face five to 20 years in federal prison plus $20,000 fines. He expected that Tate, who was involved to a lesser extent in the plot, will receive a lighter sentence.

Nine other persons arrested with the three have also all pleaded guilty or been convicted, Rigarde said, while two additional people were granted immunity in exchange for testifying for the prosecution.

In Marin County, Rambo still faces trial in superior court on charges of possessing marijuana for sale and furnishing it. Marin charges against Tate and Berez were dismissed last August after a long preliminary hearing in municipal court.

Rambo also is still charged with attempting to bribe narcotics agents stemming from a subsequent arrest.

Rambo, Tate and Berez were first arrested in May in Fairfax and later the same month in Long Beach, where customs agents seized three tons of marijuana valued at $1 million as it was being transferred from a salvage vessel to barges and vehicles.

Master Plan Out For Sorich Park

By LARRY MOWELL

The San Anselmo City Council last night scotched a master plan for Sorich Ranch Park as too grandiose and too expensive to implement, then authorized $780 for more modest development.

The council approved the sum to install a water fountain, complete two picnic areas and pay for trail materials after earlier condemning a master plan prepared by San Rafael architect William L. Kapranos.

Kapranos's proposal for the 62-acre hillside park included a football field, tennis and handball courts, a swimming pool and a recreation building plus trails and picnic facilities.

"This is to me typical of the type of master planning the city orders that ends up on the shelf," Mayor James F. Reed said.

He said the city cannot afford such development and added the proposal had been drawn without citizen participation. "I'm inclined to believe that plan is a long, long way, if ever, from being adopted," he said.

Councilman Lewis W. Stewart branded it "highly overdone." And Councilman Woodrow V. Caputro said it could not be half-developed under the master plan in 25 years, and called for a bond issue to put the park in shape. No action was taken on his suggestion.

While the plan did not meet the council's image of essentially open space, City Administrator Alfred C. Kaeppel said such a scheme had been suggested by the council to Kapranos four years ago.

Kapranos, who was not present, said in a letter to Kaeppel that the long delay in preparing the master plan was caused by his efforts to win a regional park to include the Sorich Ranch. The ranch abuts both county and San Rafael land as yet undeveloped.

Stewart backed the regional park concept to prevent "up hill and down dale housing development."

Reed agreed with the concept of a regional park, but said it is many years in the future if it can be arranged at all.

The more immediate task of putting in water and picnic facilities was approved after Thomas Peacock, a member of the city parks and recreation commission, said the limited development is necessary to encourage organized use of the park at the end of San Francisco Boulevard.

No Police Contract For Sleepy Hollow

Smarting from the defeat of a proposed police services district only two hours beforehand, the San Anselmo City Council made it clear last night that Sleepy Hollow will not get a police contract with the city. (See story, page 1)

Further, the council said, it planned at its March 9 meeting to discuss eliminating a courtesy known as "first call" police service to Sleepy Hollow. Under this procedure, San Anselmo police officers are the first to answer emergency calls from the community if a regular sheriff's unit isn't available.

Mayor James F. Reed and Councilmen Warren R. Perry and Kenneth L. Anderson said they would oppose providing full-scale police protection for a community services district proposed for Sleepy Hollow, if it were formally sought.

Councilman Woodrow V. Caputro said he would approve such protection if payment to San Anselmo were sufficient. Lewis W. Stewart took no stand.

The council position was in response to a request of J. G. Ingels of 40 Stuyvesant Drive, a candidate for the governing board of the proposed community services district. Residents of Sleepy Hollow will vote on the proposal April 20.

Ingels said he hoped to arm himself with the council's opposition and a cost estimate for providing police protection from San Anselmo.

Police Chief Raymond Buchignani predicted that to provide full police protection for Sleepy Hollow, five men would be required at a cost of $100,000.

Under the proposed police services district — backed by San Anselmo and other cities but defeated by the board of supervisors earlier yesterday — unincorporated areas, such as Sleepy Hollow, would be entitled to beefed up sheriff's patrols only if they paid for it themselves through a special taxing district.

Cities have long complained they are burdened both with paying for their own police departments and with part of the cost of sheriff's patrols in unincorporate areas.

The San Anselmo City Council also:

CITY TAKEOVER — Approved a request by the Ross Valley chapter of DeMolay to take over the operation of the city government from 1 to 4:30 p.m. March 16.

POLICE CARS — Approved ordering two new Dodge police cars for fiscal 1971-72 for $6,157. Chief Buchignani had requested three.

LICENSE — Granted an exemption from the business license tax to the Marin Senior Coordinating Council, operator of the San Anselmo Greyhound bus depot.

CANDY PEDDLER — Put over to March 9 a request by Youth Incentive of San Francisco for exemption from the business license fee. The organization claims to be non-profit, deriving most of its revenue from door-to-door sale of packaged candy and nuts.

CLAIM — Denied a claim of $50,000 by Ethel G. Grandi of 119 Oak Springs Drive for injuries allegedly suffered in a collision of a vehicle in which she was a passenger with a city dump truck Jan. 26.

SIGNAL — Approved a contract of $7,200 with Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co. of San Francisco for design work on traffic signal improvements between Red Hill Shopping Center and Sutfield Avenue.

JOINT POWERS — Approved a joint powers agreement with Fairfax for construction and maintenance of portions of Sir Francis Drake Boulevard abutting Fairfax, although Fairfax refused to provide for future maintenance.

ELECTION — Denied, 4-1, Anderson dissenting, a request from the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce for backing of a proposal that would allow city officials to set their own standards for filing nominations for office.

Petaluma Voters Reject Tax Hike

On increasing the high school district tax rate from $1.55 to $2.50 per $100 assessed valuation, unofficial vote tallies showed 4,984 votes against to 2,324 votes in favor.

A proposed boost in the elementary district from $1.83 to $2.50 per $100 assessed valuation was rejected 2,721 to 1,349.

A total of 7,276 votes were cast for a turnout of 44.7 per cent of the 16,278 registered voters.

Petaluma schools Supt. Lesly H. Meyer predicted there would be no plans to seek another election in the near future.

Business Mgr. George W. Castleberry said the elementary district would be hardest hit by the denial because reserve funds are lower in that district. He said non-academic programs face curtailment in the 1971-72 budget as a result of the votes.

Cotati's Teachers Ask Tax Increase

Cotati School District teachers last night urged the district board to consider a tax rate increase election to improve teacher salaries and to lift the threat of staff reduction.

In three separate letters to the board, the Association of Cotati District Teachers urged that plans to reduce the teaching staff by lottery be dropped.

Although the board said it would consider a tax election, it added that dwindling enrollment with an accompanying loss in income appeared to make staff reduction necessary. Schools Supt. Duncan A. Coleman was asked to report back at the March 9 meeting.

Board president Maurice Fredericks said if more than four teaching positions need to be terminated, state law requires that a lottery be held.

Robert Pilkum, a teacher at Waldo Rohnert School, reminded the board that a lottery was held last year and that many of the same teachers would be subjected to a lottery again. "The district may get a bad reputation," he warned.

The teachers also reminded the board that they received no salary increase last year, but only additional fringe benefits in medical and dental plans. Reporting that they are the lowest paid teachers in Sonoma County, their letter also requested that no consideration be given to a freeze or reduction of current salaries.

Fredericks said the salary measures had not been formally considered, but only been mentioned by administrators as a possible way of reducing expenses.

The citizens advisory committee of the district also recommended a tax increase election.

The Cotati School District Board Also:

SALE — Approved signing of final papers for the sale of the east wing of Cotati School to the city for use as a new city hall.

SKATING — Approved ice skating instruction at the Redwood Empire Skating Arena in Santa Rosa for students in grades four through six as part of the physical education program.

APPOINTMENT — Named John Knowles of Rohnert Park to the citizens advisory committee.

COLLEGE — Approved a resolution asking the state college board of trustees to assign a higher priority to construction of a new science building at Sonoma State College.

Co-Ed Dorm Under Study

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)—The University of Wisconsin is considering opening a coed dormitory with men and women living in alternate rooms.

The impetus for the plan comes not from student activists or unrest but from financial problems with the school's one-sex dorms.

Apparently the students do not want to live exclusively with the members of their own sex. One dorm, as a result, has 900 vacancies and another has been shut down completely.

Hospital Expansion Due Public Hearing

Analysis of a Marin Hospital District study favoring expansion of existing hospital facilities over new hospital construction was deferred last night by the district board. It said more time was needed for review.

The delay followed agreement that such analysis should be conducted with Marin General Hospital's long-range planning committee, hospital staff and interested community members.

A special meeting to delve into the report was set for March 16 at 7 p.m. at the hospital.

The demographic study, compiled by Lester Gorsline Associates of Tiburon, suggests new medical concepts which should be considered in hospital planning based on population trends.

"The board felt it necessary to have the demographic study . . . to determine if the basic assumptions of the (district) master plan are still valid," explained Dr. Gwendolyn M. Campion, board president.

In question is whether proposed hospital expansion should place greater emphasis on ambulatory services or inpatient facilities.

The Gorsline report says that medical trends call for greater emphasis on ambulatory-outpatient service, whereas the hospital's 1966 master plan emphasizes in-patient services.

As reported in yesterday's Independent-Journal, the report proposes expansion of services within the existing facility, rather than construction of smaller satellite hospitals.

In asking for a special meeting to discuss the report fully, Director George E. Croke expressed concern over the lack of information on future planning at other Marin hospitals.

He said he was particularly concerned over reports that the corporation owning Ross General Hospital may merge into Hospital Corp. of America of Nashville, Tenn.

He suggested the district await additional information on Ross General's plan before beginning hospital expansion planning.

However, Director Marion C. Ibach believed the district had to begin thinking of expansion plans since the extent to which the hospital's master plan must be modified or changed is not known.

County Drug Program To Assist Open House Staff

The Marin Hospital District board, following the lead of county board of supervisors, last night approved integration of the Marin Community Mental Health Center's drug abuse program with that of the Marin Open House.

The action, approved yesterday by the supervisors, was proposed by the Mental Health Advisory Board to eliminate overlapping.

Dr. John S. Guerrant, director of the mental health center and chief of county mental health planning, told the board the integration will merge the psychotherapy knowledge of the center with the open house staff's understanding of the drug culture.

Since the mental health center is owned by the hospital district but operates under the county's mental health program, both the county and hospital district must approve its programs.

The consolidation of services, with exception of emergency care and some methadone treatment at the center, will involve some personnel shifts to open house.

A psychiatrist will work at Open House one-quarter time, a social worker one-half time and a mental health worker three-quarters time. However, they will remain under control of the mental health center.

Primary responsibility for program development will remain with Open House officials.

The Marin Hospital District Board Also:

LINEAR — Approved plans and specification for remodeling a room for the linear accelerator which the board was told probably would be operating in July.

PHYSICIAN FEES — Extended for six months a $10 per hour fee for emergency room physicians while negotiations continue over a fee schedule. The $10 fee was established in December when doctors criticized the $5 fee they were receiving.

INSURANCE — Approved spending $1,000 for liability insurance for malfeasance suits against the board or its members.

GIFT — Accepted a gift of 300 shares of Famous Artists School stock from the Ludeken Foundation of San Francisco for the linear accelerator.

Foran Asks Toll Funds For Public Transit Use

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation to use tolls from Bay Area bridges for public transit purposes was introduced yesterday by Assemblyman John F. Foran, D-San Francisco.

The Golden Gate Bridge District would not be affected by the measure, but all nine counties in the area, including Marin, could share the toll fund.

The fund would be supplied by toll revenues in excess of that needed for maintenance and operation costs of bridge facilities. The state Toll Bridge Authority and the new Metropolitan Transportation Commission would be empowered to spend from the fund.

The assemblyman said the toll fund would allow the Bay Area to raise money needed to qualify for matching federal transportation funds. He noted that local transit systems may obtain $2 in federal funds for each $1 put up in local funds.

New Ordinance On Agenda

The Marin Municipal Water District will reconsider a proposed cross-connection ordinance at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow at the district office in Corte Madera.

The board Feb. 10 had asked the staff to prepare a report on means consumers might use to finance the cost of backflow devices. The devices cost up to $4,150 each.

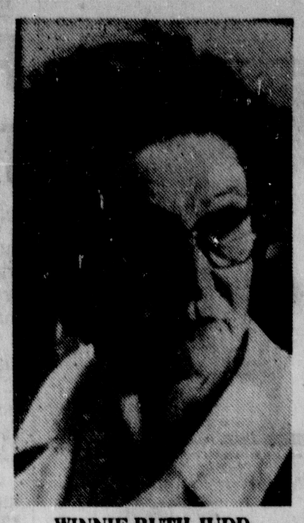
Also to be considered is hiring a soils engineer for tests on the first stage of the Marin Aqueduct's second section.

Easter Hunt Help Sought

The Rohnert Park Recreation Commission has agreed to seek assistance from the community in sponsoring the annual Easter Egg hunt.

Commission chairman Ronald E. Rasmussen said the commission would try to meet with representatives of civic groups next week to seek cosponsors.

With an eye to reducing the cost of the program, Rasmussen said the commission decided Monday night to donate eggs for the hunt, but hoped other groups would supply candy and entertainment.



WINNIE RUTH JUDD
Step nearer freedom

Parole For Mrs. Judd Is Proposed

The board asked Gov. John R. Williams to commute the 66-year-old "tiger woman's" sentence to time already served.

Mrs. Judd was sentenced to death in 1932 for slaying two girl friends, Hedwig Samuelson and Agnes Anne Leroi. The body of one girl was dismembered and both were shipped to Los Angeles. Blood seeping from a trunk led to the bodies' discovery.

The death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment in 1962 after she had spent years in Arizona State Hospital. She escaped from the hospital for the seventh and final time that same year, dropping from sight until 1969 when a routine fingerprint check led to her arrest in a San Francisco suburb.

The grandmotherly Mrs. Judd made her latest plea for freedom before the Pardons and Parole Baord last week. The panel recommended commutation on a split vote Tuesday.

Board members indicated that if the governor commutes her sentence, they will impose strict conditions against the sale of any articles about the murder case.

Fighting Spirit Shown By Injured Cadet

A news conference was held Tuesday for the cadet, who was injured Feb. 13 on the Golden Gate Bridge.

Present were his wife, Martine, and their two-months-old daughter, Sabine. The cadet, who came here aboard the French training ship Jeanne d'Arc, had not seen the child before she was flown here Monday.

Commander Ira J. Woodstein, chief of orthopedic services at the Oakland Naval Hospital, said chances were excellent that the 28-year-old cadet would be able to work with an artificial leg.

Citizens Panel Plans Flood Board Meeting

The Novato Citizen's Creek Committee will meet with the advisory board of the Novato Flood Control Zone tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the library of Lu Sutton School, 1800 Center Road.

The meeting was requested by the committee to keep citizens informed on the status of the Army Corps of Engineers' study of Novato Creek flood control.

Headlight Plan To Cut Road Accidents

I-J Special Report

VALLEJO — Motorists on the Sears Point-Vallejo Road — a winding, accident-prone route used by many Marinites — soon will be required to use their headlights during daylight.

Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, announced the new safety program yesterday in a city hall press conference. It will be effective within 90 days.

A similar program has proved successful on another route in the state, but the Division of Highways had failed to act on repeated requests by the California Highway Patrol to try the system on he Sears Point Road.

Behr said 127 accidents occurred on the two-land road in 1969, killing four persons and injuring 99 others. Last year, 11 died in accidents on the highway.

The senator stressed that the headlight program, designed to make cars more visible when passing, was only a temporary answer to the need to widen the road to four lanes. Such expansion has been scheduled for 1979, but Behr said he would seek to move up the project.

A test of the headlight program on a stretch of Interstate 5 two years ago was credited with cutting fatalities from 27 in a 30-month period to two in 18 months.

75 Strep Cases Are Reported Last Week

Seventy-five cases of streptococcus infections topped the list of communicable diseases recorded in Marin last week, according to Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer.

There also were 32 cases of rubella and eight of infectious hepatitis.

New Attack On Pollution

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation empowering the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District to impose fees for registration of all stationary sources of air contaminants — such as refinery smokestacks —has been introduced by Assemblyman John T. Knox, D-Richmond.

The measure also would make permanent the district's maximum property tax rate of two cents per $100 assessed valuation. Knox last year won passage of a bill hiking the maximum from 1.3 cents to two cents, but for only two fiscal years.

The bill was requested by the district's board of directors. The district now includes six counties, including Marin, but in July will annex Sonoma, Napa and Solano counties.

Foster Care Home Plea By Bagley

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, today appealed to Atty. Gen. Evelle J. Younger to break a backlog of fingerprint checks that has halted licensing of new foster care homes in California.

Gov. Reagan's freeze on hiring new employees or replacing those who leave state jobs was cited by Bagley as causing the backlog in the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation.

State law requires that prospective operators of foster care homes first have their fingerprints checked by the bureau, but the hiring freeze has forced the bureau to stop processing such checks.

Bagley, in his letter to Younger, urged the attorney general to exercise power enabled under Reagan's economy moves to thaw the freeze on hiring.

Bagley said that the current halt on all new licenses meant that foster children "must be either left in an unacceptable environment or supported 100 per cent by the county in its juvenile hall or other comparable institution." He noted that the cost of such care was far higher than that in a foster care home.

Two Injured In Petaluma Accident

Two San Rafael residents were injured Sunday at 12:37 a.m. in an accident at Highway 101 and East Washington Street, Petaluma, it was reported yesterday.

Larry Smith, 37, of 1135 Fourth Street, was treated at Hillcrest Hospital for an injury to his right hip and ankle, and Glenda Romanowsky, 22, of 39 Ross Street, for an injury to her left shoulder. Police lacked details of the accident.

State Game Refuge Bill For Farallones

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Legislation designating the Farallon Islands as a state game refuge has been introduced by Sen. Milton Marks, R-San Francisco.

The islands, 28 miles west of the Golden Gate, originally were designated a federal game refuge by President Theodore Roosevelt, but Marks said its status under the presidential order left responsibility for protection "somewhat nebulous."

Marks' bill would protect some 200,000 birds as well as many sea lions and seals which breed on and migrate to the islands. The refuge would bar unauthorized entry closer than three miles to the islands.

The senator noted that the Coast Guard, which now provides limited protection for the wildlife, is planning to abandon the islands when automated ship-warning equipment is installed this year. The Coast Guard's imminent departure "makes it imperative that the state step in now," Marks declared.

His bill did not provide additional funds to enforce its restrictions against unauthorized entry into the refuge.

Mill Valley Board Firm On Corridor

The Mill Valley School District board has reaffirmed an earlier action and gone on record as "unalterably opposed" to the use of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way in Mill Valley for rapid transit.

Carol Taylor, secretary to Supt. James A. Collins, reported the board Monday unanimously asked the Golden Gate Bridge District not to build a transit system on the railroad property.

The right-of-way bisects the Middle School site and Edna Maguire School and the board feels its use as a transit corridor is inconsistent with the educational and recreational uses of the schools, Mrs. Taylor said.

The resolution asks the bridge district to locate any rapid transit in Mill Valley along Highway 101.

The Mill Valley City Council will consider and is expected to adopt an identical resolution when it meets Monday at 8 p.m. at city hall. Both bodies had previously stated their opposition to rapid transit use of the railroad property.

In other business, the board heard Harold Graves, of the real estate firm of Frank Howard Allen Co., report that the 1.68-acre Harvard Avenue property owned by the district has been placed on multiple listing.

The district is selling the site and a 5.13-acre parcel in Tamalpais Valley to finance construction of the Middle School.

The Mill Valley school district board also:

GIFT - Accepted a gift from the Independent Insurance Agents of Marin of eight metal security lockers, which will be installed at Edna Maguire School.

MIDDLE SCHOOL - Heard a report that the Middle School is 15 per cent complete.

PRINCIPAL - Was told that deadline for filing for the post of principal at the Middle School is Friday and 35 applicants have applied thus far.

DAY - Agreed to reduce the school day at Edna Maguire School from 350 minutes to 305 minutes. The state requires a minimum 240-minute day.

TEACHERS - Accepted the resignation of Jill Aigner, math teacher at Edna Maguire School, and replaced her with Michael Shoob, who will receive $3,512 for the rest of the school year.

Committee Kills Legal Bingo Bill

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —A bill to legalize bingo in California is dead—despite assurances it's a game played by "little old ladies" and has no mafia connections.

An Assembly committee junked the measure after sponsor Alister McAlister argued that bingo has "no history of infiltration by hoodlums" and was played in churches in his San Jose district until a crackdown last fall.

"We know that it's a game played by little old ladies," he said.

Opponents said the bill failed to define bingo and would permit "wide open" gambling "as long as you call it a bingo game."

Arraignment Set

Otis D. Robinson, 38, of San Rafael, was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday on a charge of burglarizing Payless Drug Store in San Rafael Feb. 2. He is to be arraigned Monday.

Sewer Construction Ordered For Area

The Marin County health officer has informed the Bayside Acres Property Owners Association that sewers must be built in the community, according to Clinton Lewis, association president.

In a letter to the association, Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht noted that permits for construction of septic tanks in the area have been turned down for several years because many of the existing tanks are failing, he said.

"Under the circumstances," she wrote, "we feel we have no acceptable alternative, but to encourage as strongly as possible the construction of collecting sewers to serve the entire area."

Lewis said that while homeowners in the lowland area have favored a sewer because their tanks are failing, some homeowners on higher ground have argued against sewers because their tanks function properly.

Lewis said the sewer must be built in April of 1972 when San Pedro Road will be widened.

Present to answer questions of the approximately 60 persons in attendance Monday night were Supervisor John F. McInnis, William L. Desmond, director of environmental health for the county, and Dr. William Upton of the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board, Lewis said.

The bayside community contains about 130 homes that will require sewer service, Lewis said.

A camel's temperature may rise and fall several degrees within 24 hours.

Guilty Plea To Burglary Charge

James Kenneth, 52, of New Mexico, pleaded guilty to a reduced misdemeanor charge of burglary yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

He earlier had been charged with a felony count of burglarizing the Sausalito Salvage Shop Feb. 14.

Judge David Menary Jr. set sentencing for March 9.

Costs Piling Up For Auditorium

Marin County supervisors decided yesterday to pour another $100,000 into the unfinished Veterans Memorial Auditorium and suddenly realized they had authorized more than $500,000 in building improvements in the last six weeks.

Although sufficient funds to complete the auditorium this fiscal year are budgeted, the supervisors expressed surprise with the speed and size of the spending.

Supervisors said they did not get the full impact of the expenditures because the requests from Asst. County Administrator Thomas F. Campanella had come in varying amounts since early January.

Yesterday, Campanella recommended $65,000 for an acoustical shell behind the auditorium stage and $35,000 for another chiller unit to expand air conditioning for a full, 2,100-seat auditorium.

Until last year, the supervisors had planned a 900-seat auditorium, hoping that a citizen group called Fair-Marin Inc. would raise the funds to make it a 2,100-seat facility, thus attracting major entertainment.

When Fair-Marin failed to come up with the funds, the supervisors themselves took over the operation of the auditorium. Three weeks ago, the supervisors voted money to increase the seating to 2,100.

Yesterday, Supervisor Michael Wornum asked Campanella, "Do you envision anything more before completion of the auditorium?"

Campanella said he expected to submit requests to spend $100,000 more for tiling and other furnishings to complete the interior. The auditorium is expected to open in September.

"Every week or so, we get hit with another $100,000," grumbled Chairman Louis H. Baar. He urged a delay in further spending until consideration of the 1971-72 budget in June.

Baar voted against yesterday's $100,000 outlay, but he was the lone dissenter in a 4-1 vote.

Campanella explained the major symphonies cannot be booked for the auditorium until the shell is installed. If the shell is added later, he said, the auditorium would have to close for the shell installation.

"To make it (the building) productive, we have to complete it," said Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni Jr.

"There's no sense putting in 2,100 seats and let the people in the back roast because of deficient air conditioning," added Supervisor Michael Wornum.

McInnis said he had opposed the auditorium at the outset because financing was not assured. But now that the county is committed, it must complete the job so that the opening will not be a flop.

County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell reported that $3 million has been spent on the auditorium in the last four years. Of this amount, $2,250,000 came from county funds, and the rest from the state.

On Jan. 12, they voted $91,152 for landscaping and $92,320 for turfing, water lines and other improvements needed for the 1971 fair.

On Jan. 26, they appropriated $4,400 in stage rigging, $19,578 for a movable wall, and $7,290 per year for the sound system.

On Feb. 2, they paid $195,238 to increase seating to 2,100.

On Feb. 9, they spent $9,000 for improved seating and telescoping seat platforms.

And yesterday's authorization brought the total spent this year to $519,000.

Lower Rates For Disaster Help Slated

Beginning next month, residents of the unincorporated areas of Marin will be able to get flood and mudslide insurance at federally subsidized rates.

County Administrator Alan Bruce told the board of supervisors yesterday that the Department of Housing and Urban Development had notified the county that it now qualifies for flood insurance.

Co rte Madera and Larkspur have already qualified for the insurance, and other Marin cities have also applied.

Park-Rec Panel's New Members

Two housewives will join the Marin County Parks and Recreation Commission to succeed Lothar Salin and Helen E. Newman.

Marin County board of supervisors yesterday appointed Dorothy Olson of Fairfax and Polly Smith of Tiburon by unanimous vote.

Mrs. Olson, nominated by Peter R. Arrigoni Jr., has been active in the Fairfax Recreation program and in the League of Women Voters.

Mrs. Smith, recommended by Michael Wornum, is a member of the Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commission.

Marin Working On New Disaster Plan

Marin County is working on an updated plan to pool all available personnel and facilities in the county to meet natural disasters, chairman Louis A. Baar of the board of supervisors announced yesterday.

The present county plan has been criticized for being outmoded and inadequate in the event of a disaster such as the Los Angeles earthquake, and does not meet state or federal standards.

Baar said he and Asst. County Administrator Thomas F. Campanella have been working on a new plan, expected to be before the board of supervisors for consideration within three weeks.

Details were not made available.

The present plan, drawn in 1960, merely calls for stepping up emergency services in daily operation.

Innocent Pleas To Pot Counts

Fernando Astolfo Gomez and George William Schult Jr., both 24 and of Fairfax, and Eugene Jeffery Dodson, 30, of San Anselmo, have pleaded innocent to marijuana charges in Marin Municipal Court.

The three were arrested Feb. 5 in a raid by drug agents on Gomez's residence. They are charged with possessing marijuana and Dodson is accused of selling the drug as well.

Preliminary hearing was set for March 9.

Magee Tape Is Attacked By Attorney

Existence of the tape — but not its contents —was made known yesterday in Marin Superior Court during a hearing on a petition by a Pacific Sun reporter, Alice Yarish, seeking permission to interview Magee at San Quentin.

"That tape had no right to be made. It was unauthorized," cried Robert Y. Bell of Santa Rosa, one of two attorneys named to represent Magee.

TAPED SATURDAY

The tape was made Saturday at the prison by attorney Jerome Berg, representing Mrs. Yarish.

Berg said that Magee has asked to be interviewed by Mrs. Yarish and that the tape was made to illustrate Magee is a reasonable man of some intelligence who could be interviewed without prison restrictions.

But prison restrictions which prevented press interviews with men awaiting superior court appearances have been removed, Deputy State Atty. Gen. Gloria DeHart told Judge Samuel W. Gardiner yesterday.

She said Magee could be interviewed if the permission of the prisoner, his attorneys and the judge were obtained.

The judge's permission is needed, she said, because of a ban on pretrial publicity concerning Magee's case.

He and Angela Y. Davis are charged with murder, conspiracy and kidnapping in connection with an escape shoot-out attempt Aug. 7 at the Marin Hall of Justice. Their case will return to court March 16 for hearing of defense motions.

NEW COUNSEL

Bell and Robert D. Carrow of Novato were appointed to represent Magee after Sausalito attorney A. Leonard Bjorklund Jr. asked to be relieved of the assignment, citing Magee's refusal to cooperate.

Bell and Carrow reportedly have had little more success in winning Magee's cooperation.

Despite Mrs. DeHart's explanation of the new regulations yesterday, Berg pressed his case, asking the judge to set a deadline within which time Mrs. Yarish should be allowed to interview Magee, but Gardiner decided to continue the matter.

For one thing, Carrow and Bell wanted to listen to the tape.

The hearing will resume at 9:30 a.m. Monday.

Study Vetoed On Managerial Pay

Marin County supervisors decided yesterday they don't want to pay $15,000 to $20,000 for an outside consultant firm to study the salary scales of county management employees and to develop criteria for future pay raises.

Supervisors voted 3 to 2 to reject a proposal presented by Edward N. Hay and Associates of San Francisco. Arnold M. Baptiste and Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. dissented.

Without a systematic way to evaluate the work of department heads and assistants, Baptiste argued, pay raises granted to top brass would be subject to criticism from the public.

The study by Hay and Associates would give the personnel department a tool to justify the salaries and raises, said Baptiste.

Supervisors Louis H. Baar, John F. McInnis and Michael Wornum felt the pay scale of department heads and assistants could be worked out by county staff. They asked Mrs. Rinne to come back with a report in about a month.

Of the county's 1,200 employees, less than 100 are in the managerial category. They are paid flat sums as determined by the county supervisors.

Salaries of county employees who are not members of employee groups or unions are determined each year after bargaining session with the various employee organizations.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors Also:

FESTIVAL — Supported the College of Marin Foundation's efforts to raise $14,000 to send the college drama department to participate in the Edinburgh Festival in Scotland in August. College of Marin, only the third American university to be invited to the festival, will present the "Taming of the Shrew." The College Foundation has already raised $11,500.

AIRPORT — Voted, 4-1, Baptiste dissenting, to refuse owners of property adjacent to Gnoss Field taxiway access to the field. The action was based on a county aviation commission recommendation. An owner of one adjacent parcel has declined to sell his property to the county to expand the airport unless he receives taxiway access. The county has condemned the property.

ARCHITECTS — Assured architect Robert W. F. Severin that the county will publicize proposed construction projects so that Marin Architects can present their proposals for consideration. Severin charged that architects living in Marin get only 2.2 per cent of architectural work for the county.

CONTRACTORS — Decided that all county bid documents will hereafter require bidders to list their state contractor's license numbers. David G. Greenlee, executive manager of Marin Builders Exchange, complained that the county sometimes lets contracts to unlicensed vendors.

ADVISORY — Approved formation of a Traffic Advisory Committee to review various requests for traffic safety measures, such as stop signs and traffic lights. The committee will be composed of representatives from the California Highway Patrol, county department of public works, the state Division of Highways, and from an automobile club.

SLIDE — Signed an agreement with the state division of Highways for $80,300 in repairs to slide damage on Lucas Valley Road east of Big Rock Ranch. Public Works Director Donald R. Frost said the funds for the job will come from federal disaster relief.

LIBRARY — Approved a $20,577 outlay for soils and materials testing, sewer line relocation, ditch construction, and soil stabilization for the new county library branch in Corte Madera.

SUIT— Authorized County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney to defend the county against a $1,580,078 suit by Robert E. McKee Co., builder of the Hall of Justice. McKee contends he was forced to do extra work because of errors and omissions in contract documents.

PRESERVE — Approved land conservation contracts giving tax breaks for these three properties: The 334-acre Rico Bordessa dairy ranch on Shoreline Highway between Olema and Point Reyes Station; 11 acres which Harold E. Gregg saved for public use at the top of Mt. Barnaby; and 10 acres to be added to the 300-acre Jordan L. Martinelli ranch north of Bolinas, which is already under contract.

LSD Case Jury Still Not Seated

I-J Special Report

UKIAH — Jury selection still was incomplete yesterday after six days of court efforts to seat a panel for the trial of four Marinites and three other persons arrested during a $3 million LSD raid in Fort Bragg last June.

Myrtle Turner, acting as clerk for visiting Judge Kenneth M. Eyemann of Sonoma County, said she could not tell whether jury selection could be completed today.

Most of yesterday's court time was consumed with attorneys' arguments rather than questioning prospective jurymen, she reported.

Marin residents on trial in the Mendocino County Superior Court are Craig B. Champie, 20, of Fairfax; John R. Rodigou and Michael B. Alwyn, both 23 and both of San Rafael, and Wayne Butler, 23, of Forest Knolls.

Judge Eyemann was assigned to the trial after both Mendocino County Superior Court judges and another visiting judge were disqualified earlier this month.

The Marinites, two other men and a woman each were charged with conspiring to make LSD, manufacturing it, possessing it and having the halucinatory drug for sale.

Day-Care Issue: 'Sounding Board'

The need for another day-care center for the San Anselmo-Fairfax area will be discussed on KTIM's "Marin Sounding Board" at 9 a.m. tomorrow.

Panelists will include Mrs. Sydney Bloch, committee chairman for day care study in Marin and representing the Marin National Council of Jewish Women; Reginald Hammond, superintendent of the Fairfax School District; Ona Hall, of the county department of social services; and Joseph Denhart, director of day care centers of the county school department.

Listeners may phone in questions during the live broadcast on Thursday. The taped discussion will be rebroadcast Sunday at 10:05 a.m.

Pedestrian's Injuries Minor

A 14-year-old San Rafael youth suffered bruised hands when hit by a car Sunday as he crossed D Street, San Rafael police said yesterday.

Bruce J. Ford of 104 Lochinvar Road, San Rafael, according to police, said he and his friend were crossing D Street at 4:46 p.m. in the pedestrian crosswalk when he was struck by a car turning off Fifth Avenue and was knocked to the street.

Police cited the driver of the car, Fred W. Dickson, 61, of 7699 Lakeville Road, Petaluma, for failure to yield.

Window Smashers' Testimony Is Taken

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Two men convicted of breaking windows of businesses which advertised in the struck San Rafael Independent-Journal have testified in secret before a special grand jury investigating organized crime.

Witnesses who appear before the grand jury were forbidden by court order from disclosing their testimony, but an attorney for one of the men said questions at the Tuesday session indicated the jury was investigating possible violations of the Hobbs Act.

The act forbids "interference with commerce by threats or violence," said Cecil Poole, former U.S. Attorney in San Francisco.

The two men, Grant W. Anders, 30, of Oakland, and James R. Brocato, 31, of Santa Rosa, are to be sentenced March 5 in Solano County Superior Court after pleading guilty to felony counts of conspiring to break windows of Independent-Journal advertisers. A third man awaiting sentence on the same count, but evidently not figuring in the grand jury probe, is Dennis J. Crowley, 41, of San Jose.

All three pleaded guilty Jan. 26, after their case was transferred from Marin Courts. The three were arrested last June while cruising near the Strawberry Shopping Center in a car containing chunks of printers lead, slingshots and a list of I-J advertisers.

Both are also members of the Typographical Union, which struck the Independent-Journal Jan. 7, 1969, although the Marin County daily has continued publishing.

Poole and another attorney representing the men, Duane Beeson, said the questions asked in the secret session concerned the strike as well as possible violations of the Hobbs Act.

"Beyond that it is pure speculation" to guess at what the jury is seeking, the attorneys said.

Three other witnesses who testified at Tuesday's session were Larry Stanfield, Marin County Sheriff's deputy who arrested Anders, Brocado and a third man last June; an FBI agent, and a postal inspector.

McClosky Talk At College Off

Rep. Paul N. (Pete) McCloskey, R.-Portola Valley, has canceled a speech on population and politics scheduled for tomorrow at College of Marin, according to E. Allen Arnold of Zero Population Growth of Marin.

Speaking in his place at 8:30 p.m. at Olney Hall will be Dr. John H. Hessel, national director of education for Zero Population Growth and a research associate at Stanford University, Arnold said.

The talk is sponsored by Arnold's group, and the Planned Parenthood Association as part of the college's "Spaceship Earth: Love It or Leave It" lecture series.

Two Money Bags Reported Stolen

Two money bags containing $400 in cash and $50 worth of whiskey and vodka were reported stolen early Saturday from the Pago Pago Bar at 803 Fourth Street, San Rafael, police have reported.

Owner Geraldine A. Nardi of 4 Elford Street, San Rafael, told police she found the door in the rear of the garbage room pried open as well as the door to a small inner room where the liquor and money bags were stored. She said approximately $250 damage was done to the doors.

Coast Guard Will Open Collision Probe Tomorrow

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The Coast Guard will open a hearing tomorrow to look into the cause of a near collision last month of an ammunition ship and an oil tanker off the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge.

Leo H. Wuesthoff of Oakland, a licensed river and bay pilot who was captain of the tanker Stolt Condor, has been accused of violating "rules of the road."

The Coast Guard has not made public the basis for the charges which could lead to suspension or revocation of Wuesthoff's license if he is found guilty.

The president of the California Inland Pilots Association, however, gave a description of the near collision at a Congressional subcommittee's inquiry into the January tanker crash which caused a massive oil spill.

Capt. Gar Long said the near miss occurred Jan. 30 in light fog. He said he was piloting the Overseas Suzanne and had the right of way under navigational rules but had to order his ship full astern to avoid a collision with the tanker.

"Fortunately," the captain of the ammunition ship told the committee, "the Suzanne did not ground on Invincible Rock . . nor did we collide with the Stolt Condor."

Long said that he had radioed a request to the tanker that his ship be allowed to go under the bridge first but that the tanker captain had responded that he was heading through at full speed.

The hearing will open at 10 a.m. tomorrow in the Appraisers Building in San Francisco.

Death Threat, $300 Taken

A Terra Linda couple was robbed of $300 by three men who invaded their home early Monday and threatened to kill them, Marin County Sheriff's office reported yesterday.

Frank Albert Garguilo, owner of Maria's Pueblo Restaurant in San Rafael, told deputies the doorbell rang at about 12:40 a.m. at his residence at 221 Orris Terrace.

When he opened the door, three men wearing ski masks — one of whom carried a gun — rushed in and demanded money, he said.

After threatening to kill Garguilo and his wife, Sherry, the men tied them up with clothesline, ripped out the telephone wire and fled with receipts from Garguilo's restaurant.

Try Hand At Curry Cookery

The elaborate combinations of freshly ground seasonings called masalas distinguish Indian cooking from any other cuisine in the world. One of the most popular blends is called "garam masala," a basic version including peppercorns, cumin seeds, cardamom pods, coriander, cloves and stick cinnamon. Fortunately, a blend of these spices is available in the form of "curry powder" so that we can enjoy the flavors of Indian cooking without all the labors of preparation.

This recipe for curry is characterized by its sauce made with milk and butter. All sorts of other surprises appear in the sauce; bacon bits, chopped onions, fresh cauliflower, celery and even apples and plum preserves.

Keep in mind this basic rule when preparing curry — curry sauce is thickened before the meat is added, in this case the chicken.

No Indian curry is complete unless it's served with condiments. Go wild with everything you have on hand . . . raisins, coconut, almonds or peanuts, chopped green pepper, hard-cooked eggs, cubed bananas, chopped pickles and chutney.

CHICKEN CURRY

3 slices bacon, cut-up
1 cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter
⅓ cup regular all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons curry powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
1 cup water
1 cup sliced cauliflower
½ cup sliced celery
2 chicken bouillon cubes
½ cup plum preserves
2 cups chopped cooked chicken
2 cups shopped unpeeled red cooking apples
1 cup shredded coconut
hot cooked saffron rice

In a 3-quart saucepan cook bacon and onion until bacon is cooked; add butter and stir until melted. Stir in flour, curry powder and salt. Remove from heat; gradually add milk and water. Add cauliflower, celery, bouillon cubes and preserves. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add chicken, apples and coconut. Heat over low heat to serving temperature, stirring occasionally (about 5 minutes).

Serve with rice and one or more of the following condiments — chopped green pepper, chopped pickles, cubed banana chopped peanuts, slivered toasted almonds, chopped hard-cooked eggs, raisins, chutney. Makes 8-10 servings.

Marinate Lamb Chops For Best Flavor

Every good cook keeps a collection of set recipes filed away in her mind for use on special occasions. There are traditional holiday recipes, family favorites, her mother-in-law's apple pie, and certain company dishes.

Here is a new one for Continental Lamb Chops. Their superb flavor comes from the idea of marinating the chops in Italian rose dressing for a couple of hours before you start cooking them.

The marinade is also thriftly incorporated into the sauce. Simply add the pan drippings to it, along with some currant jelly and a bit of flour to thicken. Presto, there's a luscious sauce to serve over the chops.

Come serving time, garnish the chops with halved apples baked with a small scoop of herbed croutons in each. Green beans Almondine make a nice vegetable accompaniment.

CONTINENTAL LAMB CHOPS

8 shoulder lamb chops
1 bottle (8 oz.) Italian rose dressing
1 medium onion, sliced
2 tablespoons currant jelly
1 tablespoon flour
Baked apples (optional)

In large bowl, place chops; add Italian rose dressing. Marinate 2 to 3 hours, turning meat occasionally.

Remove chops from marinade (reserve liquid). Place chops in large heavy skillet; add ½ cup marinade and onion. Simmer covered, 1 hour or until tender. Transfer meat to warm platter.

Skim fat from drippings. In medium saucepan, combine drippings, remaining marinade, jelly, and flour; heat, stirring occasionally.

Serve chops on platter, garnished with baked apples. Serve sauce separately. Makes 4 servings.

LAMB CHOPS, when prepared in this continental style, become a company meal. Their superb flavor comes from marinating each chop in an Italian rose dressing which is also incorporated into a tasty sauce.

Tried And True From Terra Lindans

Mrs. Raymond M. Kelleher is cookbook chairman, assisted by Mmes. Andrew Parodi, George Pfautsch, Robert McIntosh and Ronald Moresco.

The unique and colorful cover was designed by Mrs. Richard Hunter. An unusual section of special dinner menus was organized by Mrs. Harry Humphreys. A men's section and a section of teen-age favorites are included. The cookbook is available from Mrs Kelleher or Mrs. Humphreys.

The following recipes are included in the cookbook:

ORANGE PORT MOLD

2 3-oz. pkgs. black cherry flavored gelatin
1½ cups boiling water
3 oranges
1 cup port wine
1 cup orange juice

Dissolve black cherry gelatin in the 1½ cups boiling water. Peel oranges; section each, reserving juice and cut up pulp. Add enough water to reserved juice to make ½ cup liquid. Stir into dissolved gelatin along with wine and the additional 1 cup orange juice. Chill mixture till partially set. Fold in cut up oranges; pour into 6 cup ring mold. Chill until firm; unmold and fill center with salad greens. Makes 10-12 servings.

Mrs. Robert Doyle

APRICOT MARMALADE JAM

2 lbs. apricots (chopped or ground)
1 medium orange (chopped or ground)
juice of one lemon
½ bottle (10-oz. jar) maraschino cherries and juice chopped
18 oz. can crushed pineapple (drained)
5 cups sugar
½ bottle of Certo

Combine apricots, citrus, fruit, cherries, pineapple, juices and sugar in a large saucepan. Mix well. Place over high heat and bring to full rolling boil. Boil hard for three minutes stirring constantly. Remove from heat and stir in Certo at once. Fill glasses and cover with hot paraffin.

Mrs. Thomas Lydon

MUSTARD MOLD

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
1 cup mayonnaise
½ cup prepared mustard
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
½ cup cream, whipped

Soften gelatin in cold water. Stir over low heat until dissolved. Cool. Combine mayonnaise, mustard, salt and paprika. Stir in gelatin. Chill until slightly thickened; fold in whipped cream. Pour into 1 qt. mold, chill.

This is best served as a relish for cold meats, which makes it especially suitable for a buffet. For smaller parties cut recipe in half.

Mrs. Harry Humphreys

EASY BAKED HAM

5 lb. canned ham
can of frozen orange juice
brown sugar

Wrap ham in aluminum foil. Bake in slow oven 325° for 3-4 hrs. Take orange juice and enough brown sugar to make a thick sauce. Pour over ham and bake slowly for 1 hour.

During the last 15 min. open the foil at the top.

Mrs. Robert McIntosh

CHICKEN KIEV

Buy chicken breasts boned and halved. Skin breasts and pound between two sheets of wax paper until about ⅜" thick. Sprinkle chives, salt, pepper, garlic salt inside chicken. Make butter blocks and starting at end, fold butter and all ingredients envelope style. Tuck in sides and fasten with toothpick.

Dip chicken into mixture of flour, egg, breadcrumbs, then milk again and breadcrumbs again.

Refrigerate overnight.

Heat oil in pan 350° (or use deep fryer) and brown lightly. Place on cookie sheet lined with foil and bake about 15 minutes.

PRACTICING A "Spirol" with her daughter, Hetti, left, Mrs. Ray Schramm of Greenbrae teaches her daughter, a Redwood High School sophomore the professional technique used when she starred in Ice Follies and Ice Capades productions, performed in hotel dining rooms across the country and taught figure skating. (I-J photos)

'Competition Is So Keen'

By PAT BALMES

Planning to follow her mother into professional ice skating, 15-year-old Hetti Schramm of Greenbrae practices 20 hours a week, before school and after homework and dinner.

"Hetti puts great self discipline and emotion into her routines," says her mother, former Ice Capades star Nadine Schramm. "She has a wonderful feeling for choreographing the new music that appeals to the younger generation." At home, the Redwood High School sophomore uses her keen ear to condense music into short tapes for her ice skating routines. "Hetti has chosen a hard field," says her mother. "Now competition is so keen that there are very few openings in the big ice shows. She may follow her rare talent for choreography to plan ice show productions."

The determined girl rises at 5:15 a.m. daily and is on the ice at 6 a.m., driven there by her father, owner and ice skating teacher at Raydine Ice Skating Rink in Corte Madera.

After two hours of figures, jumps, spins and free footwork Ray Schramm, also a former ice follies star, drives his tall, pretty daughter to school. Each evening they are back at the rink between 5:45 to 7:45 p.m. She is preparing for the free-style portion of the seventh test and figures part of the eighth test before she becomes a gold medalist, qualified to compete in local and sectional competitions.

"MOST CHILDREN who are working this hard are helped by this self discipline. They have hardly a minute to themselves so they learn to use their time efficiently. If the children are doing things they want to do, they will be happy. You cannot give them too much if the work is their decision, not yours," says Nadine.

Hetti has time for weekly ballet lessons, sewing, baking, music taping and is helping her mother choreograph the Marin Figure Skating Club's show to be held May 1, 2 and 3.

For petite Nadine, watching her daughter prepare for her ice skating career is like living her own life over again. A native of San Francisco, the brunette attended Commodore Sloat School, Everett Jr. High and Mission High School. Her mother, an accomplished pianist, played for a dance studio and three-year-old Nadine came along to class to follow behind the big girls.

"I learned the singing, tap-dancing Shirley Temple bit," recalls Nadine. She danced with the San Francisco Ballet. With dancing background and a touch of theatrical blood in her veins, ice skating came naturally to Nadine, even at the late starting age of 10.

She gratefully recalls that the girl's dean of her high school allowed her to attend school only half a day, so she could practice every afternoon. She skipped gym, lunch and study periods. Her father picked her up daily at school at 12:30 p.m. She ate and changed her clothes in the car on the way to a train across the Bay Bridge. She practiced after school every day and on Saturdays at the Berkeley Ice Arena.

"I had complete support from both my parents," explains Nadine. "When I finished high school I was in the right place at the right time. Ice Follies and Ice Capades were forming a third company called Ice Cycles. The owners had seen me in pop concerts at Berkeley. She signed a contract in 1946 as a star soloist and pair skater. The teen-ager skated with Ice Cycles for two seasons, traveling 11 months out of the year.

WHILE SHE was on vacation in San Francisco in the summer of 1948 Nadine dined at a Chinese restaurant with a group of skaters. She was seated next to Ray Schramm, who was appearing with his twin brother in the Ice Follies at Winterland here. Two weeks later he gave Nadine an engagement ring. But they were soon separated because their different companies again went on the road. They made a "tremendous contribution" to Trans World Air Lines during their three-month transcontinental courtship.

"I was under contract for two key spots in the Ice Cycles Show," explains Nadine. "I just could not leave. We intended to be married in San Francisco

Food Stores To Hire More Women

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — It makes sense that the hands which push the cart at the supermarket also should help to pull down some of the jobs connected with the store operation.

Which is one way of saying that food stores are hiring more women, many for jobs once considered man's work.

One of the reasons is woman's talent as a housekeeper, which carries over into store operation. Another is the fact that even at a time when unemployment is high, there may not be a man available for the job.

"With the male labor pool tight in many areas . . . a good man these days may be hard to find," says Progressive Grocer in its current issue. "To fill the gap, many retailers are giving more thought to hiring women on a part-time or full-time basis for jobs usually filled by men."

THE PUBLICATION, in a review of the growing numbers of women in food retailing, cites as one example Bob Young, operator of four IGA supermarkets in Ohio. Young found part-time women workers successful in increasing sales and reducing out-of-stocks in his frozen foods departments. His stores, he added, are in small towns and are not high-volume businesses.

Fireco Sales, Ltd., Canada's largest service merchandiser with some 1,800 food stores spread throughout the dominion, started hiring women part-time three years ago. They worked primarily in rural and small town areas.

Fireco's President Michael Firestone said the project started as a way of having personnel on the scene when store shipments arrived. If shipments were delayed, it would save the company travelling salesman costs if someone in the neighborhood could check arrivals. No juggling of schedules, no costly long distance trips.

Women, he said, found the part-time jobs a good way of "getting out of the house," earning extra money, and still keeping up with the housework and children.

FIRESTONE SAID women in the main were the non-breadwinner, non-career types, often meaning less job turnover than with men who "tend to be more ambitious . . . impatient if growth opportunities are not immediately apparent."

Firestone said his company's experience with both the part-time and the full-time worker indicated the full-timer is more likely to produce better results.

He cited two reasons. The full-timer is more serious about her work. And working full-time maintains a pace that leads to more productivity through job knowledge and a "feel for the business."

Awards Given To Six Women Who Influence Government

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The six winners of the Federal Woman's Award this year know how to keep Uncle Sam's top secrets and have shown their skills in the fields of space dieting, social work, public health and statistics.

The women were selected for the honors because of their influence on major government programs and their unique contributions to a women's lib breakthrough.

Jeanne Wilson Davis, a native of Long Beach, who devised and installed procedures for handling foreign policy paper work in the National Security Council, was one of the winners.

SHE DESCRIBES herself as a "sort of traffic manager" preparing briefing books for President Nixon and his national security affairs adviser, Dr. Henry A. Kissinger.

Miss Davis coordinates staff work and schedules and records the meetings and work of the NSC which deliberates Nixon's top foreign policy moves around the world.

Another winner in the hush hush department is Juanita Morris Moody, born in Morven, N.C. She is a cryptologist and chief intelligence officer of the National Security Agency.

Among her achievements was her outstanding performance during the Cuban missile crisis in 1962 when she was put in charge of a division of the agency which was directly concerned with the crisis, and she did not leave her post until the danger had abated. During the emergency she displayed extraordinary executive talent and was later commended by President Kennedy.

A specialist in public health research, she was the first black woman graduate of the University of Maryland's statistics and research doctoral program.

She has said her use of neighborhood people to assist the Health Department's staff in Washington, D.C., in the ghetto areas has "helped to draw people back from deeply entrenched negativism and feelings about black genocide."

Essie Davis Morgan, born in Waycross, Ga., is a director of social work who has done highly original work in developing the social and emotional aspects of the care and treatment of Veterans Administration patients and their families.

She comes from a closely knit Negro family, and she and her four brothers were able to surmount formidable barriers to high achievement. Three brothers became professional scientists and the fourth, Ossie Davis, is a noted actor, director and playwright. Mrs. Morgan began her career with the Veterans Administration with the VA hospital in Tuskegee, Ala., in 1949.

RITA M. Rapp is an environmental physiologist, aerospace technologist and senior researcher in the functional systems areas of Apollo food and feeding systems.

A native of Piqua, Ohio, she tested living on daily diet consumed by the three Apollo 14 astronauts during their moon voyage and found "it really has a good flavor."

Joan Raup Rosenblatt, a mathematician and internationally recognized expert in statistics, developed new methods in the National Bureau of Standards where she has spent all of her government career since she joined the bureau in 1955. She recently assisted the Selective Service System in preparing for the random selection of sequence numbers for draft registrants.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

How Can She Get Her Son To Fight For The Girl He Wants?

DEAR HELEN:

My son, age 28, has been going out with a wonderful girl for five years. She and I couldn't see why they didn't get married, so she started to drop hints, too.

Well, there was a fight, and he dropped her. You never saw a more miserable girl, and I was terribly upset also. I told him what a mistake he was making.

After two months my son had a change of heart and said he was ready for marriage. He went over to tell the girl and, Helen, you won't believe this: She said she had met a "wonderful fellow" and the marriage was set for spring.

No amount of talk would change her mind. I really tried, as I always felt she would be the perfect daughter-in-law. I think if my son would try harder, he might still win her — after all, five years can't be brushed off, while a two-month friendship can't be serious. But he just shrugs.

How can I get him to fight for what he wants?

DISAPPOINTED AND CONCERNED

DEAR D AND C.:

What he wants, or what you want?

Your son appears more relieved than bereaved. So shrug, too, Mamma.

H.

DEAR HELEN:

For years I have been aware of my homosexual tendencies. My doctor said there was no cure, and he advised women of this type against marriage. I hated my weakness, wouldn't give in to it, and determined to cure myself.

So I married a man who interested me very much. He fit well into my athletically active life, and I tried to love him. I thought I succeeded, but somehow we drifted into a nothing relationship.

We barely talk, though we are not angry. My mind is just whirling with the things we used to do, but now if I mention these activities the response is "Maybe tomorrow." It never comes. So I've been doing things on my own or with friends. The only time I get any real attention at home is when my husband decides he "needs" me.

In the beginning, I thought surely he could keep me on the right track, but now my interests are with someone else, and it's not a man.

I'm scared. I want to be morally straight, but these years of no communication and dwindling activities are slowly pushing me out of bounds. I feel guilty that I can't respond to my husband, and even guiltier when I can't control my fantasies.

Do you think having a baby would put me straight?

SO ALONE

DEAR ALONE:

No! Having a baby would only make you more confused. In-depth therapy is your hope. You've lived with undeserved guilt far too long.

H.

DEAR HELEN:

"Animal Lover" has a point. Who can afford to have animals altered nowadays? The cost has more than doubled in the past ten years: Over $40 to have a cat spayed in New York, and the Friends of Animals Society has no participating vet in our area. Even so, the F.A.S. cost would be around $20 (and you must show "need" which is embarrassing). The ASPCA should do more to help people who would adopt pets but can't afford to control their repopulating. A big campaign to have the State offer pet "altering" at minimum fees (veterinarians to be paid from tax money now spent on operating pounds, etc.) would be much more helpful than wailing about cruelty to animals.

The Facts Of Grapefruit Life

NEW YORK (UPI)—Do you think grapefruit tastes like grapes? Well, in the late 1700s someone thought it did, and that's how grapefruit got its name.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Marketing Service, there is reason for those who relish grapefruit to rejoice. The current crop is up 24 per cent over last season's. Like other citrus fruits, grapefruit is packed with vitamin C.

Why Congress Is Considering Bills On 'No Fault' Insurance

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

Almost every one of the approximately 80 million automobile owners in this country has had some sort of complaint about the price of handling of insurance against losses due to accidental injury or property damage.

Based on extensive studies done in recent years, many of these complaints are justified. Almost everyone acquainted with the present system, including some influential industry leaders, concede that some sort of sweeping reform is necessary.

A $2 MILLION study done by the Department of Transportation has recently confirmed an earlier study by the Senate Subcommittee on Antitrust and Monopoly showing that only one dollar out of every two that are paid in comes back in benefits to the motoring public.

What is worse, victims of accidents are not compensated fairly. The ones who suffer less than $500 in losses get more than four times what they actually lose while the ones who lose more than $25,000 get only one-third of their actual losses through the present system.

A study done in New York state showed that only 14.5 cents out of every dollar paid in premiums came back in payment for economic losses not covered by Blue Cross or other insurance.

The basic trouble, according to these studies, is the necessity of proving who is at fault in an accident before claims are paid.

THE DELAYS and expenses involved in proving fault have sent company costs and lawyers' fees skyrocketing. The New York study showed that 23 cents of the premium dollar went to pay lawyers and claims investigators and 33 cents more went for company costs.

Most of these expenses could be wiped out, say proponents of a plan to eliminate the necessity of proving fault before payment of claims. And, they add, a "no-fault" system could also reduce the present time lag in making payments. The average court case takes 16 months to settle.

Such a plan has been gaining support steadily since it was proposed in 1965 in a book, "After Cars Crash. . . the Need for Legal and Insurance Reform," by Robert E. Keeton and Jeffrey O'Connell.

But it has faced rough going in the state legislatures where it has been introduced because of opposition by industry leaders who can call on support from the many lawyers and insurance agents who serve as legislators.

ONLY ONE state, Massachusetts, has adopted the "no-fault" concept. Under a new law that went into effect on Jan. 1, a motorist can collect directly from his insuring company for personal injury expenses up to $2,000.

Results after one month showed a substantial drop of 50 per cent in such claims from the previous January, but property damage claims rose 10 per cent. It is too early to tell exactly what these changes mean, but they appear to prove the contention that "no-fault" can cut a lot of costs.

Another optimistic note is the growing acceptance of the need for change among insurance companies. Two years ago, the "no-fault" concept was endorsed by the American Insurance Association, a group of companies writing about 30 per cent of the auto insurance business.

Last December, two groups representing almost all other companies endorsed a limited "no-fault" plan which leaves most of the present system intact.

The big test will come in forthcoming Congressional hearings on bills that would set up a comprehensive "no-fault" system throughout the country.

Freshness Codes

About 30 per cent of most grocery items fall into categories carrying freshness codes. These codes indicate the date on which an item is packaged or the suggested date for removal from sale stocks.

White Wash In Dirty Water?

By GLORIA WOLFORD

NEW YORK (UPI)—Detergent companies tend to regard housewives as "mindless nits."

That is the view of a group of University of Toronto scientists and, true or false, detergent companies apparently do see the housewife as a woman concerned only with whether her wash is as white or whiter than her neighbor's.

There are three elements in detergents which have scientists worried:

—Phosphates which speed the growth of algae in lakes and streams, cutting off oxygen for marine life and turning lakes into swamps.

—Enzymes which doctors say have caused allergic reactions —skin and lung diseases—in workers in detergent plants and whose effect on housewives has never been tested.

—Nitrilotiacetic acid (NTA) which some companies began using as a substitute for phosphates and which scientists fear may be even more of a pollutant.

In December, detergent companies voluntarily agreed to suspend the use of NTA pending further testing and at the beginning of February Lever Brothers said it was discontinuing the use of enzymes. Union officials at a plant owned by Procter and Gamble, makers of Tide, the nation's largest selling detergent, also said enzymes were being taken out. Procter and Gamble, however, refused to comment.

WITH NTA banned at least temporarily and enzymes apparently on their way out as the darling of the detergent industry, that leaves phosphates, and American housewives are pouring phosphate laden detergents into the nation's waters at the rate of five billion pounds a year.

Phosphates soften water and disperse dirt in clothes and were regarded as a major breakthrough when they were put on the market in the 1940s. The detergent industry, through its spokesman, The Soap and Detergent Association, maintains there is no proof that phosphates are killing lakes and streams and has vowed to fight any attempt to ban them.

The industry's second line of defense—offered in testimony before the House Committee on government Operations last April—is that instead of banning detergents, communities ought to build more sophisticated sewage treatment plants to take phosphates out before wash water is discharged.

BUT SUCH plants would cost billions and take many years to complete even if communities could find the money. President Nixon's $10 billion program to provide improved sewage facilities contains only $4 billion in federal funds. Local communities, already financially pressed, have to come up with the rest.

Meanwhile, a group of scientists at the University of Toronto are asking housewives to take the initiative in fighting phosphate pollution.

"The large detergent companies seem to regard the housewife as a mindless nit who has completely swallowed their whiter than advertising and therefore doesn't care about detergent pollution," the university group said. "We believe that there are a great number of concerned housewives who want to do their part to fight pollution but the basic information has until now been lacking."

Population And United Nations

NEW YORK (UPI)—Julia Henderson, United Nations associate commissioner for technical cooperation, has a new job. She is the first woman to serve as secretary-general of the International Planned Parenthood Federation.

Commenting on her appointment and new responsibilities, Miss Henderson said: "I am convinced that the population problem deserves a higher priority in terms of development resources than it has yet been given by the membership of the United Nations."

The Sullivan Reading Program made him a reading "all-star."

It's great to be a winner. No one wants to be a loser, yet many, many kids lose out every day in school because they can't keep up in the classroom. They just can't read adequately.

The Sullivan Reading Program has been making winners out of kids for years. In fact, more than five million school children have used nationally acclaimed Sullivan Reading Materials to improve their reading skills. Sullivan Reading Centers utilize these well-tested Sullivan materials to provide supplemental reading instruction for children at all school levels. (Ask your child's teacher about the Sullivan Reading Program.)

Sullivan Reading Centers offer personalized reading instruction and self-paced group instruction for your child. Classes are small, and a step by step Sullivan teaching program of reading success builds confidence while it improves your son or daughter's reading skills. He'll work at his own pace, competing only with himself, and he or she can come to the Center any day of the week or on Saturday morning. If he needs additional time to make sufficient progress during the course, he's given the extra time at no additional cost. Initial testing and all materials used by the students are also included in the $60 fee for the four-week course.

If your child's like most of our students, he'll enjoy the time spent at the Center as much as he does on the baseball diamond. He knows we believe in "all-stars," too.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"If you don't need anything fixed, do you want something destroyed?"

but all the kids in the show wanted us to be married in the company. So when Ray came to Dallas, where some of my relatives had accummulated, I asked him, 'would you like to marry me now?"

Nadine even skated on her wedding day! When the bride introduced her solo number they played, "Here Comes the Bride." She continued to skate with Ice Cycles even though Ray had to return to Ice Follies. But within three months, Nadine was hired by Ice Follies where Ray was skating with his twin brother. They stayed a year and a half practicing two hours a day and performing matinees and evenings.

"I would have hated to give it up," says Nadine. "It was so much a part of my life." Compatible even through the long hours of rigorous work, Nadine and Ray agree it would be horrible to have to perform with somebody with whom you were not compatible. When you have to perform before an audience of 16,000 people and all eyes are upon you, you have to be at your very best.

Next they skated solo and in a pair in Hotel dining rooms across the country. It was financially more rewarding than the big ice shows, according to Mrs. Schramm.

Returning to San Francisco between hotel bookings, Nadine learned that some of her former dancing teacher's pupils were interested in ice skating lessons.

"WE LIKED the idea of putting down roots," recalls Nadine. Beginning with 35 names on the list posted at the dance studio, the Schramms accummulated several hundred pupils at the 48th Avenue Skating Rink in San Francisco during the next year and a half.

"We didn't miss the traveling. We had it out of our systems. We wanted our own ice rink," says Nadine. So she and Ray built a small rink, "wall-to-wall ice and a small reception room" on Redwood Highway in Mill Valley 16 years ago.

"We did everything from bookkeeping to cleaning for the first eight years on a seven-day-a-week program, without any time together. We were never able to close the door and walk away and forget it," said Nadine while relaxing in her immaculate home furnished with Oriental pieces collected on her step-father'? trips to the Far East, as chief steward with Matson Lines.

"When Hetti was born, Ray said our children would come first in my life. So I fit my working schedule around their needs. When children are younger, they are demanding but they do not need you as much personally as they do when they are growing up and developing character."

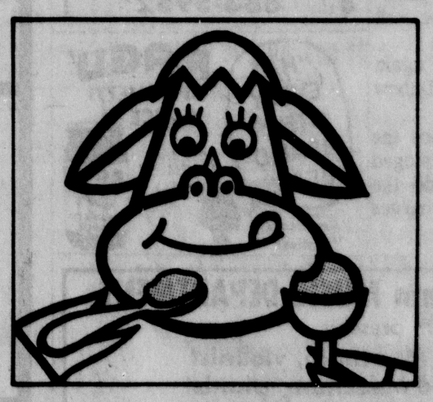
SECRET FOUND IN GRANDMOO'S SEWING BOX

"My new ice cream is just like Grandmoo used to make," says dairy industry celebrity.

Something old was announced to Redwood Empire ice cream lovers when Clo, famous spokes-cow for Clover Brand, introduced her new Clover Country Ice Cream.

"The recipe was Grandmoo's secret for many years," Clo said. "We found it in her sewing box, hidden among the thimbles and vanilla beans."

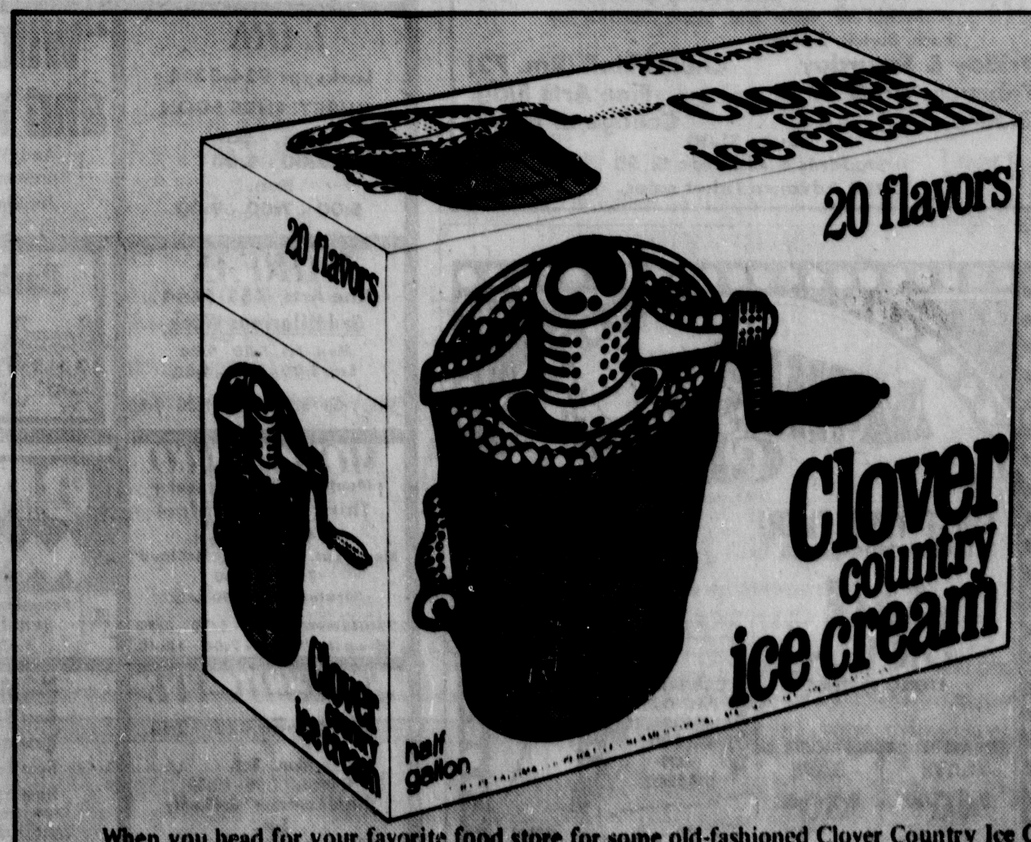
"And now, Clover Brand brings back this old-fashioned country ice cream for everyone in Clover Country to enjoy," she explained. "Its creamy smoothness and country-fresh taste take you right back to the joys of childhood."



Clo paused thoughtfully, then suddenly ambled off, mooing happily. "Hey, Clo," this reporter yelled, "Where you heading?"

"To the nearest store for some of that delicious, ever-lovin' Clover Country Ice Cream," she called, breaking into a full gallop.

"Wait for us," we muttered, strapping on our roller skates.



When you head for your favorite food store for some old-fashioned Clover Country Ice Cream, here's the brand new, zip-open carton to look for. It's as different as the ice cream inside it.

STANDS FIRM — George C. Scott as he appears in his role in "Patton" has asked his name be withdrawn from the Academy Award best actor race. His position was made known in a telegram yesterday to the academy board.

(UPI Telephoto)

Scott Emphatic On Oscar Race Position

TORREMOLINOS, Spain (UPI)—George C. Scott asked Tuesday that his name be dropped from the list of nominations for the Academy Award.

Scott sent a cablegram to the Academy of Arts and Sciences in Hollywood saying "I simply do not wish to be involved. I will not attend the award ceremony nor will any approved representative of mine attend."

It was the second time Scott had asked his name be withdrawn for Oscar consideration. In 1961 he was nominated for best supporting actor in "The Hustler," and asked his name be stricken from the list. It was not, but he failed to win an Oscar.

"Once again, I respectfully request that you withdraw my name from the list of nominees," Scott said Tuesday. "My persistence in this matter has been generally well known for some 10 years. Please understand that my request is in no way intended to denigrate my colleagues, who saw fit to nominate me. Nor is it intended to insult or hurt the many talented people with whom and for whom I worked on "Patton."

Scott in the past has criticized the methods of nominating and selecting winners of Academy Awards.

In Hollywood, the Motion Picture Academy acknowledged it had received the telegram, but refused comment.

A member of the academy board said "It is impossible for anyone's name to be withdrawn from nomination. The members will simply have to vote their conscience."

"But it proves one thing we've always known—a man can be a horse's neck and a great actor all at the same time."

Sidewalk Music Scores Resounding Legal Victory

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven—they're all legal once more on the sidewalks of San Francisco.

The longhaired young musicians who perform classical concerts on downtown street corners won a resounding legal victory Tuesday.

"It's a victory for baroque music—and justice," said defense attorney Jerrold Levitin after a municipal judge dismissed begging and blocking-the-sidewalk charges against three young men arrested while playing Haydn's Divertimenti.

Levitin said the district attorney's office, which asked for the dismissal on grounds of "insufficient evidence," has promised to seek dismissal of similar charges when the "Mozart two" appear for trial today.

Flutist Ken Cramer, 23, a former student at Eastman School of Music, was a member of both groups of musicians. Charges also were dismissed against bass viol player Richard Feves, 21, and violinist Bob Dubow, 22. Cramer returns to court on the second charge with John Bernard, 25, an oboe player.

"Mozart would be tickled if he were alive," Cramer said.

He and Bernard, who met while playing in an army band, were arrested Jan. 14 while 30 bars into Mozart's duet No. 1 for Flute and Oboe. The American Civil Liberties Union set up a "Mozart defense fund" with the slogan, "free all musical prisoners..."

Cramer was arrested again Feb. 13 with Feves and Dubow while playing Haydn.

"We were ready to face the music," said Feves, who staged a victory concert outside the bookstore after the charges were dropped.

Hong Kong Experts

HONG KONG (UPI)—A big jump in exports in 1970 has made Japan the fourth largest market for Hong Kong products, replacing Canada.

Exports to Japan last year totaled $65.5 million, 57 per cent more than in 1969.

Bragdon's Successor Is Named

City Mgr. William H. Cunningham of Mill Valley announced yesterday he has appointed Tom W. Newton, planning director for Coronado, San Diego, as Mill Valley's director of community development.

Newton, 32, will assume his duties March 22 but will visit Mill Valley several times before then "to get acquainted with his new job," Cunningham said. His yearly salary will be $15,600.

Newton succeeds Harvey M. Bragdon, who resigned to take the job of director of current planning for Marin County.

Planning director for Coronado since January 1969, Newton also was head of current planning in Sunnyvale, and served 15 months as a planner in Lansing, Mich.

The new planning director served in the Navy from 1957 to 1961 and then entered Michigan State University, where he graduated in 1965 with a bachelor of science degree in urban planning.

He is married and the father of two children.

Sixty applicants filed for the job. Final selection was made on the advice of a three-man screening committee, Cunningham said.

Hasty Pudding Award Goes To Carol Channing

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)—"I feel my status in the theater is secure now," said Carol Channing, smiling broadly.

She came Tuesday to accept the Hasty Pudding Theatricals' 21st annual Woman of the Year award and she wore her crimson boots for the official color of her host, Harvard University.

"I like the company I'm in. Mamie Eisenhower and Piper Laurie. It shows how cosmopolitan you are."

The award is a scroll and a replica of the original hasty pudding pot. The saucer-eyed blonde sported a gaucho outfit and toted a bag of organic health foods.

286 To Receive Bayview Certificates

San Quentin Bayview Schools will award 286 certificates and diplomas to inmates at the prison on Friday, according to Associate Warden Wayne A. Bartels.

He said the schools will present four associate of arts degrees from College of Marin, 47 literacy certificates, 47 elementary school diplomas, 34 high school diplomas, and 150 certificates for completing correspondence courses and prison vocational courses.

ART REVIEW

First Tombstones, Now Watery Graves

By LAURA DEVENDORF

This is the second chapter in our continuing saga of the Ant Hill, the funk and found art group from the University of California including Ben Blackwell, Nancy Evans, Leonard Hunter, James Pomeroy and Michael Wright, which is putting on a series of six weekly shows at the College of Marin gallery.

Last week we found the Ant Hill inventing a College of Marin burial ground. There,in what was formerly the gallery, we found eight very genuine headstones from a local tombstone factory. This week we find the tombstones have been replaced by two groups of four-inch deep pools constructed of plastic sheets draped over edgings of 2 by 4s and filled with colored water.

Still, the sentiment isn't far away. The group on the theater side of the gallery with its four neatly aligned long slim rectangles looks ominously like four watery graves. While on the entrance side of the room the grouping of wood, plastic and water reads like a leaded stained glass cross.

Again this week, this sparse an offering is all there is. And the statement that accompanies it remains the same:

"A gallery space always influences the receptivity and understanding of the works of art within it. Each show is affected differently. A work may seem more profound or whimsical, large or small, well or poorly made, etc., etc., than the same work located elsewhere, or, any two works of art may relate differently in one space than they do in another."

Decisions on how well those pools reflect the idea are as individual as each person's understanding of the words themselves. Meanwhile, on the practical side, this week's illustrations are causing some concern. They leak!

The janitors are worrying about the mess on the floor. One member of the art department is worrying about getting the artists back to fix the problem. Plus, now that the wood outlines are full of water, it has occurred that removing them will pose the same problem one would encounter on trying to get rid of an old water bed.

To make things more confused, not too many people seem to have figured the whole thing out and comments such as this are not unique, "An art show? Oh! I thought maybe the drama department was trying to economize by making their own gels."

Or, if they have gotten the message, taking pokes at the show still seems irresistible. For example, "You could lie down in them and get an instant tie-dye."

But perhaps the most to-the-point remark of all was one student's wistful comment. "I hope nobody trips."

Renaissance Instruments To Be Played

Lyn Elder of Mill Valley will perform on handmade medieval and renaissance musical instruments in a free program Sunday at 4 p.m. in the main room of the Mill Valley Public Library.

Elder, owner of the Magic Mountain Workshop in Mill Valley, will demonstrate exotic musicmakers which include a dulcimer, a psaltery, a rebec and a hurdy-gurdy. Elder will also perform a few bars on reed instruments he has made — the recorder, the krumm horn, the shawn and the rackett.

School's Racial Panel Disbands

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The city school system's Integration Advisory Committee has disbanded—on grounds it racially was imbalanced.

The 46-member panel told the San Francisco Board of Education to appoint a new group to advise on plans for total integration of the city's schools.

Committee members said it had too many whites—27 of the 46 members. They asked that the new committee reflect the city's school population—34 per cent English-speaking whites, 13 per cent Spanish-speaking; 28 per cent blacks, 14 per cent Chinese; 4 per cent Filipino; 1 per cent Japanese and 1 per cent other nonwhites.

Threats Of Hospital's Closing Off

I-J Special Report

SANFRANCISCO — Threats that the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital will be closed have been lifted — at least temporarily.

The staff of Rep. William S. Mailliard, R-Sixth District, said yesterday that the General Accounting Office of the Comptroller General's Office in Washington has ruled the Department of Health Education and Welfare has no power to close the hospital.

As an economy measure, the department had recommended closure of the San Francisco facility and seven other PHS hospitals that cost a total of $71 million a year to operate.

The San Francisco Hospital employs about 150 Marinites, paying them between $2.5 and $3 million a year, according to hospital officials.

The ruling was made at the request of Mailliard, who had urged that the hospital remain open, the congressman's office said.

The ruling left it unclear exactly who does have the power to close the hospital, the staff said.

Elliot L. Richardson, secretary of HEW, had branded the hospitals as "inefficient and outmoded." He said patients using them could be cared for in Veteran's Administration hospitals.

Bagley Asks Unemployed Parolee Aid

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A bill requiring the state to pay basic living costs of unemployed parolees was introduced today by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael.

The bill, requested by the Marin County Board of Supervisors, would require the Department of Corrections to pay the living costs of any unemployed parolee in a vocational rehabilitation or work incentive program. The state also would pay the costs, otherwise assumed as welfare by the county, if the parolee were awaiting participation in such a program.

Marin supervisors asked for the bill because of the number of parolees from San Quentin who settle in the county after their release.

Zelinsky Is Denied Restaurant Permit

Yet another attempt by downtown landowner Fred G. Zelinsky to develop a restaurant and bar at 11 Main Street has been derailed at least temporarily by the Tiburon City Council.

The council Monday voted 4-1 to deny Zelinsky a master plan amendment which would have allowed him to build the two-story restaurant and bar on property he owns adjacent to the Windjammer. Councilman Branwell D. Fanning cast the dissenting vote.

The council's decision was based on a lack of parking available for such a facility. The Council indicated it felt the addition of a restaurant would overburden what little downtown public parking now exists.

The decision drew a roar of anger from Zelinsky.

"I'm getting sick and tired of coming before this council and arguing over parking," he bellowed. "You can just forget this application and I'll leave the lot undeveloped and dangerous. I don't have to build anything."

The site of Zelinsky's proposal contains the remains of a building which was destroyed by fire several years ago.

The council's decision overturns a city planning commission decision which looked favorably on Zelinksy's proposal.

Despite his outburst, Zelinsky indicated he would file an amended proposal with the planning commission in the future after trying to find additional parking or by developing something other than a restaurant on the property — some thing which requires less parking.

Leary Sees Young Drug Culture A Passe Thing

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Dr. Timothy Leary says the time has passed for the young to "tune in, turn on and drop out" with psychedelic drugs.

Youthful radicals today should be following the "correct way" of the militant Weatherman and Black Panthers rather than "clowning or tripping," Leary advised in a videotaped interview shown here Tuesday.

"There is a time to expand and a time to contract," he said. "This is the time to tighten up, organize."

The one-time high priest of the American drug culture recanted while standing beside Eldridge Cleaver, the Black Panther leader who put Leary under virtual house arrest last month allegedly for taking too many LSD trips.

Both men are exiles in Algeria, where they fled from California authorities. Cleaver is wanted as a parole violator and fugitive from an attempted murder charge. Leary escaped jail while serving time on drug charges.

He said he was under "no coercion" by the Panthers and told Cleaver: "We're here voluntarily with you."

Cleaver, the Panthers' "minister of information" announced last month he had "busted" both Leary and his wife because it had "become very clear to me that there is something seriously wrong with both Dr. Leary and his wife's brains...I attribute this to the uncountable number of acid trips they have taken."

The two men discussed drugs and revolution for 57 minutes in the interview taped Feb. 12 in Cleaver's apartment by Glen Angell, a 27-year-old San Francisco documentary film maker who spent five days with them. Excerpts were shown over KQED, the local public television outlet.

"The people who are walking around seeking liberation through drugs are hallucinatory revolutionaries," Cleaver said. "I don't think they are helping us.

Correct Contact For New Classes

The Independent-Journal erred Monday in reporting that Mary Hanks of Belvedere should be contacted for information on registering for organic gardening classes for adults and children in Belvedere and Tiburon.

Persons wishing information on registration and fees should contact Mrs. Quentin Lewton, of 2441 Paradise Drive, Tiburon.

Four-week classes for youths will be held every other Tuesday beginning April 6 from 4 to 5 p.m., for those from ages 10 to 14 and from 5 to 6 p.m. for ages 14 to 18.

Adult classes will begin March 24 and run for six consecutive Wednesdays. Morning classes will be held from 10 a.m. to noon and evening classes from 8 to 10 p.m.

The classes will be taught by Dr. Bargyla Rateaver, a Kentfield gardening teacher, and sponsored by the Belvedere-Tiburon Committee for the Environment.

Two Natural Workshops Scheduled

Two sessions of nature workshops will begin March 1 and April 19 with first meetings to be held at the Richardson Bay Wildlife Sanctuary on Tiburon Boulevard.

The workshops, sponsored by the National Audubon Society and a group of Marin women biologists, will provide outdoor nature study for the non-biologist and general public and will include several field trips.

The workshops will be held on successive Mondays from the starting dates except April 5, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. They will be conducted by Natural Sciences Education Resources, a Ross-based group of professional biologists.

Further information on enrollment may be obtained from Nona Dennis, 69 Marlin Avenue, or Phyllis Faber, 145 Marlin Avenue, both in Mill Valley.

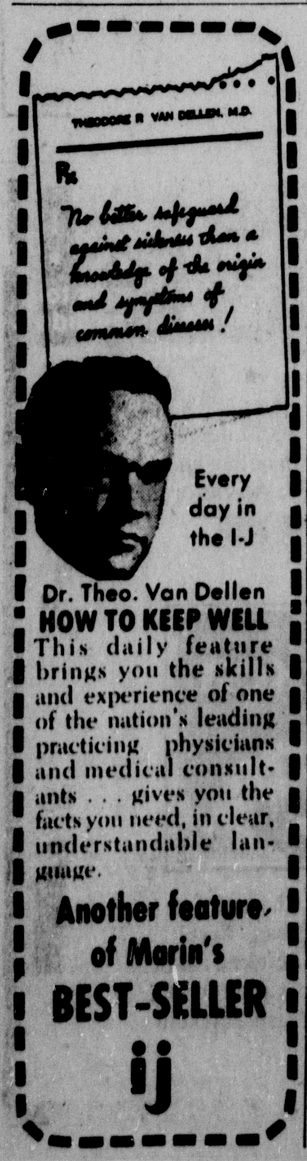
Two Treated For Injuries In Auto Accident

A Tamalpais Valley man was hospitalized and a Tennessee Valley woman treated for injuries suffered this weekend after their car ran off North San Pedro Road near China Camp.

Jerry W. Ellsberg, 32, of 522 Shoreline Highway, was reported in good condition today in the intensive care unit at Marin General Hospital with head injuries. Barbara Prosser, 27, of 457 Tennessee Valley Road, was treated and released for bruises.

The California Highway Patrol said a car driven by Ellsberg, northbound on North San Pedro Road three-tenths of a mile south of China Camp, left the road and plunged over a 20-foot enbankment, striking a large tree.

The accident occurred Saturday at 6:10 p.m., officers said.



Plans Under Way For Library Folk Dance Research Center

Plans are under way to establish a folk culture center at the Novato branch of the Marin County Library in memory of Bernice Schram. She was a leading force in folk dancing and dedicated to folk dance research.

Miss Schram, a Novato resident who died last November, was a member of Chang's International Folk Dancers Petaluma International Folk Dancers and Folk Dance Federation of California.

An area will be set aside at the new branch library now under construction for a "Bernice Schram Research Center," reported Naomi Rosenberg, a director of the research memorial.

The center will have pictures and descriptions of folk dance costumes, folk dance calendars and descriptions of folk dances.

Eventually the feasibility of stocking records and tapes will be considered, reported Mrs. Rosenberg.

Miss Schram served at Hamilton Air Force Base for 28 years and retired as supervisor of the base transportation office.

Funders are deeded for the planned center and for a plaque commemorating Miss Schram's dedication to folk dancing research, Mrs. Rosenberg said.

The intent is to create a center that will serve as a clearing house of information for folk dancers.

Contributions toward the center can be sent to "Bernice Schram Research Center" in care of Mrs. Rosenberg, 12 Kristin Lane, Novato.

Hereford cattle are named after the English county of that name.

Nuclear Defense: Teams Rule Out One-Man Error

WASHINGTON (UPI) —For want of a fail-safe system, America's civil defense emergency warning center mistakenly ordered broadcast stations from coast to coast off the air Saturday with an authenticated message signaling a national emergency.

But because of an elaborate fail-safe system —beginning with the President and reaching down to pairs of missile launch teams somewhere in America —U.S. defense planners feel certain a similar mistake will never send nuclear weapons streaking from their silos toward another country.

The civil defense National Warning Center and the North American Defense Command (NORAD) both operate out of the same huge complex buried inside Cheyenne Mountain near Colorado Springs, Colo. Strategic Air Command (SAC) missile and nuclear bomber crews receive alerts through the NORAD command post. The public gets its warnings from Civil Defense.

But NORAD and SAC operate so independently of the Civil Defense center that neither was aware of Saturday's alert to civilian radio and television stations. The way the two alert systems are set up is as different as night and day.

"The key difference is that one man, acting by himself, sent the alert Saturday," said one Pentagon official. "At NORAD, no one man can do anything by himself. It takes teams of men working together."

As a direct result of Saturday's false emergency alert, the Civil Defense warning center will get a mini-fail-safe system of its own. But it will still fall far short of the complicated procedures necessary to unsheath the fury of America's Minutemen missiles and nuclear armed SAC bombers.

UPI and AP spokesmen said Monday they would suspend testing of the Emergency Action Notification System (EANS) until proper safeguards could be worked out.

At the Colorado Springs site, center chief Louis I. Smoyer said steps have been taken to insure that no repeat performance is staged of the false national alert.

FAIL-SAFE SYSTEM — The U.S. radar defense systems designed to protect against nuclear attack are diagrammed in this UPI Newsmap. The system comprises eight fail-safe steps involving teams of men in each step which would prevent the type of one-man error as occurred Saturday.

"One is left to wonder what might happen if a real emergency arose," Griffin said. "Hopefully, we wouldn't get a routine test announcement during a real nuclear attack, but who knows?"

To fully understand how the missile fail-safe system works — and why nothing like Saturday's false alert is supposed to happen in it — step into the chain of events that would follow the appearance on radar screens of hostile missiles sweeping down on the United States.

Word would flash from NORAD to the National Military Command Center in the Pentagon —the "war room." Where the missiles came from. How many there were. Where they were aimed.

The war room would notify the President. There lies the first step in the fail-safe system.

The President, or the proper person in the chain of presidential succession if the President were incapacitated, would have to decide on a retaliatory strike. Only he holds the power to order it.

But it takes far more than a simple presidential phone call, or an appearance on television, or even a personal appearance in the war room, to order missiles launched and bombs dropped. There lies the second fail-safe step.

"Whoever sends the order has to have knowledge of an encrypted, closely controlled format," an Air Force officer said. "If it wasn't in the proper format, the missile crews would not react."

Everywhere the President goes, a secret service man follows him with a locked black box containing the current coded strike orders. No other orders will do the job.

Even if someone managed to steal the orders —or if the President for some reason transmitted them at a time when there was no attack or threat of attack —there are the third and fourth fail-safe hurdles to cross.

"Possession of the code is not enough," the Air Force officer said. "He has to get them into the correct military communications channel, and the order has to be sent over two types of systems."

Getting into the communications system means going through the Pentagon war room or one of the alternate war rooms the Department of Defense maintains. If the strike order reached the war room and took it by surprise, officers there would immediately question its validity.

Sending it over two types of communications systems might mean using a NORAD telephone line and a teletype circuit, or broadcasting it over two different military radio frequencies.

Once a valid order was issued, it might travel over one of two routes. It could be sent to the SAC command post at Omaha, Neb., and relayed from there to missile launch capsules buried in fields all over the country. Or it could be sent simultaneously to SAC headquarters and to the launch capsules.

Whichever way it went, both SAC headquarters and the missile teams would have to decode the order and verify its authenticity. This is the fifth fail-safe step.

A Minuteman missile squadron consists of five underground launch capsules, or firing posts, separated from each other by ten or more miles. Each capsule is commanded by two officers and controls 10 missiles. The officers in a pair of capsules must work closely together to launch any missiles.

"No one of them has the capability to verify the entire authenticity (of the presidential order to strike)," said the Air Force officer. "He has only a piece of it.

"No one individual has the necessary information by himself, nor does any one team of two men. It takes the entire crew of four men in two capsules."

To verify the order, the men in each firing post open two combination locks on a red strongbox fastened to the wall and each removes his own cipher to check the message. Then, if it is authentic, comes the sixth fail-safe step familiar to most civilians through movies and novels.

At each launch capsule, the two officers take keys and go to a pair of widely separated consoles. They insert their keys in locks on the consoles and turn them similtaneously. The consoles are so far apart no one man can turn both keys at the same time. If they are not turned together, the missiles fail to fire.

But there is a seventh fail-safe step before the missiles blast out of their silos. The keys in at least one other launch capsule must also be turned simultaneously, meaning that at least four men must act together.

As a safeguard against four men deliberately plotting to launch missiles, all the launch capsules in a squadron can see any firing preparations and must cooperate. Similarly, cooperation within the squadron may block an unauthorized launch. This is the eighth fail-safe step.

If the fateful hour ever comes when four or more keys are properly turned, nuclear missiles will be on their way within about half a minute. At that point there is no turning back, no system to destroy the missiles in flight.

"The odds are a billion to one against that ever happening by mistake or without the proper orders," the Air Force officer said.

As a final check against this happening, however, the Air Force has a "human reliability program" for all its missile crews. Every man is regularly investigated both professionally and personally. Family troubles, a bank account unexplainably soaring, a drinking problem —all of these would be danger signs that could indicate "a rebel on the crew."

LEARNING BY EATING

Four seventh graders at Lagunitas School get a taste of other lands by sampling native foods. The four — from left, Deanne Johnson, 12, Heidi Marden, 12, Nancy Isaac, 13, and Demetria Sunmer, 9 — were among more than 40 students who participated in a world festival at the school yesterday. The festival, created by humanities teachers Mary Anne Kolanoski and Rubin Gornbein, was designed to give the children a feeling for foreign countries. The children made their own costumes and food.

Purchase Of San Marin Club Delayed

Conceding that the status of the San Marin Club, now inoperative, is confusing, the Novato City Council postponed action last night on purchasing or leasing it.

A group of San Marin residents reportedly is negotiating for purchase of the club and a "private party" has made an offer, reported Mayor Douglas M. Merrill.

"The picture is very muddled" commented councilman Wayne Sartain.

The city parks and recreation commission had recommended that the city consider purchase or lease of the club, which has a swimming pool and tennis courts.

Parks and Recreation Director Edward W. Adams, who was absent, had submitted a memorandum that the deed of trust on the property is held by G and R Associates. Standard Investment Co. has an option to buy the club, pay the real estate commission and back taxes for a total of $240,000, but is no longer interested in purchase and is willing to transfer its interest to the city, Adams said.

Richard Kuhn, president of the San Marin Improvement Association, suggested a council postponement and said there would be a meeting of San Marin residents at San Marin High School Monday night to discuss various proposals for the club.

Councilmen also became muddled about how to proceed to investigate the possibility of purchasing a 4.6-acre park site along the south side of San Marin Drive, opposite San Mateo Way, from T. V. McGuire.

After some discussion and a reluctance to ask City Atty. Clark M. Palmer the price being sought by McGuire, the council voted 3-1 to authorize an appraisal of the site at a cost of $300 to $500.

Councilman J. Wayne Womack dissented and George C. Quesda, who explained he once worked on the site, abstained.

Womack contended that some council members knew the asking price and he felt "If one can have it others should."

Palmer advised the council it couldn't have a closed session to discuss the asking price, and offered to tell them the price.

At this point, Mayor Douglas M. Merrill said it would be up to the majority of the council to decide if they wanted to hear the price.

Councilman Wayne Sartain said he didn't believe discussing the price would be "in the best interest of the city."

Why it would not was never explained.

Match Playing Is Cause of Blaze

A 6-year-old child playing with matches in a bedroom closet caused a $7,500 fire in the George Weger home, 214 Dubois Street, San Rafael, at 5:49 p.m. yesterday, San Rafael police reported.

Damage was estimated at $2,500 to the home's contents, and $5,000 to the structure.

Conditional Nod To Spaying Clinic

The San Rafael Planning Commission last night granted conditional approval for the establishment of a spaying and neutering clinic at 738 A Street.

Chairman Joseph J. Garbarino was opposed to the clinic which had advertised that cats or dogs would be released on the same day after they have been rendered sterile.

Garbarino quoted a letter from the veterinarian Robert M. Bramman, which said that after hysterectomies there would be "certain patients who will require hospitalizations."

(The application was submitted by veterinarian John R. Sujohn, stipulates that none of the animals would be kept overnight.)

Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner recommended the commission grant approval if the noise, smell and insects be kept inside the building.

The application was approved 5-to-2 with the conditions recommended by Hotchner and an added condition that Dr. Sujohn be allowed to keep the animals overnight if he so desired. Garbarino and commissioner Jorgen V. Lunding were opposed.

The San Rafael Planning Commission also:

OUTDOOR MOVIE — Voted in favor of a suggestion that the outdoor movie on Bellam Avenue be considered for use by the Golden Gate Bridge District for bus repair and office site as it would be consistent with the zoning and land use for the area as stated in the general plan.

HOLIDAY MAGIC — Denied a use permit for Holiday Magic, 529 Jacoby Street, for construction of a warehouse and office complex of five buildings. They recommended that the application with the attached conditions as previously proposed by the planning commission be reviewed and acted upon by the city council.

TRAILERS — Approved conditionally the request for temporary office trailers to be used in conjunction with existing contractor's yard. Commissioners agreed that the use permit would expire 60 days after the city made a decision on permanent streets for that area.

SIGN — Conditionally approved a sign for the Davis Realty at 900 Mission Avenue as submitted with the understanding that when the proposed sign ordinance is in effect, the sign would then be nonconforming and would require alterations.

OFFICE — Agreed to sanction existing office use and to permit final phase of Margarita Plaza development at the Office Complex at 4380 Redwood Highway.

SIGN — Conditionally approved an architectural plan for a free-standing, interior illuminated sign to be located at 807 Francisco Boulevard. The sign would have to be 36 square feet and not the 55 square feet as proposed by the owner, Ray Willits.

STANDARD SIGN — Approved the replacement of the existing sign at Standard Oil Co. at 729 Fourth Street, with a sign 21 feet high with floodlights mounted on the new sign column.

Human Rights To Draw Up Budget

Marin County Human Rights Commission will meet in special session tomorrow night to draw up a preliminary budget request for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

The meeting will be at 8 o'clock at the home of Commissioner Frederick S. Mayer, 1053 Lea Drive, Terra Linda.

The total budget for the human rights department this year is $35,000, as compared with $51,400 last year and $40,700 the year before.

During budget sessions last year, County Administrator Alan Bruce recommended that the department be abolished as an economy move, but the Marin County Board of Supervisors decided to save it and operate it on a reduced scale.

New Status For West Marin Court

The West Marin Justice Court at Point Reyes Station is going big time.

Marin County supervisors yesterday approved a $20 revolving fund for the court so that attaches can make change for violators paying their fines.

Up to now, the practice has been for Judge David R. Baty to dig into his own pocket to make change.

Apartment Plan Passes

In approving the plans, the council required that pedestrian access be provided to Southwest Boulevard. It was also stipulated that if a new road is constructed adjacent to the property, the developers will pay half the cost.

City Mgr. Peter M. Callinan said a public hearing will be scheduled in late March or early April to determine the alignment of a future entrance roadway from Cotati to Rohnert Park. He said developers would then have a better basis on which to make plans.

The Rohnert Park City Council also:

BRIDGE — Awarded the contract to Murdoch Engineering at $52,000 for construction of a bridge over Hinebaugh Creek on Commerce Boulevard.

STUDENTS — Approved a work-study agreement with Sonoma State College. Callinan said 80 per cent of students' salaries will be paid by the federal government.

Proposal On Broader City Manager Powers

The Novato City Council last night introduced an ordinance amendment which would give the city manager broader power over hiring and firing of department heads.

As proposed the city manager could hire, fire or demote department heads, except that appointment of a city treasurer requires ratification by the city council.

Under the present ordinance the city council ratifies appointments of all department heads.

Dropped from the proposed amendment, after revision, was a provision that the city manager be granted severance pay, one month for each year of service, up to four years.

Councilman J. Wayne Womack moved that the section giving the city manager the hiring and firing power without council ratification be deleted, but there wasn't any second.

Councilman George C. Quesada moved that there be severance pay of a half a month's pay for each year of service, up to three month's pay, but there wasn't any second.

There wasn't a vote on the introduction, but Womack said he would vote against adoption of the change.

The city manager's hiring and firing powers wouldn't apply to the post of city attorney.

The Novato City Council Also:

FLOOD CONTROL INSURANCE — Received notice from the Department of Housing and Urban Development that Novato residents are eligible to obtain flood control insurance at subsidized rates through Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of San Francisco, designated by the National Flood Insurers Association as the company to service Novato.

HOUSING SURVEY — Voted 3-2 against appropriating $600 toward a survey of condition of housing in Novato with Councilman George C. Quesada contending the proposed program was a "bureaucratic boondoggle" that wouldn't provide adequate information. Mayor Douglas M. Merrill and Councilman Wayne Sartain favored the survey.

PRAYER AT MEETING — Heard a protest from Fred MacDonald of 66 Queva Vista against a proposal by Quesada that there be a denominational pray at the start of council meetins. MacDonald said any prayer wouldn't represent all divergent views including atheists and agnostics.

WESTERN HOSTS — Postponed action for two weeks on precise development plans for Phase 2 of the Western Oaks development, 87 townhouse units west of Highway 101 at the end of Redwood Boulevard, by a 3-2 vote, with Merrill and J. Wayne Womack dissenting. Sartain contended that trees that were to be saved in Phase 1 have been damaged and in danger of dying and the council should have assurance that remedial work was done before second phase work is acted upon.

SAN MARIN — Approved a land use change from apartments to single family townhouses along both sides of San Marin Drive, east of San Carlos Way toward Simmons Lane, and approved precise development plans by Standard Growth Properties for 72 townhouse units on the south side of the San Marin Drive in that area.

CAR PURCHASES — Awarded Novato Ford, lowest of four bidders, a contract to provide three cars for city staff at a cost of $5,958.

CORPORATION YARD — Consented to annexation of the city corporation yard off Davidson Street to the Novato Sanitary District.

INTERSECTION — Gave notice of intention to acquire right-of-way and make street improvements at South Novato Boulevard and Diablo Avenue and that anyone seeking a public hearing on the project must notify the city clerk by March 18.

UTILITY BOXES — Agreed that installations of above ground installations of appurtenances by the utility company and cable television franchise holders should be subject to review and approval of the planning and public works staffs.

REZONING — Introduced an ordinance to rezone lots at 1033 Second Street and 1032 Third Street from single family to apartments as requested by Jack Chernow.

WESTERN WEEKEND — Voted to appropriate an additional $1,000 to Novato Western Weekend, for a total appropriation of $2,000.

PARK PLANS — Received a letter from Loma Verde Homeowners Association endorsing plans by Marin County to develop recreation facilities at Stafford Lake.

POLICE SERVICES — Opposed unanimously Marin County's hiring of a criminal justice coordinator to study the feasibility of consolidation of police agencies in Marin, and postponed taking a stand on consolidation of police services until further study.

BUDGET CHANGE — Established a policy that the capital improvement budget will be administered through the general funds on an annual basis, and transferred $70,292 from the capital improvement fund to the general fund.

PREZONING — Introduced an ordinance to pre-zone 20.5 acres in the unincorporated area south of Center Road and East of Eucalyptus Avenue for single family residential along Sun Lane and limited agricultural along Eucalyptus Avenue.

MOBILE HOME AREA — Introduced an ordinance to prezone 31.5 acres in the unincorporated area east of the Marin Valley Mobile Country Club park, as requested by Marin Valley Mobile Country Club.

Townhouse Cluster Plan Hit

A proposal for a cluster of hilltop townhouses overlooking Oleander Drive, that at first appeared favorable to the San Rafael Planning Commission last night, was vehemently opposed and delayed by a group of residents whose homes surround the site.

The plan, as proposed by the Pell Development Co., which has tried unsuccessfully since 1964 to develop the site, would arrange the 70 townhouses into small clusters. As explained by the architect, Richard Omsted, they would be sold individually at $30,000 to people with moderate incomes.

The residents living in the shadow of the hill, which is already scarred from its former use as a quarry for rock and fill, said they had been notified of the proposal only a few days ago and had objected that the planning commission take any action without having notified them.

Omsted said he had called for a meeting of the residents in that area earlier but only five persons attended, but admitted to a charge that the meeting had not been properly advertised.

A petition expressing the residents concerns and signed by 120 of the residents of Oleander Drive and Blossom Lane was presented to the commissioners by Richard LeKander of 304 Orange Blossom Lane.

He said that the proposal did not consider increased traffic control and safety for the area as there was only one route proposed for the development.

The residents, he said, were concerned about erosion, landslides and falling rocks, as the proposal did not provide for any retaining walls.

He urged that the commission consider the area for a park site but was told by chairman Joseph J. Garbarino that the City of San Rafael had no money to buy the site.

On hearing that the planning director's staff had recommended the commission approve the proposal, Anthony Marcelli of 285 Orange Blossom Lane said: "I don't think the planner director is representing the people who are already living in the area . . . " you ought to give our proposals consideration as well as the architects."

Garbarino said that Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner only made the recommendations after careful study, "we are your true representatives and suggest that another meeting be held of the residents concerned and the developer."

Commissioners unanimously agreed to review the proposal again at the March 9 meeting.

Concern To Kidnapping Is Voted

Novato City Council, shaken be the kidnapping of four residents by an escapee from San Quentin Prison, called last night for measures to avoid a reoccurance.

Mayor Douglas M. Merrill, seated where only a few hours before, the kidnap victims held a press conference, spoke of the council's concern.

In the past few weeks there have been eight or nine escapees from a "particular program" at the prison, which he viewed as a serious threat to the community, the mayor said.

The council should seek appropriate remedial measures to avoid what has happened," Merrill contended.

The results of the operations at San Quentin "are something less than acceptable to the community," he said.

The council asked City Mgr. Charles A. Brown and Police Chief Allen V. Klemme to prepare a resolution on the matter for council action Tuesday.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —Mrs. June R. Becker wants $36,750 for a kiss—and she was only a bystander.

She has sued a pleasure boat skipper and his woman acquaintance for that amount on grounds their kisses led to an accident in which she was injured.

Mrs. Becker, 50, a Sacramento divorcee, sued David A. Borth of Stockton and Helen L. Harris of Sacramento. She asked damages for a broken leg suffered July 11 when Borth's boat struck a tree along the bank of a deep water channel.

School's 'Modular Scheduling' Praised, Scorned; No Action

By JEFF GREER

San Rafael High School's experiment in "modular scheduling" has helped the good students, may have worsened the lot of poor students, and possibly has strained school-community relations, it was reported to the San Rafael Board of Education last night.

However, both students and faculty members urged that the program be tested for at least two years.

Board chairman Herman L. Childress cut off the discussion after an hour. No formal action was taken on altering the program; nor was there any indication the test authorized last spring would not continue at least for the rest of this school year.

David Plotkin, student representative for San Rafael High on the board, praised the flexible scheduling as giving more free time for students and teachers to become better acquainted, said it made more courses available, offered more resource centers and provided more free time for students to study, chat and eat.

On the minus side, Plotkin said "only a minority of students have benefited by learning self-discipline" and the program is "a community relations flop" because the free time and open campus have strained neighborhood tempers.

"The failure is the people involved, not the system," he suggested.

"The system is worth it; given another year or a year and a half, students and the community can work out their problems," the teen-age trustee argued.

Margaret Tierney, social science instructor and modular scheduling steering committee spokesman, said 26 teachers polled after the fall semester echoed many of Plotkin's findings.

The teachers felt the experiment in differing class lengths and increased free time lessened tension in the classroom, allowed teaching technique experiments and made some teachers feel "more successful," she said.

The teachers' critiques uncovered a long list of shortcomings, she said. These included complaints that the six-period day still was too rigid, that "underinvolved students were more alienated than ever," and that smoking, vandalism and litter were in the rise.

"It's much easier to pinpoint shortcomings than success," she noted.

Member Carl J. Brown reported surveying other school districts testing the modular schedule idea. He reported near unanimity that the campus should be closed for at least the first year to prevent neighborhood trouble during students' free time.

"The board's got to remember the test needs more than one year," he argued. "The board's got to have a thick skin."

One thing that he found had been ignored was that much of the community relations problem was caused by undesirable outsiders mingling with students near the campuses, Brown added.

Principal Alan Ellsberg agreed, saying that teachers patrolling the area "found a lot of pretty seedy looking characters. Even with a closed campus . . . it's a good market for those who want to push drugs, or are attracted by a lot of young people."

Member Lawrence I. Kramer declared he wanted to see a three-year test, but with changes made as needed.

Crash Victim 'Fair To Poor'

Jerry W. Ellsberg, 32, of 522 Shoreline Highway, Tamalpais Valley, was reported in "fair to poor" condition today in the intensive care unit of Marin General Hospital, with head injuries suffered Saturday evening in a highway accident.

The California Highway Patrol reported that Ellsberg's car plunged off North San Pedro Road south of China Camp, hitting a large tree below a 20-foot embankment.

A passenger in Ellsberg's car, Barbara Prosser, 27, of 457 Tennessee Valley Road, was treated for bruises and released Saturday, the hospital said.

Discordant Note On Safety Issues

Sweet and sour notes sounded over safety problems at last night's meeting of the San Rafael Board of Education.

Members harmoniously chorused "aye" to plans by music director Hugo Rinaldi, to convert a once-condemned school bus into a mobile music classroom for the district's nine elementary schools.

But they rang a harsh bell on delays in correcting safety hazards at Terra Linda High School.

The bus, with chairs and music stands for 14 pupils learning to play stringed instruments, will take the classes out of elementary schools' faculty lounges — and in some cases out of "hallways near latrines," Rinaldi reported. "There, the traffic is tremendous." Board and audience members laughed.

The 30-foot long bus was one of six retired for failing to meet California Highway Patrol safety tests several years ago, Dist. Supt. John F. Plank explained. He said district mechanics had refurbished it to meet standards.

Meanwhile, district maintenance chief John Thomson was scolded for not acting sooner on reported safety hazards in Terra Linda High's gymnasium.

George Starn, chairman of the Terra Linda High physical education department, wrote the board that students risked cuts from faulty lighting in the showers, that heavy steel bleachers werein hazardous condition, that tile around the pool was dangerously slippery, and that electrical outlets near the pool were risky because they lacked proper covers.

"The thing that concerns me is that this thing is coming from the wrong source," board member Lawrence I. Kramer declared. "You should be coming to us to correct this," he told Thomson, "not waiting u til Mr. Starn comes to us."

Charles L. Condrotte, distri business manager, said th work could be ordered imm diately to replace the defecti lighting fixtures, instead budgeting for the work ne year as previously planne The job is expected to co about $800, he said.

School maintenance crew have already roughened th slippery tiles with sandpape

Board members ordered im mediate action to correct th bleacher, glass and shock ha zards, and asked for a report a their next regular meeting.

35-Cent Lunches For Two Schools After Easter Break

Pupils of two San Rafael elementary schools will be offered 35-cent lunches after the Easter vacation, board of education members decided last night.

The test lunches will be the first food service at the two schools — Laurel Dell and Hartzell.

The board's unanimous decision was based on a poll of 4,758 families in the district, in which 1,784 said they favored the bag lunch program and only 354 opposed the idea.

District Supt. John F. Plank reported that predicted lunch sales at Hartzell would be 446 per week and at Laurel Dell would be 416 per week at the start. Plank said the lunch program was planned by food consultants Flambert and Flambert, as part of a $2,450 survey they made of the district cafeteria operations.

One parent in the audience objected that the parents polled were not told that the sandwiches to be served in the lunch would be "cold storage — made 24 hours in advance." She also claimed that Novato schools "had gone down the drain for the 45-cent lunches."

Another mother objected that she could pack lunches for less than 35 cents for each of her children.

Plank said menus for the lunches would be announced at least a week in advance, and that the test program would last either a month, or to the end of the semester.

The San Rafael Board of Education also:

ADJOURNED — Continued the conference portion of last night's session to 7:30 p.m. March 2 for a briefing session with candidates for board seats at the April 20 election.

LEGISLATORS — Continued to the March 2 session a discussion of what legislative policies would be brought up at the Marin County School Boards Association meeting with Sen. Peter H. Behr, and Assemblyman William T. Bagley, both R-San Rafael, on March 25 in Novato.

CALENDAR — Tabled adoption of the elementary and high school districts' 1971-72 calendar until Plank has more opportunity to gather data on other Marin County districts' calendars.

POLICY — Unanimously adopted a board policy statement on teachers' and pupils' political activities on campus, as drafted by Richard V. Godino, assistant county counsel.

ADULT CLASSES — Approved a list of courses offered for the spring quarter adult education program. A total of 1,150 adults registered in 50 classes in the fall quarter, the board was told.

TRAVEL — Granted Terra Linda High School teacher Al Gautrad permission to travel to Washington, D.C., March 4 through 7, to attend a Model United Nations conference. The district will pay $150 plus the cost of a substitute teacher. The same trip was approved last year.

HIRINGS — Approved appointments of Gary Carroll and Robert Goodrich to custodian positions at $3.11 per hour; Edward Tait to a custodian II job at $2,395 for the rest of the school year; Joan Dooley as a primary grades teacher at $4,326 for the rest of the year; George Grist as an instructional aide at $2.50 per hour and Judith Sherman as an instructional aide at $2.62 an hour.

COACH — Appointed Bill Ronney as swimming coach at San Rafael High School at an extra pay rate of $519 for the school year.

PERSONNEL — Granted leaves of absence to San Rafael High French teacher Caterina Bess, counselor Jules Chouree, Bahia Vista third grade teacher Elinor Parsons and district psychologist Doris Pick, and accepted the resignation of bus driver Sondra Womack.

LAUREL DELL — Approved a change order for $1,196 in extra work needed on a Laurel Dell School construction project after relocation of a ramp, filling of a recently discovered forgotten well and other changes were found to be needed. Plank said the district's inspectors reported the building will be ready for use by next September.

PRESCHOOL — Authorized Plank to begin work on applications for a three-year federally funded program to correct language problems in preschool children. Member Lawrence I. Kramer warned that the program would be a forerunner of far-reaching and possible costly changes in district educational operations.

Marin Neighbor's Defense Program Praised

By JEFF GREER
(Last of three articles)

While he deplores Marin County's lack of disaster planning, state civil defense official William W. Ward says the county's neighbor — San Francisco — has "the best plan we've seen to date."

"It's no accident," Ward told the Independent-Journal. He gave much of the credit to Edward P. Joyce, the city-county director of the San Francisco Disaster Corps.

Joyce formerly worked in the state civil defense program as a planner, Ward explained. He said that Mayor Joseph L. Alioto, showing himself "aware of his responsibilities," hired Joyce for the disaster job early in his regime.

San Francisco's state of readiness has been accomplished despite statewide budget cuts in similar planning, Ward noted. As director of the state's Region II office responsible for all Bay Area counties, Ward added that the state's budget writers have used a "cut squeeze and trim" policy on his office, too.

"But the (recent Los Angeles) earthquake has alerted legislators to the need for disaster preparedness," Ward optimistically added.

San Francisco disaster chief Joyce spent all last week in Los Angeles, both helping and observing how the disaster was handled. He left his assistant, Louis Cambou, in charge in San Francisco.

Cambou reported that city and county department heads meet regularly with utility firm officials, Red Cross directors and other emergency agencies.

"Mayor Alioto himself attended the meeting last week, and stayed for more than 20 minutes. That's fantastic, with his busy schedule," Cambou claimed.

At the regular meetings, the department heads review their staff preparedness, and adjust responsibilities as the need arises. The disaster program makes only limited use of volunteers, Cambou explained.

Most of the enrolled volunteers are members of the police or fire department reserves — or amateur radio hobbyists who maintain an emergency network for the hospital.

San Francisco itself owns a mobile radio van capable of communicating on many frequencies. The van "is sent automatically to every fourth-alarm fire" to keep it and its crew in practice, Cambou said. The Disaster Corps headquarters is manned 24 hours a day by one or more of the city-county's nine paid disaster workers, Cambou said.

The headquarters keeps a plentiful supply of printed material on hand to help citizens prepare for disaster or know what to do in case of trouble.

All of the material stresses that the citizen should avoid using the telephone except to call for help in emergencies. Rather, the citizen is urged to depend on radio and television broadcasts for public instructions. The disaster office has installed extensive communication links with all the mass media headquarters in San Francisco, Cambou explained.

As to Marin's problems, County Administrator Alan Bruce said his office is arranging a meeting between the Marin County Counsel's office and all the cities' attorneys, to work out agreements on jurisdictional responsibility for disaster planning.

Bruce's assistant, Thomas F. Campanella, said he and James V. Burdick, county deputy director for civil defense, will be holding a parallel meeting with city managers and administrators "in the next few days."

Each of the cities is responsible for getting its own disaster plan approved by the state. Under the new law, the county's plan now in preparation would be put into operation if a disaster were too much for a city's facilities, Bruce said.

The board of supervisors has not seen the draft plan worked out by Burdick and Bruce's office. If the tentative plan wins interim state approval — a probability reported in the first article in this series — much work remains to be done before the plan is accepted in toto.

Each of the department heads given disaster responsibilities will be required to flesh out "annexes" to detail their specific roles in the skeleton of the overall county plan, Burdick said.

The supervisors' previous reluctance to meet state and federal demands to prepare for a nuclear holocaust apparently has evaporated in light of the new willingness to stress planning for natural disasters, Burdick reported.

"I have more hope than I've ever had" that Marin County and its citizens soon can become prepared for trouble, Burdick declared.

Marin's officialdom, verbally at least, has accepted its "moral and ethical responsibility" to plan for disaster.

Whether the public will do likewise is anyone's guess.

A clipping from the Independent-Journal of Jan. 10, 1964 may have told the tale for tomorrow as well as a decade ago:

"Corte Madera civic and neighborhood organizations told Councilman Charles F. Pendleton and town officials they could not agree there was any real necessity to form a disaster commission."

Two Charges Are Dismissed

Charges of possessing marijuana and petty theft against Guy Brodnax of San Rafael were dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court.

Judge Robert A. Smallman dismissed the case at the request of the district attorney's office which reported there was insufficient evidence to proceed.

Brodnax was arrested Jan. 24 at Mayfair Market in San Rafael on suspicion of shoplifting. Police said they later found a plastic bag containing suspected pot in his possession.

High Court Upholds News Media

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court further broadened the immunity of news media from libel actions by public officials and candidates today.

In a new series of opinions based on the precedent-setting New York Times libel decision of 1964, the Court threw out libel awards against the Concord, N.H., Daily Monitor, the Ocala, Fla., Star-Banner and Time Magazine.

The Court held in the newspaper cases that a charge of criminal conduct against an official or candidate seeking office was always relevant to his fitness for office even if the allegation proved to be untrue.

Population Rise

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — Sweden's population increased to 8,093,000 in 1970, but it was not because of a higher birth rate, says the Swedish Census Bureau.

Keeping Cotati's Rural Look Strongly Supported

By BONNIE BARD

Planning consultants last night urged that Cotati maintain its small town, rural atmosphere and offered preliminary suggestions on how it might be accomplished by making the plaza the focal point.

Representatives of Herman D. Ruth Associates of Berkeley made the presentation at what was to have been a special joint meeting of the city council and planning commission. However, only Mayor Alfred Falletti and Planning Commissioner Kenneth Garner attended.

The planners said the plaza park, surrounded by the hexagonal street pattern, should become one of the focal points of the community. The report noted that East Cotati Avenue and Old Redwood Highway intersect in the center of the plaza and recommended that in future years that all traffic be routed around the hexagonal pattern.

"Much of Cotati is now designed on the scale of the automobile. More attention needs to be given to humans. Reclaiming the plaza will be an excellent start in this direction," the report said. "Only then will people be encouraged to walk on the plaza, to eat lunch there, to sit in the shade and to congregate there with others."

Planners also urged that a physical openness be retained and that future development be strictly controlled to avoid conventional grid-pattern subdivisions. The report also remarks that excellent views of the Sonoma mountains should be protected for all to enjoy.

In looking at problems of Cotati, the planners said that scattered development has provided for less than maximum efficiency. They said the city services and traffic flow had suffered because of the scattering.

A shortage of housing was also listed as a major problem, but was accompanied by a warning to regulate housing patterns closely.

"Unless Cotati takes affirmative action before development has begun, conventional subdivisions and strips of low-quality student apartments will be built, spoiling one of the pleasant aspects of the city, its openness and small town atmosphere," the report said.

The report by the citizens advisory committee followed closely with thoughts of the planners and suggested that light industry and commercial development be encouraged to improve Cotati's economic condition. The citizens, however, said that heavy industry should be discouraged.

The committee also proposed a better use for the plaza area and suggested the city establish architectural control over development there. It was also recommended that the city acquire the Cotati Women's Club building at the plaza for use as a community recreation center.

Nixon Proposes Powers To Protect Consumers

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon asked Congress today for legislation empowering the government to ban hazardous consumer products, regulate warranties and quickly stop allegedly deceptive advertising and sales practices.

In a consumer message to Capitol Hill, Nixon proposed federal standards for testing of certain products so buyers would know whether an item met federal standards.

Nixon also asked for a study aimed at creating a "small claims" system that would arbitrate disputes between a consumer and a store or manufacturer. But he maintained his opposition to a Democratic proposal under which buyers could band together in "class action" lawsuits.

Nixon said he would propose a federal consumer advocacy function among existing departments to take the buyer's side in arguments before regulatory agencies. Democrats have proposed creation of a separate federal consumer advocacy agency, and Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., has proposed creation of a separate Cabinet department for consumers.

Nixon promised "new and better methods for inspecting foods" by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and said he would issue an executive order reinforcing the powers of the White House consumer affairs office, headed by Virginia H. Knauer.

Although broader than his own consumer proposals that foundered in Congress last year, Nixon's message appeared certain to spark a new battle with congressional Democrats who have introduced consumer legislation they consider much stronger than the President's.

"In today's market place," Nixon said, "the consumer often finds himself confronted with what seems an impenetrable complexity in many of our consumer goods, in the advertising claims that surround them, the merchandising methods that purvey them and the means available to conceal their quality."

"The result is a degree of confusion that often confounds the unwary, and too easily can be made to favor the unscrupulous, Nixon said, "I believe new safeguards are needed, both to protect the consumer and to reward the responsible businessman."

Nixon proposed a consumer product safety act similar to that pushed by Democrats, but said it should be run by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., has proposed a separate consumer product safety agency.

Under Nixon's proposal, HEW would set mandatory safety standards for products, and ban any that were judged too hazardous.

He proposed legislation empowering the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to get court injunctions that would immediately halt allegedly deceptive sales or advertising practices. Under present law, the practice can continue until the case is adjudicated, a process which sometimes takes years.

Nixon's proposed warranty act would authorize FTC to require full disclosure, in simple language, of warranty and guaranty terms. It would prohibit warranty disclaimers under which the manufacturer uses small print to protect himself against consumer claims.

The product testing proposal would provide for development of test methods, product by product, and let manufacturers advertise test results when they are in compliance with federal standards.

Nixon said he still opposed creation of a separate federal agency to act as the consumer's advocate in regulatory disputes on subjects such as fraud and utility rates. But he said such advocates are needed and might be placed within the FTC. He promised a specific proposal after April 20.

Nixon proposed new powers for the Justice Department to crackdown on fraudulent practices, with penalties for violation doubled to $10,000.

Spate Of Consumer Bills Vie For Congressional Attention

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., introduced legislation today that would reform the nation's auto insurance system so an accident victim would receive almost complete compensation without regard to who was at fault in the accident.

He said under the present system only 14 cents of every dollar paid for auto insurance goes to victims of accidents. Lawyers collect $1.1 billion in legal fees fighting auto liability cases which occupy nearly a fifth of state courts' time, creating a tremendous backlog in the nation's courtrooms, he said.

Hart's bill was one of a number of consumer-interest measures offered in Congress today in advance of President Nixon's message on consumer legislation.

Among the other bills were:

—A measure by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., under which the Federal Trade Commission would be required to impose "strong, fair and rational rules on companies which offer warranties or guarantees for their products. "Too many manufacturers and retailers have been playing the warranty game abusively and with impunity," Magnuson said.

—Another Magnuson bill to create a national product safety agency "for the comprehensive policing of unsafe products wherever they may be found." It grows out of a five year study by the National Commission on Product Safety.

—A third Magnuson measure that would allow a few consumers to sue a manufacturer or business on behalf of all consumers who feel they have been cheated. This "class action" bill was opposed by the administration when it was introduced by Magnuson in the last session of Congress.

—A bill from Sen. James B. Pearson, R-Kan., to require "unit pricing" of food and other commodities covered by the Fair Packaging and Labeling act. Under unit pricing, a grocer has to show the price of a package and how much it works out to be per ounce, pint or other common unit of measure so buyers can compare prices of competing products in different sized containers.

—A bill from Sen. William B. Spong Jr., D-Va., imposing penalties of up to six months imprisonment or fines up to $10,000 for making false statements in advertising products, services, systems or devices which are designed to prevent or control the emission of pollution agents. Spong said many industries are placing more emphasis on advertising their pollution abatement activities than they are on abatement itself.

—A bill from Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., under which the federal government would devise safety standards—and states would be encouraged to adopt them—covering summer camps attended by seven million children each year. Ribicoff said most states have lax standards on camps and 19 have none at all.

Under Hart's "no fault" insurance bill, a victim would be compensated for all out-of-pocket expenses for medical treatment, rehabilitation and incidentals resulting from an auto accident as well as 85 per cent of his lost income, up to $1,000 a month, for 30 months. Deaths would be compensated by a $30,000 payment.

The present auto insurance system, Hart said in remarks prepared for the Senate, demands that some person take the blame for each accident.

Infant Flown To His Mother

HONOLULU (UPI) — The baby boy found in a trash container of an airplane lavatory was to be flown to his mother in Guam today.

Mrs. Rade Awane of the state Department of Social Services said the baby is in excellent condition.

The mother is Vawna Scricomolscip, 28, a Thai national who gave birth on a TWA flight from Los Angeles to Honolulu Feb. 15. The woman told authorities she put her son in the trash container because she thought the infant was stillborn.

The mother has been in Guam memorial Hospital recuperating from the birth.

The Elephant Seal Thriving

The big seals—some are 16 feet long and weigh 5,000 pounds—were threatened with extermination a century ago when they were hunted for their fine-quality oil.

The State Fish and Game Department reported Tuesday that 10,000 of the elephant seals are living on islands off the Southern California and Mexican coasts.

Nixon Stops Just Short Of Freezes

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon, proclaiming an emergency in the construction industry, has suspended a depression-era law originally enacted to prevent pay-cutting in the building trades. He stopped short, however, of imposing a widely rumored freeze on construction wages and prices.

The President's action was the mildest of the anti-inflation alternatives available to him. It means federal or federally assisted contracts let from now on will not require contractors to pay "prevailing" local wage rates to plumbers, carpenters and other construction workers. Prevailing wage rates usually are the highest union-negotiated scale in the area involved.

It may be months before the action starts showing up at the paycheck level, but criticism from organized labor was immediate. AFL-CIO President George Meany said "it is an open invitation to unscrupulous employers to exploit workers by competitive undermining of fair wages and labor standards."

"We consider it unfair. We resent it: We think construction workers do not deserve to be treated in an arbitrary, one-sided fashion," Meany added. Edward J. Carlough, president of the Sheet Metal Workers Union, predicted the nation's 3.5 million construction workers would be "angry as hell."

Of the $90 billion worth of construction slated this year, $25 billion involved federal or federally assisted funds and was covered by the now suspended Davis-Bacon Act of 1931. It was not known how much of the $25 billion already was contracted for.

Existing contracts will not be changed and ones for which bids have already been submitted will not have to be re-bid. And although builders bidding on government work are now freed of the legal wage requirement, many still will have to pay going wage rates if they hope to hire workers.

Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson conceded the effect would not be immediate; but he said the action will eventually dampen construction industry wages.

Nixon said he realized that seasonal and economic fluctuations led construction workers to seek higher wages. But he said higher wages only have fanned inflation and resulted in a building trades unemployment rate that was twice the national average last year.

"Government programs which contribute to excessive wage and price increases must be modified or rescinded in periods of inflation," Nixon said.

Administration officials hinted all last week Nixon would use the authority Congress gave him last year to freeze wages and prices in construction. Hodgson carried that threat to the annual meeting of the AFL-CIO in Miami Beach.

But Hodgson said Tuesday the labor leaders were firmly opposed to the administration singling out construction for special regulations.

Asked why Nixon rejected the freeze proposal, Hodgson said: "He simply did not want to force government wage and price controls on a reluctant group . . . I believe the President has made it clear that he simply does not want to impose wage and price controls."

But the administration did not close the door on the possibility of future controls. Treasury Secretary John B. Connally urged the House Banking Committee to approve legislation extending the President's authority to impose controls beyond the scheduled March 31 expiration date.

Innocent Pleas To Growing Pot

Jack Martin Kelly, 22, and Ruth M. Herr, 30, both of 360 Woodside Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, have pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing and cultivating marijuana.

A preliminary hearing has been set for March 4.

The pair was arrested Feb. 2 when drug agents raided their residence with a search warrant obtained after marijuana plants were allegedly seen growing near the door of the house.

Jury Finds Hub Man Innocent of Burglary

The jury deliberated one hour and a half before finding that Botai did not burglarize a residence at 10 Meadow Way, Fairfax, Dec. 9.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Help Your Heart: Consume Less Calories, Fats, Cholesterol

Evidence has shown that the high death rate from coronary heart disease (especially in men under 65) stems from too much cholesterol in the blood, hypertension, heavy cigaret smoking, obesity, diabetes, sedentary living tensions and heredity. Many studies involving large numbers of people are being conducted in this country and elsewhere on whether the death rate from coronary heart disease and stroke can be lowered by reducing these high-risk factors.

ENCOURAGING results have followed the intake of fewer calories and less cholesterol and animal (saturated) fats. Polyunsaturated fats or vegetable oils (with the exception of coconut oil) are added to replace the saturated fats removed from the diet.

Clinical studies supported by the American Heart Association and our government have outlined methods to prevent atherosclerotic diseases. These investigators are doing their best to get the food industry to make available leaner meats and a greater variety of processed meats, along with dairy products, frozen desserts and baked goods that are low in saturated fats, cholesterol and calories. In addition, they want people to modify their eating habits in regard to the five major sources of fat — meats, dairy products, eggs, bakery items, and table and cooking fats.

IN ESSENCE this means:

1. Lean cuts of beef, lamb, pork, veal, poultry, and fish. Visible fat should be removed and the food should be broiled or baked.

2. Fat-modified processed meats.

3. Limiting the intake of cholesterol-rich organ meats and shellfish.

4. Use skim milk and fat modified dairy products.

5. Avoid egg yolk, bacon, lard and suet.

6. Use salad and cooking oils, new soft margarines and shortenings low in saturated fats.

7. Avoid butter, margarine and shortenings high in saturated fats, such as coconut oil.

8. Avoid candies high in saturated fats.

9. Use more grains, fruits, vegetables and legumes.

10. Use fat-modified baked goods — cookies, cakes, sweet rolls, doughnuts, crullers and pies. Avoid pastries rich in saturated fat and cholesterol (loaded with butter and cream).

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

GIVING UP COFFEE

N. C. writes: I am trying to give up coffee but develop a severe headache when I don't have a cup in the morning. Have you any suggestions?

REPLY

As a rule, one cup in the morning does no harm. If you have a good reason for giving up coffee, stop drinking it and, in time, the headache will disappear.

HEAD STANDS

W. B. writes: Will standing on the head permit a better flow of blood to the brain?

REPLY

It may but it could also distrub the blood flow returning to the heart. The circulation to the head is designed for bipeds who stand upright.

CYSTS ON WRIST

G. H. writes: Do ganglions on the wrist come from hard manual labor?

REPLY

The cause of these small cysts is no known. Ganglions are connected to the tendon sheaths and they develop in persons of all occupations.

Today's Health Hint — To the maladjusted, alcohol is a socially-accepted means of escape from fears and anxieties.

FBI Talk Draws Bomb Threat At Tamalpais High

Agent Harold Leggett of the Federal Bureau of Investigation was discussing the bureau's career opportunities with about 75 students in Room 21 of the business education department when the threatening phone call came at 10:18 a.m.

A male voice said a bomb was set to go off in Room 21 and ended the call with the slogan "power to the people," police said.

The room was evacuated and police searched it. In the speaker's podium they found a device made of a metal pipe, with switches, batteries and wires taped to it, containing a white powder that looked like salt.

Officers removed the "bomb" from the building, then called the U.S. Army's bomb disposal unit from the Presidio of San Francisco. The bomb squad dismantled the device and labeled it a phony.

States Would Be Split By Time Zones

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe has asked Congress to amend the 1966 Uniform Time Law so that any state divided by two time zones can observe different times in the different zones.

The law now says only one time zone can be observed throughout any one state. States containing more than one time zone include Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Florida, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Idaho, Texas, Oregon, Alaska and Kansas.

Residential Zoning For Novato Site

The Novato Planning Commission has recommended planned residential zoning for a 15.4-acre site east of the north campus site of the College of Marin.

Planners noted that the parcel was a portion of an area which had a "key position" in respect to the adjacent college site.

Commissioners Monday night recommended rezoning from limited agricultural to planned residential single family as requested gy Redwood Land and Investment Co.

The Novato Planning Commission also:

SAN MARIN PLAN — Recommended that the San Marin master plan be changed from multiple-family to single-family townhouse on five lots on the east side of San Andreas Drive between San Marin Drive and Andreas Court, as requested by Standard Investment Co.

CONDOMINIUM PLANS — Approved precise development plans for a 16-unit condominium complex on the east side of San Andreas Drive between San Marin Drive and San Andreas Court and for a three-unit apartment building at the northeast corner of San Andreas Drive and San Andreas Court.

REZONING — Recommended rezoning 8.88 acres on the east side of Marin Valley Drive, south of Bolling Drive, from Highway commercial to planned residential as requested by Myron Kaplan.

Protection Of Mountain Lions Asked

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, yesterday introduced legislation to save California's last remaining mountain lions from probable extinction.

Behr's bill would prohibit the use of dogs in hunting the vanishing lions.

The senator said the effect of his bill would be to bar hunting of the lions because dogs were the "only effective way to hunt them." Hunters use the dogs to track and tree lions, then shoot the treed lions.

He said the state Fish and Game Commission has estimated that only 600 mountain lions are left in the state. Since last July, he added, 48 lion kills in the state were confirmed by the Department of Fish and Game.

"At this rate, it will not be long before all remaining lions are killed," Behr said.

He said his bill fell short of an absolute prohibition on hunting, but that he had decided to try a less restrictive bill to help the measure pass.

Hearing On Flood Plan March 10

Depsite a Mill Valley plea for more time, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will proceed as planned with a public hearing March 10 on proposed flood control methods for Arroyo Corte Madera Del Presidio.

Corps officials have decided that, because several thousand fliers were sent to residents, politicians and businessmen, it is too late to call off the hearing.

On Feb. 15, the Mill Valley City Council voted to ask the corps to delay the hearing for two or three months to give the council time to set up a committee to study the creek and come up with a solution to ease flooding.

That solution, once adopted by the council, would be Mill Valley's official position on flood control and would be presented to the corps at the delayed hearing.

But the request reached the corps too late, and the March 10 meeting will take place as scheduled, at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Park School.

In the fliers sent to interested parties, District Engineer Col. Charles R. Roberts sets down the choices: do nothing, construct a concrete channel, build a bypass culvert to handle flood waters or floodproof some buildings and remove others.

Each plan has its advantages, he said, "A concrete channel is undesirable for environmental, ecological and aesthetic reasons but is one of the least expensive solutions; the diversions will cost more but putting the culvert underground will leave the stream in its natural state; uprooting the people who live and work (along the GCC creek) preserves the environment but would cause a great deal of personal stress."

Roberts invited all interested persons to attend the hearing and contribute to the planning of the project. "We need the help of those who live in Mill Valley to reach a solution which represents a consensus," he said.

Labor Supports Antiwar Bill

The Marin County Central Labor Council has voted support for a bill now before the state legislature to exempt California servicemen from fighting in an undeclared war.

According to the North Bay Labor Journal, the council "placed itself squarely against" the war in Southeast Asia as well.

The Journal said the council agreed to send letters to three Marin County supervisors commending them for their support of the bill authored by Assemblyman John Vasconcellos; D-Campbell. The three supervisors are Michael Wornum, Peter R. Arrigoni and Arnold M. Baptiste.

Hiring On Agenda Of Strawberry Board

Hiring of a building manager and recreation supervisor and a custodian will be discussed when the Strawberry Recreation District board holds a special meeting at 6:30 p.m. today at the new community building.

Also on the agenda is setting of a date for a formal dedication of the building, according to Clerk Jeanne Heick.

This is the kind of story I like to write.

You probably read about his Herculean performance in College of Marin's 69-66 victory over Hartnell College of Salinas in their opening track and field meet of the season last Friday.

Cain merely contributed 26 points to the Marin upset. Besides anchoring the victorious mile relay team, he won the high hurdles, 440-yard run, the intermediate hurdles and the triple jump and placed third in the long jump.

Now, you can imagine how exhausting this would be. Especially when you realize that Mr. Cain will reach his 30th birthday on March 25! Yep, he's the senior citizen of junior college track. Heck, when I was 29 I spent most of the time with my rotund posterior firmly in a rocking chair.

Said Bailey: "During the meet Ted came up to me and asked how the score was going. When I told him it was pretty close, he told me he was going to enter the triple jump, although he hadn't tried that event since high school at Drake in 1961! And darned if he didn't WIN the thing. That's the type of a dedicated competitor and team man he is."

Cain is a quiet, modest type. Last season he was a wide receiver on the Marin football squad, although he sat out the latter part of the season with a knee injury.

Besides school work and track, he coaches basketball at Del Mar School in Tiburon. He is majoring in physical education and will graduate from Marin next June.

A native of San Rafael and a graduate of Drake, Class of 1961, Cain worked for a time in a cannery and then became a missionary for the Mormon Church. Before entering the Army he spent a year pursuing his education at Santa Rosa Junior College.

In the Army for two and one-half years, Ted first went to Officers' Training School and then to Vietnam for a year as a First Lieutenant in the Military Police. During the war Cain won a Purple Heart for a shrapnal wound in the back and also received a Bronze Star for what he modestly says was ". . . almost nothing."

As I said, I like to write stories like this because you can see that we have great sportsmen in Marin County and I know you will join me in wishing Ted Cain continued success.

TWENTY-NINE years old???? Where's my rocking chair?

THAT RUMOR going around that Craig Murray of San Rafael, president of Sears Point International Raceway until its collapse last year, is attempting to reopen the Southern Sonoma County auto speedway is true.

Murray confirmed the rumor yesterday by telling me that he has been in contact with Filmways, Inc., owner of the facility, and is continuing enthusiastic negotiations with the Los Angeles-based corporation.

A's Dobson Admits Taking 'Greenies'

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) —Chuck Dobson of the Oakland A's says he has taken "greenies . . . and Idon't see anything wrong with it.

"I had to pitch last year with the flu, so I took a greenie and pitched a shutout," he said in a training camp interview Tuesday.

Dobson said the pills, used to control appetite and emotional stress, had been around at least since he broke into professional baseball six years ago.

But Athletics trainer Joe Romo said he never gave out the pills on orders of the team doctor and owner Charlie Finley.

"There's no one on this team who depends on them," said Dobson. "That's what you've got to watch."

"You can't let them be a crutch. You're in trouble if you say 'I need them.' "

"Sometimes it make you feel like you have more stuff than you really do."

LaFerriere Scores 43, But San Rafael Triumphs

Giant Dana LaFerriere of Novato's San Marin High School poured in a Marin County Athletic League record 43 points last night, but the amazing San Rafael High School Bulldogs rose to knock off the Mustangs, 79-75 in an MCAL basketball game at San Rafael.

LaFerriere, a 6-foot-9 senior who last year led all MCAL scorers with a 21-point per game average, continued his drive toward a second straight title as he boomed in 15 field goals and 13 free throws, to eclipse by four the record established last year by Ken Gommeringer of Tamalpais. LaFerriere began the game second in scoring behind Will Garner of Tam, but the latter got only nine points against Redwood, so the San Marin star moves into the lead with one game left to play.

What was surprising was San Rafael's offense, which has been rather anemic this season. Up until last night, in fact, the Bulldogs' best point effort had come in a 79-57 loss to San Marin in the first round robin.

Wayne Lechner came up with with his best effort of the season — 24 points on 11 baskets and two free throws — to pace the victory, San Rafael's fourth in 13 games. And he got ample support from three other Bulldogs in double figures; Jim Thorne had 15 points, and Jerry Molinari and Brad Wright collected 10 each.

From beginning to end the game was a free for all that saw San Rafael leading by eight at halftime and by five at the end of three quarters. That third quarter was particularly hectic, as a total of 47 points were scored by both teams.

For San Marin, the whole show was LaFerriere. The closest Mustang to him in scoring was Brad O'Riley with nine points. The loss was the Novato team's eighth of the MCAL campaign against five wins.

Warriors Play Tough, But Not Tough Enough

The Bucks took their 12th victory in a row Tuesday night with a 118-107 defeat of the Warriors, who play Detroit tonight.

The Bucks have taken the Warriors nine times out of nine this season as part of their overall 56-11 record. And the Warriors will have to open against Milwaukee should they make the NBA playoffs.

In Tuesday's game, Milwaukee appeared to have things wrapped up 69-53 early in the third period when Nate Thurmond hit three quick buckets and Nick Jones made a three-point play to make it interesting.

That was the last Warrior burst as Milwaukee led 84-79 after three stanzas and the Warriors never came back.

Jones and Thurmond had 31 and 24 for the Warriors and Oscar Robertson and Lew Alcindor hooped 26 and 25 for Milwaukee.

Taste Of Honey For Redwood's Champion Cagers

By DAVID EINSTEIN

As victory is sweet, the Redwood High School Giants tasted pure honey last night.

Before 2,000 fans in their gym at Larkspur, they won their 40th consecutive Marin County Athletic League basketball game under coach Dick Hart, and their third straight league championship as they turned back arch rival Tamalpais High of Mill Valley, 40-38.

Big Steve McGee singlehandedly erased a six point Tam lead late in the third quarter, and junior forward Dave Tikker sank three straight baskets early in the final period to vault the Giants past the only team that had a chance to catch them in the league standings. With only one game left in the season, Redwood is 13-0, the Indians 10-3.

With the MCAL crown goes an automatic berth in the Tournament of Champions next month in Oakland, and although no Marin team has ever won that prestigous event, Redwood has to be given a good chance — overall they are 19-5 this season, and currently are ranked seventh among all high school teams in the Bay Area.

Last night marked the second time this year the Giants have beaten Tam, but this one came much harder. At no time did the champions lead by more than five, and with 33 seconds to go, Tam's John Earl Huff made good on a diving layup to produce the final margin.

The ultimate winning points came 12 seconds earlier, when McGee went up over Will Garner for a layup. The play was,

Marin Tars Host No. 1 DeAnza Tonight

When the College of Marin Tars faced De Anza Junior College last month in Cupertino, they lost by two points. And as they prepare to face the Dons tonight in Kentfield, Marin coach John Panagakis says, "Those two points look awful big right now."

The reason for his point of philosophy is plain to see. With only tonight's and Saturday night's games left in the regular season, the Tars trail De Anza by two games in the Camino Norte Conference. So, regardless of the outcome tonight, the Dons have but to beat last place Solano in their finale to clinch the title.

That fact doesn't diminish Marin's will to beat the league leaders, but it doesn't do much for the morale either. The Tars have come a long way, winning 24 of 28 games this season, to finish second. Their league record is 9 - 3, while De Anza is 11 - 1.

At any rate, Panagakis thinks, "it's going to be one heck of a ball game tonight," and judging by the last two games the Tars have played in Kentfield, that's a fair assumption.

In fact, Marin has not lost any of their 15 home games this season. Most recently, they edged Skyline Feb. 6 by a single point on Joe Smith's last second jump shot, and turned back Contra Costa last Wednesday on the final second heroics of Charlie Flynn.

Against De Anza Panagakis will try the same formula that proved successful against Contra Costa - namely an interchanging offense that continually moves center Roosevelt Green from a high to a low post and back again on the left side. This, when it works, accomplishes two things. It gives Green more manueverability than if he is constantly pinned on the baseline at the low post, a freedom he needs to be effective.

And as the 6-foot Green invariably draws the opposing center outside with him, it clears the middle underneath the basket. Ed Herrnberger took advantage of the open space for 23 points in the win over Con Costa.

De Anza, led by 6-foot-6 M Tarabanovic, plays the sa slow down, set up style as M in, with possibly a little mo emphasis on the full court pr as a weapon. In general th rely on their defense more th their offense, although in Ta banovic they have a player eraging 18.3 points per game.

Game time tonight is o'clock.

A Helpful Hint On Navigation

Here's a suggestion for anyone planning a cruise or just a long day trip that requires the frequent consultation of a chart. This hint is particularly useful if the chart is one of the very large ones which needs a seven-foot chart table to be spread out.

Before starting, go over your intended route or track and make a checklist of all the buoys and markers by type and number, and all the landmarks and hazards you will pass.

A list of this kind is very easy to manage. Also, it eliminates the danger of studying the chart for long periods of time since you can read it and still keep your eyes on the water ahead. By glancing at the checklist the skipper can see immediately what he has to look for next as he moves along.

Naturally, the chart will be carried along as well just in case more complete information is needed at some particular point.

Cruising has its own set of problems as many of the questions we get indicate:

Q. I'm planning a canal trip through several locks. Anything I should know?

A. Most lock walls are pretty rough, and if you scrape them, you can damage your boat. Take lots of fenders and bumpers of good quality and great strength. Also, throw in an extra boat hook and two or three lengths of mooring line. When you need them, you need them badly.

Q. I am about to retire, I would like to cruise the Pacific Northwest and the Gulf. Where can I rent or charter boats? Is there a list of charter and rental organizations?

A. The best list I know is in Boat Owners Buyers Guide, 50 West 44th Street, New York, N.Y. 10036. It costs $1.95. One word of advice. . .when renting be sure you have a complete and perfect understanding — on paper — with the charterer or lessor.

Q. I like to take along a shotgun to practice trapshooting with claybirds. I'm told I could get into trouble in some places. Is this so?

A. Lawyers assure me that as long as a gun (shotgun or rifle) is cased, taken down or obviously just being stored, you can take it almost anywhere. However before you take a gun out, and load it, ask some resident if there are local laws or hunting regulations that might apply. I ran into trouble myself this way once. . .I had a shotgun in a bird sanctuary that I didn't even know existed.

Q. How about insurance if I cruise to the Bahamas, Mexico and the Caribbean?

A. Check with your insurance agent or broker before you go, of course. Generally speaking, your present insurance will cover you — with only minor adjustments — in the once-British or still-British islands of Bermuda, the Bahamas and Caribbean, as well as the French, Dutch and U.S. islands there. However, in Mexico you had better buy new insurance from a Mexican company.

Q. How much does it cost to maintain a cruising type power boat?

A. I would say that depending on where one lives the cost of "owning" a cruiser runs between $35 and $60 per foot per year. I live in a high cost area and several cruising families I know budget for the higher figure. If there is anything left over at the end of the season, which is seldom, they put it in the sock towards a bigger boat.

Q. We're taking a couple we've known only a short time on a week's cruise.....?

A. When they first come aboard be very businesslike and firm and show them where to stow their belongings. Point out that on a boat there must be a place for everything, and everything must be in its place. If trouble strikes, there's no time to put something away or look for whatever you need. Iccidentally, going for a week with strangers is not a good idea. Take them for a day first. If they are messy people you will discover quickly that they won't take the same care of your boat as you do.

Trojans Wallop Novato

Joe Casteel, as exciting a basketball player as you're likely to find in the Marin County Athletic League, scored a career high 35 points last night to help the Terra Linda High School Trojans bury the Novato High Hornets, 70-53 in Novato.

The Trojans led all the way in winning their seventh of 13 league games this season. The victory assured them of a third place finish; with one game to go, they can neither rise nor fall in the league standings. For Novato, the loss kept them in fourth place with a 5-8 record.

Casteel, whose razzle dazzle style of play gained him 25 points last Friday night, displayed even less caution last night in sinking 12 field goals an 11 free throws. And he could have had more, but he missed on seven attempts from the free throw line.

The senior forward's performance, which will without doubt move him up from the No. 6 spot he holds among the league's scoring leaders, overshadowed a 20-point effort by the MCAL's third leading scorer, Joe DeMaestri. The Novato guard, who scored 34 points last Friday night, was devastating on the free throw line, where he collected 10 of his points.

Marin Catholic Too Much For Drake '5'

The Marin Catholic High School Wildcats, behind a magnificent all-around effort by forward Tim Stone, broke a five-game losing streak last night by defeating the Drake High School Pirates, 60-40 in Kentfield.

As a result of the contest both teams, along with San Rafael, share last place in the Marin County Athletic League basketball standings with identical 4-9 records.

Stone, a junior, netted 27 points and ripped off 25 rebounds to lead the Wildcats to their first victory since Jan. 29, when they beat Terra Linda. Twelve of Stone's points came in the last quarter, but that was just so much icing on the cake. By that time Marin was comfortably in command, having preserved a 15 point halftime lead throughout the third quarter.

In order to be fair to the Pirates, it must be considered that they were coming off a tough loss to undefeated Redwood. They simply had nothing left for this one, and they got mauled. Bob Gregg had a decent night with 14 points to lead the San Anselmo team, but none of his teammates hit double figures.

Stone had plenty of help, as Marin, an up-and-down team all year, was definitely "up." Bill Donellan, the league's fifth leading scorer, got 11 points, and Jim Sullivan added 10. But Stone was the deciding factor; he accounted for his points with 13 field goals and a single free throw. Most of his baskets came from the middle distance range of about 15 feet.

in a sense, a capsule summary of the game, as it saw the Giants' 6-foot-6 center, who embodies more than anyone else his team's undeniable will to win, challenge the awesome Garner and come out ahead. The points were McGee's ninth and 10th of the second half; he led all scorers with 11.

Tikker, a reserve forward bothered early in the year by a problem ankle, came off the bench in the opening minutes of the fourth quarter and put Redwood ahead to stay with his first basket. After breaking a 31-all tie, he came back with two more layups that virtually decided the outcome.

In the first half the game was a dead even contest, with the lead changing hands eight times. Yet Redwood took the game to Tam, and it was only the superior defensive work of Garner that kept the Giants from breaking things open. He blocked five shots — did not allow a cheap layup, and kept McGee under control.

For Redwood, the key man in the first half was its leading scorer on the year, 6-foot-6 forward Scott Trobbe. The Indians succeeded in nullifying his threat, but it took two men, Lee Eaton and Steve Miles, to do the job, and they each picked up three first half fouls in the process. Trobbe, who finished behind McGee with eight points, went to the free throw line six times before intermission, and came away with five charity points.

Huff led the Indians with 10 points, followed by Garner with nine and Eaton with eight.

PGA TOURNAMENT UNDER WAY

Stockton Insists He's Not Favorite

By JOHN G. GRIFFIN
UPI Sports Editor

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (UPI)—Defending champion Dave Stockton, "tired" and suffering from low blood pressure, insisted today he shouldn't be the favorite in the PGA golf championship opening here on Thursday.

"Just because I won the PGA six months ago in Tulsa, Oklahoma, doesn't mean I should be favored to win the PGA this week in Florida," said the dark-haired, 30-year-old champ from Westlake, Calif.

"Some fellow who has actually won over this particular course would be a bettter choice," he added, but then admitted that he believes he does "have a chance" because he has been playing well recently despite not feeling very well.

"I'm just tired and run down," he explained. "I've been trying to do too much —running all over the country doing a lot of things that were business but weren't really golf. I got them done, but I darn near killed myself doing it.

"As far as I'm concerned," he said with a grin, "I'm ready to tell Arnie Palmer that he can have all this chasing around in airplanes, going here and there.

"I was in New York City last week," he went on, "and when I got home to California on Wednesday I was feeling punk. So on Saturday I went to the doctor. He took my blood pressure and then took it again because he didn't believe it. I always have low blood pressure, anyway, but this time it was 70.

"Heck, my doctor said he's got cardiac cases that have better blood pressure than that. He told me I should rest four or five days, but I told him I couldn't because I had to come here this week. He laughed and gave me some shots, and I took one day off with my family, and then came here, I'm feeling quite a bit better now."

Stockton, who won by two strokes in Tulsa, said the par 36-36—72 East course of the PGA National Country Club, where the tournament will be held, could be the kind of course on which he plays well.

"It's fairly narrow, and one of the strong points of my game has been keeping the ball in play," he said. "At Tulsa I was the only player in the field who finished the tournament under par. And right now, if you offered me, I'd accept an even-par score here, and I don't think there'd be very many, if anybody, beat me."

Like Palmer, Stockton also was concerned about the gusty breezes here.

"It's going to be blowing for sure," he said. "It seems to be a rule, though, that the wind blows in a different direction for practice rounds than it do for the tournament. Tuesday hit a 7-iron to one green a thought that with the wi coming from the opposi direction I'd be lucky to rea it with a 2-iron.".

Stockton's reign could be t shortest in PGA history if loses here, because the PG was the last of the "Big Three U.S. tournaments to be playe in 1970 and is the first th year. But history is on his si —the last time there was on six months between tou naments, Denny Shute succes fully defended the crown 1936.

Stockton and Palmer were n among the pros who compete in last weekend's Tucson Ope and were forced to fly her after a rain-dalayed 36-ho windup on Monday. The Tucso players straggled into We Palm Beach via a charter plan and reached their hotel at 4:3 a.m. Tuesday.

JACK HANLEY

No Secrets, Just Some Hard Work

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. — Charlie Fox flipped through the pages of a Press-Radio-TV Guide compiled by the publicity office of the Giants. The front cover bore an artist's sketch of Fox with the legend, "The Year of the Fox."

"I WISH I did have some secret up my sleeve," said Fox as 1971 spring training for his 35-man squad got under way. "The only secret I know to success is work."

But what about the slogan attributed to him in the biographical sketch of the manager on Page 6 of the Press Guide? "Fun in '71," said the slogan.

"I did say something about fun when they asked me for a quote," said Fox. "However, it's only fun in baseball when you win."

FOX THEN patted a loose leaf folder he was carrying. "This," he said, "will be my guide for the next six weeks. It took me a good part of the winter to prepare it. You know, this is the first time I've been in charge of a major league spring training operation. So I prepared my own manual."

Fox, of course, has been a member of spring training staffs many times previously. But this is the first time he's been boss. He didn't become manager of the Giants last year until the season was six weeks under way and his predecessor, Clyde King, was fired.

"I COULD have trusted my memory on day-to-day training schedules," said Fox. "If I had, sure as shooting, I'd forget something."

There isn't anything startling in the Fox manual on how a spring training camp should be operated. There are the usual references to "cover first base" drills by pitchers, "relay-cut-off" drills by outfielders and infielders, and similar routines dealing with baseball basics.

EVEN THE NEW defense alignment of the Giant infield, with the shortstop and second baseman playing closer to the bag while the third baseman moves off the line closer to the shortstop hole, is not startling. Other teams have featured such defenses long before this. The Giants, under Fox, are just getting around to it in an effort to improve double play production.

"I said a couple of weeks ago when I met with the press in Candlestick Park that we wouldn't guard the third base line this year," said Fox. "That goes even for the ninth inning."

FOX ALSO said during the Candlestick press conference that the Giants could win the pennant if they cemented their DP combo and if they came up with reasonably reliable No. 3 and No. 4 pitchers behind the team aces, Gaylord Perry and Juan Marichal.

Would he care to make a fearless and unqualified pennant prediction now?

"I'm on a tough enough vot as it is," said Fox. "Remember, this is my first spring training as the boss."

Giants' Veteran Brannick Retires From Baseball

It's the first day of his official retirement from the game he was a part of for 65 years—longer than any living person.

Brannick, who will be 78 in July, joined the New York Giants as ball boy to manager John McGraw and office boy to owner John T. Brush in 1906 and remained with the club until Tuesday, when he informed current owner Horace Stoneham of his desire to retire as club secretary.

Brannick has decided to live his retirement years in Palm Beach, Fla., a town he "fell in love" with many years ago while storming through Florida in spring training.

No Agreement Yet By Mays, Stoneham

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. (UPI) —Willie Mays usually signs his contract early and without protest—but not this season.

The soon-to-be-40 centerfielder of the San Francisco Giants is already two days late reporting and negotiations between boss Horace Stoneham and the Giants' superstar reportedly have broken down.

One big logjam to settlement is Herman Franks, the ex-Giants manager who lives in Salt Lake City and acts as Mays' business agent. He plans to fly here in a few days.

Mays made a reported $135,000 last year and reportedly wants a $20,000 hike and a multi-year contract.

Mays, who will enter his 19th major league season, hit .291 last year with 28 homers and 83 runs batted in.

Meanwhile, the club planned a morning workout today, with three other unsigned Giants included—catcher Dick Dietz, outfielder Bobby Bonds and infielder Tito Fuentes.

New Seal Tom Williams In Lineup For Tonight

OAKLAND (UPI)—Newly acquired Tom Williams will be in the lineup tonight when the California Golden Seals host Montreal.

The Seals traded for the future Tuesday when they swapped popular team captain Ted Hampson, 34, to Minnesota for the 30-year-old Williams.

Each had scored 10 goals while Hampson led in assists 20-13. But Williams, one of the few American-born players in the game, has played in 19 fewer games.

Williams had recently been suspended by North Star coach Jack Gordon for insubordination. Seals coach Fred Glover said Williams can either play wing or center.

Hampson, expected to play for Minnesota against Los Angeles tonight, led the Seals in scoring the past two seasons with 75 and 52 points. He was the team's Most Valuable Player and winner of the Bill Masterson Memorial Trophy two seasons ago.

"I was reluctant to give up Teddy," Glover said Tuesday. "But they wanted him and I feel both sides will benefit."

"Teddy was shocked," the coach said, "but he took it properly, like the class guy he is. There are few guys around with his attitude."

Hampson said later he wasn't surprised, since the club has been going badly and trades are usually the result.

"I'm not unhappy about where I'm going, but I'm sad about leaving here."

Williams has scoring ability, as shown by the 23 goals in Boston in 1962-63 before the expansion and his 18 goals and 32 assists for the Bruins in 1967-68.

The bout will be staged as part of a dinner program with matchmaker Joe Kellman scheduled to arrange a pair of five-round preliminary bouts.

Frazier Still The Favorite

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Las Vegas oddsmakers stuck to their guns Tuesday by quoting Joe Frazier a 7-5 favorite in man-to-man betting over Muhammad Ali in their heavyweight title bout March 8 in Madison Square Garden.

Bettors who like Frazier must put up three to win two. Ali backers are being offered 13 for 10.

Action on the local books were light through Tuesday with the odds remaining the same as when they were posted last Dec. 30.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

A Popular Song Supplies Very Poor Guide For Play

Many years ago, when I was still in school, I used to sing a popular song of the day, "The Best Things In Life Are Free," to my girlfriends. It didn't do me much good then, and my experience at the bridge table has reinforced that lesson. If I had any talent for songwriting, I would use this title: "Things Things That Look Free Are Usually Expensive, Tra-La."

"FREE" FINESSE

West led the five of spades, and South was delighted to take the "free" finesse with dummy's jack. If this held the trick, well and good. If it didn't, South assured himself, he could still win the trick with his own ace.

The spade finesse was so free that it cost South the game and rubber. East covered the jack with the queen of spades, and South won with the ace. Declarer led the queen of clubs for a finesse, and East won with the king. East promptly returned the ten of spades.

Declarer saw the handwriting on the wall but tried to recover by refusing the second round of spades. He took the next spade with dummy's king, ran the clubs and then tried for a heart trick.

NO MERCY

East had no mercy on declarer. As soon as hearts were led, East stepped in with the ace of hearts and defeated the contract with the rest of the spades.

As we have seen, the spade finesse was very expensive. South makes his contract if he resists the temptation to play dummy's jack of spades at the first trick.

LOW SPADE

South should play dummy's low spade at the first trick, winning in his hand with the ace. When declarer next loses the club finesse, East cannot afford to lead spades up to dummy's king-jack. East must shift to a diamond.

South wins with the king of diamonds, runs the clubs and leads the king of hearts to force out the ace. He is sure of 10 tricks and scores 630 points instead of minus 100 points.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - Q 10 9 8 7

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade.

You have 11 points in high cards and one point for the doubleton, just enough for an optional opening bid. You choose to bid rather than pass because of the exceptionally good spot cards in spades. (Some conservative experts would pass this borderline hand.)

Three School Bands To Play At Dance

Big bands from Terra Linda, Novato and San Rafael high schools will perform at a Bacchanal dance from 8 to 11:30 p.m. Saturday at San Rafael High School gymnasium.

There will be dance contests featuring jitterbug, latin and hard-rock dancing. The event is sponsored by the Band-Orchestra-Choir Association of San Rafael, and proceeds will go toward purchasing a sound system for the music department.

ALMANAC

Today is Wednesday, Feb. 24, the 55th day of 1971.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Pisces.

On this day in history:

In 1920 a group of Germans organized the National Socialist party, a forerunner of the Nazi party.

In 1922 Henri Iandru, best known to the world as "Bluebeard," was executed in Versailles, France, for murdering 10 of his 13 sweethearts.

In 1945 American troops liberated Manila from the Japanese.

In 1966 President Nnkrumah of Ghana was ousted from office.

A thought for today: French writer Pierre Corneille said, "He who allows himself to be insulted deserves to be."

The Internal Revenue Code allows individuals to take a deduction for ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred (1) for the production and collection of income; (2) for the management, conservation or maintenance of property held for the production of income; or (3) in connection with the determination, collection or refund of any tax.

The expenses of commuting between your residence and any business location situated within the area of your tax home are not deductible, regardless of distance, or different locations on different days.

If you haul tools, etc., in your car in commuting to and from your place of business for your convenience, the cost of operating the car is nondeductible. However, if you cannot store the tools, etc., at the place you work, or if you work at different locations every day, and also you would not have used your car except for hauling tools, etc., which are too bulky or heavy to be carried otherwise, the expense may be deductible.

Work clothes and uniforms are deductible if your occupation is one which specifically requires special apparel or equipment as a condition of employment and it is not adaptable to general or continued usage so as to take the place of ordinary clothing. Deductible work clothes include the cost of special apparel and equipment required in the occupations of transportation workers, actors, ballplayers, firemen, police officers, letter carriers, nurses and civilian faculty members of a military school.

If you are a reservist in the Armed Forces, you may deduct, to the extent not reimbursed, the cost of your uniform if it may legally be worn only while performing duties as a reservist. In computing the deduction, the cost must be reudced by any non-taxable allowance you receive on account of such expenses. If you are on full-time duty in the Armed Forces, the cost of your uniform is not deductible.

School teachers: Amounts which you pay for a substitute teacher to take your place are deductible. However, you are not entitled to this deduction to the extent that it is allocable to amounts excluded as sick pay.

Prices Firm In Brisk Day On Exchange

NEW YORK (UPI)—Prices were strong through the second hour on Wall Street Wednesday. Turnover was fairly heavy.

Some analysts said the market continued to benefit from aggressive buying by institutions convinced better times are ahead for the economy. Others noted that President Nixon's mild stand against the inflationary spiral in the construction industry also helped spur demand for stocks.

Shortly before noon, the Dow Jones industrial average was ahead more than 6 1-2 points at 876.71. Advances led declines, 952 to 282.

Prices also gained in heavy turnover on the American Stock Exchange. Of the 981 issues on the tape, 623 pointed higher, while 156 retreated.

On the Big Board, IBM gained 2 3-4, Burroughs 3 3-8, Atlantic Richfield 3 3-4, and Walt Disney 2 3-8.

Up a point or more were Du Pont, United Aircraft, Flying Tiger, Honeywell, Fairchild Camera, American Research & Development, and Wrigley Co.

Motors were fractionally higher, while steels traded in narrowly irregular fashion.

3 Affiliated Insurance Firms Take Offices At Holiday Plaza

Now installed in their new offices in the Holiday Plaza Office Building, 1050 Northgate Drive, Terra Linda are three affiliated companies — Automobile Mutual Insurance Co. of America, Factory Mutual Liability Insurance Co. of America and AMICA Life Insurance Co.

They take up the entire west wing of the fifth floor with slightly more than 4,000 square feet, leased last September through Grubb and Ellis Co. The group has its headquarters in Providence, R.I. and this office represents an enlargement and removal from the Russ Building in San Francisco, where it was located for many years. Factory Mutual Liability, by the way, is entirely unrelated to Factory Mutual Fire Insurance Co., another company which has an office on Gallinas Avenue, not far from here.

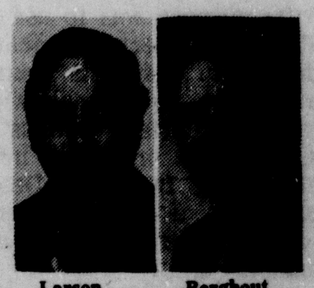
Automobile Mutual is reported to be the first company in the United States to have written a policy on an automobile - so its operations go back for a considerable period.

Heading the Terra Linda staff is Rodger Broomhead, resident vice president, who lives in Ross. Earl Kroehler, a vice president and district claims manager is a resident of San Rafael. Altogether the offices are staffed by eight men and 12 women, some of whom are moving to Marin or already own property in the county.

THE INDEPENDENT DRUG STORE has a better record for survival than most other independent businesses, but is still being threatened by skidding net profits caused by intense competition and higher operating costs, according to the Bank of America.

The bank's last issue of its Small Business Reporter deals with many of the independent drug store's problems and gives suggestions for its success. Single copies of the report are available through any of the bank's branches or by writing Small Business Reporter, Department 3120, Bank of America, San Francisco 94120.

DENNISON L. LARSON of Novato has been named a vice president of Ross Medical Corp. He has had 17 years experience in the medical facility field and since last year has been administrator of the Broadway Hospital in Vallejo, one of the institutions owned by Ross Medical.



Larson Berghout

J.M. BERGHOUT of Novato has been promoted to superintendent of American Mail Line in Portland and will transfer to that office on March 1. A Marin resident for about 10 years, he has been district operations manger in San Francisco since 1966. Previously he was with General Steamship Corp. for nine years. He and his wife are natives of the The Netherlands and have been citizens of this country since 1962.

STATE FARM INSURANCE COMPANIES agents Albert S. Re and Colin G. Hill have moved their offices to 1554 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael. Re was formerly at 1314 Second Street. Hill was previously at 1380 Lincoln Avenue.

REAL ESTATE: Alice Woodson is now with the Frank Howard Allen and Co. Tiburon office . . . There has been no change in the state requirements to obtain a real estate salesman's license, which are identical to what they have been for years. Some confusion exists, says the Anthony School of Real Estate, because of additional requirements for a real estate broker's license.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Alberto-Culver's Push In Marketing

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Many people are saying that consumer-oriented stocks are among the best groups for 1971. I've been thinking about investing in Alberto-Culver. Please advise. — L.P.

A. Due to an aggressive advertising effort and new product introductions, Alberto-Culver's growth has continued uninterrupted since 1966. Even amidst a generally sluggish economy, Alberto managed to ring up substantial gains for 1970, with a 19 per cent advance in per share profits and a 10.1 per cent increase in sales.

Company also reported improved results for the first quarter of 1971, ended December. Sales and earnings were up 7.7 per cent and 12 per cent, respectively. Aiding recent results was the success of such new items as Born Free shampoo and Shimmy Shins creme depilatory plus continued strong growth for the FDS feminine hygiene line, Milani Foods and international operations.

Alberto's proved marketing expertise and the prospect of further expansion of the product line lend long-range appeal to shares.

Q. I bought shares in Ivy Fund as a small investment. Should I hold and increase my shares, or sell? My wife and I are retired but do not need the money now. Would you assess this fund? — L.G.

A. Ivy Fund is best suited for investors who can afford to take above-average risks. Overall, the fund's portfolio is speculative. For the most part, Ivy specializes in small, young growth companies, large numbers of which are over-the-counter or traded on the American Stock Exchange.

While many of these issues are still lagging behind the general market, Street interest is definitely accelerating in these secondary situations — a potential plus for Ivy.

Although results for the past two years have been rather disappointing, Ivy has compiled one of the best five-year records in the mutual fund field. Fund's net asset value climbed 142 per cent in the 1965-1969 period. Retain present holdings for recovery. Use new money for diversification of your portfolio.

Banker Predicts Inflation Stop

LONDON (UPI) — A top U.S. banker says he is optimistic that the United States would be able to put a cap on inflation.

"We have won a couple of battles but this does not mean we have won the war," Richard D. Hill, president of the First National Bank of Boston, told a luncheon group. "Setbacks are always possible."

He said he had noted slowdowns in price increases and unit costs.

The Code Words Were 'Hatefulness Hatefulness'

The foulup which sent a false "national emergency" alert to all radio stations last Saturday — but did not cause all of them to leave the air as they were supposed to do according to the script — tells us a few things about both the state of national preparedness ,and the degree of national sanity.

What it tells us is not reassuring.

BACK IN THE DAYS when the Berlin Wall was new and Cold War tensions were high, when frightened Americans were building bomb shelters in their back yards and winding country roads were being marked as "escape routes" in case of an attack, the assorted "preparedness" plans included what was then called Conelrad.

Its purpose was to use the radio stations to alert Americans immediately in case this country were attacked — presumably with atomic missiles. Certain stations were designated to broadcast instructions emanating from the Defense Department, if an alert were broadcast. The rest were to get off the air and stay off.

To keep the stations on their toes, the Defense Department from time to time sent out a "practice alert." But to prevent panic, it was carefully labeled as such.

THE COLD WAR did not heat up. People quit building bomb shelters. Some reality returned to the national thinking. But Conelrad, renamed Emergency Alert Network, remained in being. And the "practice alert" became scheduled as exactly as any other radio program: every Saturday at 6:30 a.m.

Every Saturday, a Civil Service employee in a cave in Colorado would lift a piece of punched tape off a hook and feed it into a transmitter connected with Associated Press and United Press International radio news networks. It would send the practice alert message.

At the radio stations, the men handling the news wires of course became accustomed to this. As they tore off the teletype copy, they would just cut off the "practice alert" message and discard it.

THAT'S WHAT a lot of them did last Saturday. Only this time it was not a practice alert. It was the real attack message.

Nobody had attacked. The President had not ordered the real message sent. That man in the cave in Colorado just picked up the wrong tape.

It is fortunate it didn't. There would have been panic to make Orson Welles' famous invasion from Mars broadcast alarm look like a tired yawn if it had.

THE FOULUP SHOWS pretty plainly that a planned "alert" is not to be depended upon. It also gives chilling evidence of what might happen if some other Civil Service employee, in the Pentagon, for instance, should feed in the wrong tape or push the wrong button some time, causing missile bases around the nation to start filling the air with atomic warheads.

The Orwellian unreality of the whole approach — and the state of national sanity that brought it into being — is epitomized by the code words used to identify the "real" alert. They were: "Hatefulness Hatefulness."

Strange Inconsistency

San Francisco Local 21, International Typographical Union, won San Francisco Labor Council backing recently to seek an investigation by the legislature of the local's strike against the Independent-Journal. Obedient to the labor council's wishes, Assemblyman John L. Burton, D-San Francisco, introduced a resolution calling for such an investigation.

Last week, it was disclosed that a special federal grand jury is starting an investigation of the strike. This came to light when an attorney for the ITU local attempted to quash subpoenas issued for some of its members.

Why does the ITU advocate an investigation by the legislature but oppose an investigation by a grand jury?

Sales Tax On Gasoline Might Answer Transit Needs

By JACK COOPER

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Assemblyman Wadie Deddeh, the San Diego Democrat from Bagdad, may have a winner in his bill to pour a little state money into local public transportation.

Deddeh, this semester's chairman of the Assembly Trnasportation Committee, has introduced a bill to wipe out the sales tax exemption on gasoline and use the proceeds, about $150 million a year, to shore up city, county and district operated transit systems.

A specific exception is San Francisco's BART, whose electric train system was born of a bond issue and is nourished by an extra half-cent general sales tax in the three counties of the district.

Deddeh's bill, AB 544, would let the local agencies tap the fund for up to half the operating costs of their systems, and this is a big thing because nobody can remember when farebox revenues have paid for local transit operations on any but a few choice lines.

Removing the sales tax exemption would result in an added cost of about a cent and a half for a gallon of gas, and in this column's opinion, that isn't too much to pay to give a lift to those who need one.

Deddeh's scheme has the advantage that it would support public transportation, buses in most cases, without cutting into funds for city streets, county roads and state highways.

It has the funds managed by the secretary of the state Transportation and Business Agency and keeps the purse strings in the hands of the Legislature, making the whole project a statewide concern.

The governor wouldn't even have to look on it as a new tax. The sales tax is old hat in California, and Deddeh's bill simply closes up one of the many loopholes in its application, you might say.

Hunt Clubs Have Control Purpose

In answer to Ian K. McDougall on his negative response to hunt clubs:

I wonder if he puts out a mouse trap. If he didn't the mice would chew the shoes off his feet.

The deer, rabbits, cougars, etc. have a controlled hunting reason. Only a specified kill to balance their existence.

If we listen to him he would close all the butcher shops. No beef steaks and I like them.

Death Penalty For The Guiltless?

I was very upset with the story which you printed after the abortion symposium at Dominican College on Feb. 9. The story that appeared was not reporting — it should have been on the editorial page. I couldn't believe that I had been at the meeting.

It was obvious from the story that the reporter was remiss for not staying for the second half of the program.

Rev. Charles Carroll emphasized the tragedy that is occurring when today's society isn't concerned with the taking of life.

Dr. (Ronald) Connelly strongly pointed out that the embryo is a human being — in that it has the potential for rational thought, and the potential for growth from within.

Dr. John Noonan gave a resume of the position the law has had in regard to the fetus —and it has since the 1st century recognized the wrong in abortion. Dr. Noon also asked the question why abortion is popular today? He saw it as the desire for freedom —particularly sexual freedom —pregnancy as a deterrent to this sexual freedom. He saw it also as a desire for order — desire for a plan —part of the plan for population control.

These are the selfish reasons people have when outwardly they say they are concerned for the theoretical case of incest, rare case of rape and the defective child. Planning cannot include the taking of life. It is strange that we can be so concerned with the taking of life in the death chair but show little concern for the life that has done no one harm.

May all people show love and concern for all human life.

Students' Sense Of Values Right

This letter is with reference to Mr. J. Nelson King's letter on the reasoning power and sense of values of Redwood High School students who would rank comedians and draft evaders near the top of the list of men they most admire and the President and vice president at the bottom. . .

First, I would like to stress I am a grandmother and I do not have any member of my family attending Redwood High School, so my opinion of the choice these kids made is completely impersonal. I not only admire their integrity and honesty in picking a draft evader since almost all of them think the war is wrong. I admire their common sense in picking a comedian who encourages them to laugh at the absolutely tragic aspect of their future, so that they don't go insane at the thought of what they are likely to take on in adulthood because of this President and vice president Mr. King is so incensed about their not admiring.

No matter what the President says about his motives for doing this, the fact staring these kids in the face is that we have expanded this war into two other countries and it certainly does not look like these kids and/or their friends are going to be sitting safely at home living the life they want to live as Mr. J. Nelson King is doing. . .

In my opinion these kids show a great deal more sense of values and reasoning power than Mr. King.

Make Plans Now For Next Oil Spill

In the aftermath of the recent San Francisco Bay oil spill, as participants in the bird-washing operation at the Audubon Sanctuary on Richardson Bay, we feel that the high mortality rate of the birds was partly a result of lack of knowledge and coordination in the efforts of the volunteers. As future spills seem inevitable, it is imperative that guidelines be formulated now for the next emergency.

First, we believe that in the future, supervision of rescue and care of all oil-soaked birds should be authorized by one organization such as the Audubon Society. Ideally, such an organization would conduct periodic bird-care classes for members and maintain an up-to-date list of trained volunteers who could be called upon in an emergency. . .

Second, to achieve this goal, a follow-up study needs to be done to determine which of the various cleaning and care techniques used in the San Francisco and other recent oil spills proved to be the most effective . . .

We also would like to suggest that consideration be given to ways of effectively organizing the available manpower at the time of crisis. In this recent experience, many people, in their desire to be helpful, insisted upon staying beyond the point of exhaustion where their services were more detrimental than helpful to the well-being of the birds. This situation was unfortunate as many capable individuals who volunteered to help were turned away.

And so, no matter where another major oil spill occurs, whether it is next week or in the next decade, let us benefit from this tragic experience and be prepared to face the next one more efficiently and effectively.

Langendorf Replies To Ralph Nader

On Feb. 16, your paper reported on a complaint filed by Ralph Nader with the Federal Trade Commission in Washington, D.C.

While Mr. Nader's complaint dealt with a specific brand of bread and his implication of its false nutritional claims, I feel that your vast readership may accept this as a sweeping inditement (sic) of all branded white bread.

Specifically, neither American Bakeries Co. nor its Langendorf Division, have claimed unfounded nutritional benefits for its enriched white bread. In fact, one week before Mr. Nader filed his complaint, American Bakeries Co. embarked on an ambitious program that will result in a significant increase in the nutritional level of every one of its enriched bread and roll items. . .

Since you are in the position of shaping and influencing attitudes, I think it is important that you enlighten your audience that not all branded white bread is sold under a cloud of suspicion. More specifically, some of us are earnestly striving to provide the American consumer with the most nutritious product possible.

Those Who Cry 'Credibility Gap' Should Check Own Credibility

WASHINGTON — The credibility-gap epithet has been hurled so constantly at the Johnson and Nixon administrations that somebody ought to look at the other side of the coin.

What about the epithet-hurlers themselves? What is their record on credibility? Is it so impeccable that their accusations against the President, the secretary of state, the secretary of defense and others should be readily accepted as true, or is it so bad that the public ought to begin to wonder who really are the guilty ones — the accused or the accusers?

Consider this:

THE DRUMBEAT of most of the extreme Senate doves for a long time was that military victory for the United States in Vietnam was impossible, that we were losing the war and couldn't win it.

It is a debatable view, but one which certainly could be honestly defended.

Those who embraced this premise — that we were losing the war and never could win — concluded that the United States ought to get out and get out quick.

But they did not want to try to sell the American people on the proposition they really believed in — that we ought to quit because we couldn't win. And they apparently did not wish to seem to be presiding over the first defeat in war in American history.

SO WHAT DID the get-out-quick advocates propose to tell the American people? They proposed that the President of the United States proclaim that the United States had won the war and that we could then withdraw immediately in a victorious retreat self-proclaimed as a victory!

How is that for a credibility gap? Isn't that intellectually corrupt? Isn't that morally dishonest? What do you think?

Certainly it is credible to argue that the United States was losing the Vietnamese war and wasn't likely to win it militarily.

Certainly it is credible to argue that for any number of reasons the United States should end its combat role in Vietnam.

But it is incredible for these same people to ask the nation to take their word that the United States couldn't win the war and simultaneously urge that the President proclaim we had won it and should therefore withdraw.

These are the people who cry "credibility gap" whenever the President says or does something about Vietnam with which they disagree.

Consider this:

WHEN THE PRESIDENT told the American people that the U.S. ground forces would be out of Cambodia in 60 days, the epithet-hurlers instantly called into play the "credibility ap" accusation. But when U.S. ground forces were withdrawn right on schedule, did the epithet-hurlers find a way to admit their error? They didn't.

When the President told the American people that no U.S. ground troops were being used in the thrust against the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos, the credibility gappers were at it again. They first suggested that the administration was returning to the illusion of winning the war on the battlefield. Pure fabrication.

Next, some correspondents set out to find at least one lone GI who may have strayed across the border by mistake. A photographer claimed that he had "identified" a soldier in Laos in U.S. uniform. It was only a one-day story but it was something on which to hang another credibility gap accusation.

IT IS A FINE tradition of Anglo-Saxon law that litigants can't go into court except with clean hands.

Isn't it time to begin to question the credentials of those who manufacture the biggest credibility gaps in the political market place?

Turkey's Poppy Fields Grow Death For U.S.

By ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — Deaths from misuse of heroin have become so commonplace in our big cities that they get little more attention than traffic accidents. This week a Washington youth was found dead with a syringe hanging from a vein in his arm, and it was worth three paragraphs far inside the newspaper. Routine news.

On the same day, a firing squad executed five men in the city of Rezaieh in northeast Iran for illegally trafficking in heroin. That brought the number put to death for such dealing to nearly 60 since the government there began a crackdown.

BETWEEN THE POPPY fields of the Near East and the dead boy on a doorstep in an American city is a well-primed international pipeline for illegal heroin, out of which smugglers, processers and pushers are tapping millions of tainted dollars every week.

The mood of some in Congress it to shut off the pipeline cold, if necessary by cutting out all American aid to the countries where the deadly drug originates. But the House Select Committee on Crime, in a thorough study of the international traffic, discloses endless and subtle complications, involving the domestic politics and regional traditions of one of our country's firmest allies.

That ally is Turkey, source of about 80 per cent of all the heroin reaching the United States. From there most of it flows through the French port of Marseilles, to be smuggled by air and sea into the trade here.

THE TURKISH government's effort to reduce the illegal traffic has not been nearly so harsh as those in next-door Iran. About 80,000 Turkish farmers make their living from growing poppies, and the government buys a large part of their crop for legal processing into morphine for medical use. Under American pressure, the Turks have cut down the number of provinces in which poppies may be grown legally to only four from a previous 50 and the legal acreage to less than a third of what it was 15 years ago.

Yet in the same period, during the rapid growth of drug abuse in this country, the demand has grown for illicit heroin — and the demand has been met, at great profit to the traffickers-in-death who transport the drug, process it, cut it, package it, and eventually sell it on the street.

The irony is that Turkey itself has no serious heroin addiction problem. Its officials are reluctant to believe American reports of how urgent the problem is here. And they are restricted by other factors from simply wiping out poppy cultivation, which has been a way of life for farmers in some areas there for generations. The political potential of the issue there is clear in the fact that Prime Minister Suleyman Demorel himself comes from the largest opium-producing province in Turkey.

COMBINE THESE facts with the hard geopolitical realities: Turkey has been for years the indispensable southeastern anchor of NATO, controlling the Dardanelles, which are the only direct route for Russian naval movement into the Mediterranean and the Middle East. In addition, there has been increasing anti-American agitation in Turkey and a softening of the long-standing Turkish hatred for the Russians.

Getting tough with the Turks is thus a delicate diplomatic exercise. Every approach was considered by the House committee, and the international steps on its list of 20 recommendations were advocated with this uneasy situation in mind.

They include negotiations toward erasing all opium cultivation everywhere, outlawing importation here of all opium and morphine, U.S. government assistance to crop shifts in opium-producing countries, alterations in existing international conventions controlling drug traffic, and pushing bodies like the United Nations into a more active role.

ASSUMING THE SELECT committee is reconstituted by this Congress, a bill to ban imports into the United States will be introduced this spring. Its main impact would be on Turkey, of course, but it would not point the finger of guilt directly at the Turks.

It is not an immediate solution; it is not being suggested as the only attack on the problem. A strong bill against illegal sale and use of drug paraphernalia in the District of Columbia also is planned, intended as a model for all 50 states.

But the legislators, including the committee chairman, Rep. Claude Pepper, are convinced that attacking the evil at its roots is mandatory, no matter how drastic it may seem in international politics. It is not half so drastic as a dead boy with a syringe stuck in his arm.

THE PEOPLE'S SCHOOLS

IQ Test Scores Trap Public School Pupils

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

This is the story of Priscilla and Lloyd Jones, children of a well-to-do couple in well-to-do California suburban community.

The Jones children attend the public school in their neighborhood (which I shall call La Pereze School for convenience's sake.) Like many California schools, it has a gifted child program. In some schools this is called a more able learners program, or an achievement group program, or some other name. Its purpose is to provide something extra (what the educators call "enrichment") for those pupils who are brighter than most and who — at least in the belief of the educators — are likely to become bored in the ordinary classes.

The State of California provides special funds to underwrite gifted child programs. These funds are allocated on the basis of the number of pupils who qualify by making scores of 130 or higher on Stanford-Benet I.Q. tests,

AT LA PEREZA School, the gifted child program starts in the fourth grade. To qualify for state funds, the school gives a standard I.Q. test to all children in the third grade, then the Stanford-Benet (which is given each child individually) to those who appear likely to score 130 or above.

Lloyd Jones made a sufficiently high score on the test to be placed in the gifted child program the following year. He did not seem to enjoy it particularly, and his parent did not notice any significant improvement in his attitude toward school. However, he remained in the gifted child program in the fifth grade and again in the sixth grade — since the I.Q. test determined this placement and his I.Q. would not be tested again until his sixth year, when a blanket I.Q. test is required by the state.

WHEN LLOYD ENTERED sixth grade, Priscilla entered fourth. Priscilla is much more interested in school than is her brother. Also, she is one of those children who don't want to miss out on anything. So when she saw that some of the children were being given special things to do while the rest studied their language arts or numbers skills, she wanted to be part of the group. She mentioned it to her mother.

Mrs. Jones went to the school and talked with Priscilla's teacher about it. Since Priscilla was so interested, and since she seemed to be doing very well in school, Mrs. Jones wondered whether she might join the special group.

The teacher shook her head. It was impossible, she explained. The group Priscilla had observed was the gifted child group. To qualify for the gifted child program, a pupil must have scored 130 or higher on an I.Q. test in the third grade. The teacher produced her class roster and showed Mrs. Jones that Priscilla's score, written opposite her name, was 114. That was on the standard test given all the pupils; she had not even qualified for the Stanford-Benet.

SO PRISCILLA JONES must not participate in the special program which looks so interesting to her — although it has proved uninteresting to her brother Lloyd.

The I.Q. score that Priscilla made in third grade will follow her until she enters junior high. No matter how hard she works, no matter how well she does in her classwork, no matter how high her grades on her subject examinations, no matter how much interest and enthusiasm she brings to class, Priscilla can never be a gifted child. Her third grade I.Q. score says no.

It is just the opposite with her brother Lloyd. No matter if he cares little about the school, no matter if he is disinterested in the special program or even in his regular classwork, no matter if he makes not the slightest extra effort, Lloyd will always be a gifted child — at least until the seventh grade. His third grade I.Q. score says yes.

THESE SCORES are entered in the record. The record moves with the child from teacher to teacher. Each teacher looks in the book. There is Lloyd, the gifted child. There is Priscilla, the non-gifted child. Their fates are sealed.

La Pereza is an imaginary school. Lloyd and Priscilla Jones are imaginary children. But what happened to Lloyd and Priscilla happens to thousands, perhaps hundreds of thousands, of real California children in real California schools. The odds are that it happens to your children in the school they attend.

Trial Set On Theft Of $20,000

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A 61-year-old former bank employee who lives in Ross will face sentencing in U.S. District Court on March 22, after pleading guilty to a charge of stealing more than $20,000 from the accounts of a San Francisco woman millionaire.

Thomas Michael Murphy of 1 Camino Bueno had been scheduled to go on trial on two embezzlement counts, Monday. Instead, he pleaded guilty to one count and asked that the second count be dismissed.

Murphy, then an assistant cashier at a San Francisco branch of Wells Fargo Bank, was indicted by a federal grand jury last Dec. 9. One count charged him with taking more than $20,000 from the accounts of Norva Boas of San Francisco during 1967. The second count accused Murphy of taking another $6,465 from the savings accounts during 1969.

The federal attorney general's office said Murphy was a veteran of 42 years' service with the bank. He faces a maximum penalty of $5,000 fine and five years in prison, if the judge dismisses the second count.

New Insecticide Invented In Italy

MILAN, Italy (UPI)—An Italian scientist said today he has developed a new weapon against harmful insects—a chemical which stops their growth and prevents them from reproducing instead of killing them.

Prof. Giorgio Ferrari of the Simes Research Laboratory said the new product will cost one-fifth the price of norml insecticides and, unlike DDT, is harmless to humans.

Ferrari said the new product is based on two hormones—Crustecdisone and Makisterone A—which exist in small quantities in insects and governs their growth processes. Their use proper doses checks the growth of insects before they reach reproduction age, thus leading to their extinction, he said.

Concert Time In Afternoon

The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported in Monday's paper that the time for the Bach-to-Mozart Ensemble concert on March 7 in the Stinson Beach Community Center will be at 7:30 p.m.

The concert, like others scheduled for Sundays in March and April, will be at 3:30 p.m.

Lease Agreement Reached On Building

A long-sought agreement for leasing a building used as an art center and belonging to the Lagunitas School District has been approved by the district board.

The lease to the San Geronimo Valley Art Association for an old school building between the district's two schools on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard provides for a rent of $90 a month.

The building does not meet the state's Field Act earthquake resistance standards for schools and was leased last year to the association. Question was raised later over payment of utilities charges.

In granting the lease which includes an amount for utilities used by the association, the board also directed Supt. Joseph Amato to next find out how the district can also lease the center 1,300 square feet of adjoining playground.

According to Amato, once the land is leased to the association, it will in turn sub-lease the land and one art center room to the proposed Valley Family Pre-School Center.

The Lagunitas School District board also:

FOUNDATION — Discussed briefly and then continued to the next meeting, March 8, a proposal for a district foundation to maintain funds for special projects.

SEPTIC TANKS — Directed Amato to find out how the county's proposed septic tank ordinance will affect the district which has two.

CLOSED SESSION — Entered closed session to give instructions to its negotiator in clerical personnel negotiations.

STAFF UTILIZATION — Heard a report on a study in progress on teaching staff utilization for next year.

Burglars Hit Safes At Schools

Burglars hit safes at San Clemente and Neil Cummins schools in Corte Madera Monday night apparently successfully entering one previously damaged by burglars, police reported yesterday.

Officers said the two schools were entered sometime after closing yesterday and 7 a.m. today. They were uncertain whether the school burglaries were connected.

Both schools were entered by prying doors.

At Neil Cummins School, where the safe was damaged but not opened, no loss has been established.

At San Clemente School, camera equipment was taken and the school's previously damaged safe, pried open. What was taken from the safe, if anything, is not known.

Officers said the safe, damaged by burglars in November, had not been replaced but rather sealed in a wooden frame.

Invalid Search Ends Pot Case

No complaint has been filed in Marin Municipal Court against Michael Andrew Nail, 29, of Mill Valley, who was arrested last Tuesday on suspicion of possessing marijuana and destroying evidence.

The district attorney's office reported that a search that revealed suspected marijuana was invalid.

Nail was arrested after he went to the California Highway Patrol office in Corte Madera to clear up a vehicle inspection violation.

'500,000 Jews Would Exit Russ'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Leonid Rigerman, a Jew recently allowed to leave the Soviet Union after proving his U.S. citizenship, says 500,000 Russian Jews would leave the Soviet Union for Israel if given the chance.

He told a news conference Tuesday Jews are afraid to apply to leave the country because of the consequences. Rigerman's parents were U.S. citizens who moved to the Soviet Unicn after they were married in this country.

Tracy Wood, UPI reporter, interviews William T. Bagley, assemblyman from Marin County

What's going on in Sacramento?

It's a new legislature facing new problems and issues which will have a direct effect upon you and your family. Keeping informed is critical to your best interests.

How the I-J lifts the lid of the state Capitol to keep you informed of legislation

You have double representation in Sacramento. First, politically, through your assemblyman and senators. Second, through the large and competent news bureau of United Press International which reports for the I-J and hence for you. At least seven top political reporters sit through legislative sessions, question the legislators, examine the issues and keep you "on top" of legislation and coming events.

As George Skelton, UPI bureau manager, states, "Despite myth, most stories are not developed in dimly lit bars. The good ones, more often than not, are produced by sitting patiently through boring committee hearings or sifting through dull reports, reading small type. This is the unglamorous part of the job, but the one which often results in a big story in your evening newspaper." Comment: read the I-J and be well-represented. Our first job is to keep you informed.
